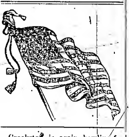
WEDNESDAY, NOV. 13, 1901.



Crookston is again howling for paving, gravel, or any other old thing that will prevent their streets from being muddy. If the city fathers of Crookston would come to St. Hilaire some wet day they could see how nice it is to have their business thoroughfares properly graveled. St. Hilaire is about the best ever when it comes to street and road work.

oooooo

Valley City, N. D., has sprung a sensation in the form of a genuine stage robbery. A hotel bus, on its way to the Soo depot, was held up by five men who relieved all the passengers of their valuables. The robbers secured about $400 in cash besides some watches and jewelry.

oooooo

The Crookston Times suggests that Crookston should get into the game and try to secure the state training school for girls, which is to be located shortly. If Crookston tries real hard it might secure the location—possibly.

oooooo

And now comes Red Lake Falls, following the example of St. Hilaire, with a musical organization which the Crookston Times calls a "brass band". There is lots of musical talent in Red Lake Falls and its people will, without doubt, give a good band first class support.

oooooo

The European nations have been playing a little poker game. France won a nice pot from Turkey last week. The best Turkey held was a pair of American missionaries while France had a battleship full.

oooooo

Smallpox and diphtheria are very prevalent throughout the northern part of the state. St. Hilaire is to congratulated on not having a single case of either disease.

Keeping Vegetables.

Vegetables should never be put into the cellar, as many of them contain acids which will absorb the poison of the ground air, and if eaten will prove very unhealthy, and if allowed to remain will rapidly decompose and fill the air which arises to the upper rooms with a poison that will undoubtedly cause much mischief. Potatoes should not be exposed to the sun, but kept in some dry place where the light and air can always strike them.

Parasites of the Tiger.

In speaking of the minute parasites which are found in the hairy part of a tiger's foot a scientist says: "They constitute one of the most wonderful curiosities I know of in the animal world. The parasites are so small as to be almost invisible to the naked eye, and yet each is a perfect counterpart of the tiger—head, ears, jaw, legs, claws, body, tail, all are there.

A Liquid Glue.

An excellent liquid glue that is very tenacious and almost dampproof can be made by dissolving glue in nitric ether and adding a few pieces of caoutchouc. The solution must be allowed to stand a few days and frequently stirred. As the ether will only dissolve a certain amount of glue there is no danger of getting it too thick.

Meat In Norway.

You don't see fresh meat in Norway any more frequently than in Japan. There is an abundance of ham, bacon and other cured meats and odd things like reindeers' tongues and haunches from polar bears sent down from the arctics, but very little beefsteak, roast beef or mutton.—Chicago Herald.

The etiquette that makes us do an insincere act is an etiquette to be avoided. Honesty of action is the foundation of the finest manners.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Not Anxious to Meet Him.

"Jinks has had a burglar alarm put in his house, with a gong in every room."

"He wants to be sure to know about the burglars?"

"No; he wants the burglar to be sure to be alarmed."—Philadelphia Record.

Some Girls.

Some girls, when asked to elope, are like ice. At first they are cold and repulse you; then they melt and run away.—Whitewater (Kan.) Independent.

Bjoneson—Yes; the rest of the family.

MATTER AND FORCE.

ENERGY CANNOT BE CREATED NOR CAN IT BE DESTROYED.

If Puny Man Could Accomplish Either of These Impossible Things, He Could Cause "the Wreck of Matter and the Crash of Worlds."

If you could imagine an earthworm trying to run the Niagara Electric Lighting and Power Transmission works, you would have some faint idea of the capacity of the greatest human genius that ever lived to run the visible universe. That is probably why the wisest of us is not permitted to understand the final secrets of nature.

Here is a good example. Take a rifle into a place sufficiently far from the habitations of men; put the butt on the ground and support it so that the barrel points straight up and pull the trigger. The bullet will leave the muzzle with a velocity of, say, 3,000 feet a second. It will rise to an enormous height, come to a standstill for an infinitesimal fraction of a second and begin to fall back again. It will strike the earth with very nearly but not quite the same velocity as it left the muzzle of the gun. It would be exactly the same but for the resistance of the air.

What has happened is this: The explosion of the powder has changed a solid into a gas, and the expansive energy of this has driven the bullet upward. In other words, it has for the time overcome that mysterious force by which the earth draws everything toward its own center.

But when the energy of the exploded powder is exactly balanced by the pull of gravitation the bullet falls back. In the first second after its turn it falls 16 feet, in the next 32, in the next 64, in the next 128, and so on till it returns with ever increasing velocity whence it started.

Nothing has been lost, nothing gained. The gases set free by the explosion of the powder weigh exactly as much as the solid. Some of the energy has been used as heat, some in propelling the bullet. Gravitation, overcome for awhile, has reasserted itself. The sum of matter and force in the universe is absolutely unchanged.

This is as true of the quickened beat of a girl's heart when she meets her lover as it is of the march of the planets and suns through the fields of space. Every atom of matter, every unit of force, throughout the universe is constant, external and exactly balanced, and the whole strength and genius of humanity could not increase or diminish them by the slightest fraction.

Now, let us imagine what would happen if man could make that bullet strike the earth with greater or less force than it left the muzzle of the gun. He would either have increased or decreased the total of universal energy, and in either case he would have thrown first the solar system and then the whole universe out of gear.

The earth and all the other planets would begin to revolve in different orbits. The sun, with its family of worlds, would alter its path round the unknown center about which it revolves. Then world would be hurled against world and sun against sun, and stars and planets would be reduced to the flaming gases from which they cooled into solids and liquids before time began to be.

Just the same catastrophe would happen if man could either create or entirely destroy a grain of sand on the seashore. The balance of the universe, in which swing stars and planets, whose weight is inexpressible in human figures (this tiny world of ours weighs 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons), is infinitely more delicate than that which the chemist has to keep in an airtight case and at an even temperature lest a breath of air should throw it out of gear.

Thus the destruction or creation of a grain of sand would change the orbit of the earth round the sun. In the one case it would be drawn closer and closer to the sun, perhaps after thousands of revolutions to be swallowed up in fiery ruin. In the other case it would gradually leave the sun and year by year wander farther away into regions of space where human life would be impossible.

The result of the dislocation of such a stupendous system, which has worked with unfailing exactitude for countless ages, is, of course, utterly beyond the scope of human imagination, and yet such a seeming trifle as the creation or destruction of a single grain of sand might, and probably would, plunge it into utter chaos and ruin.—Pearson's.

His Ability.

"And how is my old school friend Bimson getting on?" said the man who had returned to his native city after a long absence.

"Oh, he's doing first rate."

"But he was such a bright boy we always expected he would display especial ability."

"Well, I don't know that he hasn't displayed especial ability."

"I never hear him mentioned in connection with any of your elections."

"No: that's just the point. He has shown ability to go ahead quietly and build up a business. He doesn't have to run for office."—Washington Star.

Critical.

She—You don't love me as much as you did or you would have stayed longer last night.

He—But you insisted on my going.

"And if you had loved me you would not have gone."—Detroit Free Press.

Greatness is to take the common things of life and walk truly among them.—Olive Schreiner.

A POSTAL DELIVERY.

AN INCIDENT OF REVOLUTIONARY DAYS IN CONNECTICUT.

A Letter From the Front That Came and Went and Came Again to Stay. The First Rural Free Delivery in Mansfield Town.

The arrival of the first batch of letters after the establishment of rural free delivery in Mansfield, Conn., recalled to an aged lady of that town a postal incident remembered in her family for 120 years. "My mother always cried when she told the story," she said.

When my mother was a little girl, the narrator went on, to have one's letters regularly brought and handed in at the door would have seemed a miracle of privilege, and to get them without paying postage would have been another. Mails were so slow and uncertain that the safe arrival of an expected letter by any means was an event in a country family, with the postoffice miles away.

Sometimes the delivery was helped along by volunteer carriers—a farmer going home from the grist mill, a housewife returning from market town with her bargains of lamp oil, West India molasses and green tea, or even a passing peddler with his load of tinware and corn brooms. In the old war time the army had post riders, but they were few and far between.

My grandfather was a soldier of the Revolution, and grandmother kept the home fire burning here, and provided for their three children as well as she could while he was at the front. All summer she had heard no word of him, and when one autumn day a man in a military cloak rode to the door on a white horse her heart beat quick.

"Does Ruth Fuller live here?" he says, holding a thick letter in his hand.

"Yes, I am Ruth Fuller," and grandmother reached eagerly for the letter, for she saw the address in her husband's handwriting.

"The postage is 2 shillin's."

Grandmother's countenance fell, for there wasn't so much money in the house.

"Guess you don't know me," remarked the man, opening his cape and tipping back his cocked hat, but still holding the letter. She knew him then—an enemy capable of a mean revenge.

"Ah, yes, you remember Tom Turner and how he asked you to marry him and you give him 'No, I thankee,' and took John Fuller. I wasn't good enough to marry ye, but I'm good enough now to bring ye letters from the man that did, and I'm good enough to charge ye a steep price for goin' out o' my way. So hand over your 2 shillin's and take your letter."

The poor woman told him she had no money. To be held up in this heartless and insulting way was a bitter hurt to her. Her grief was deeper than her resentment, but she was too proud to let the cruel fellow see her weep.

"I will get you a good dinner," she said, "and feed your horse and give you a pair of nice long stockings."

It was a humiliation to plead with Tom Turner, but she could do no less.

"Money or nothin'," he says, and he put the letter in his pocket and rode away.

Grandmother went into the house and sat down and cried, and her children, clinging about her, cried too. During her long months of waiting, at odd hours she had spun and woven cloth and sewed garments and knitted woolen stockings for John's winter comfort, trusting to find some way to send them to him. Now the messenger had come and gone who could at least have carried word, and he had refused even to give her her husband's letter.

"Ma, God knows what the bad man did," sobbed one of the little ones. "He knows what nice things you've made for pa, and he'll send a good man next time."

The baby's thought relieved the mother's despair, and the three lonely hearts prayed and waited anxiously for the "next time," and, sure enough, before winter came they saw the same white horse galloping toward the house. "He's brought the letter back!" they all cried out together, for they believed the rider to be the same man.

Grandmother rushed from the door with all her children. The horseman held out the same letter, and as he gravely put it into her hands she glanced up to his face and screamed for joy.

"John! It is you!"

It did not take her husband long to tell the rest of the story. Tom Turner had returned to headquarters, and one night, made talkative by an extra ration of rum, he had bragged how he "got even" with an old sweetheart who jilted him. His exploit reached the ears of his commanding officer, who took away his commission and put my grandfather in his place. The new post rider had brought his own letter to his wife. It was the first rural free delivery in Mansfield town.—Youth's Companion.

Keeping Butter.

Good butter will keep sweet for many weeks when it is placed in a crock after being made into rolls wrapped in strong cheesecloth or old muslin and then covered with a brine strong enough to bear up an egg. Saltpeter and sugar may be added to advantage while the brine is still hot in the proportion of a teaspoonful of the former and a tablespoonful of the latter to every four quarts. The brine must, however, not be poured upon the butter until it is entirely cold.

The burning of a sulphur candle in a room infested with pests of any kind will relieve you of them in a short time.

Glasses which have been used for milk should be washed first in cold water and then in hot soapsuds. This will make them clear and shining.

Wilted or drooping flowers may be revived by giving them a quick plunge into moderately hot water in which a few drops of ammonia have been poured.

Never put soda in the water in which you wash china that has any gilding on it. Soda injures the gilding. Instead use soap, which answers just as well and has no ill effects.

In washing cut glass only moderately hot water should be used on account of the glass being of varying thickness, which causes the dishes to expand unevenly if subjected to excessive changes of temperature.

His Face Crushed.

Yesterday morning Ed Peterson, sometimes called Ed Johnson, met with a serious accident which was almost fatal. He left here with several others for the pineries and was riding on top of a wagon heavily loaded with supplies. It seems that he was somewhat under the influence of liquor and when the outfit had proceeded about three miles from here he attempted to jump from the top of the loaded wagon. In making the attempt he fell and the rear wheel of the wagon passed over the right hand side of his face and head, cutting and bruising him seriously. He was brought back here and conveyed to the office of Dr. Blomburgh. An examination showed that his injuries were not of a fatal nature—though at first it was supposed his head was crushed in. Late in the afternoon he was able to walk to his boarding place, but his face was horribly disfigured.

Pretty Fair Shots.

In an English paper there appeared recently the veracious story of two brothers who lived in the Rocky mountains. They had two rifles, one bullet and a keg of powder. With this outfit they managed to kill on an average twenty-seven head of buffalo a day. The way they managed was this: Brother No. 1 would stand on one side of a buffalo and shoot through it, the bullet going into the barrel of the rifle of Brother No. 2, who stood on the other side. Then Brother No. 2 would fire through the next buffalo into the rifle of Brother No. 1, and so on until the day's sport was over.

Some one who saw this story has written to say that he is acquainted with a man, a cousin, he thinks, of the two mentioned, who also lived in the Rocky mountains at one time. He had one rifle, one bullet and a keg of powder, yet he managed to kill thirty head of buffalo a day—buffaloes were plenty then—and the way he did it was this: He was not only a champion shot, but a champion runner, and when he fired through a buffalo he would run around and catch the bullet again to reload with, and so on until he exhausted his powder.

How to Catch the Polar Bear.

I listened attentively the other night to a gentleman who gave me a great deal of valuable information concerning these interesting regions. He knew I was a tenderfoot and a newspaper reporter and felt at liberty, therefore, to talk freely, so I got a lot of yarns about polar bears and walruses and other creatures, large and small, which are not related in natural histories. I believe it was one of the advisers of "Alice in Wonderland" who suggested that the best way to catch a rabbit is to get behind a stump and make a noise like a carrot, and I learned with great satisfaction that the easiest way to catch a polar bear is to hide behind an iceberg and make a noise like the aurora borealis. Polar bears are very tame and, like newspaper reporters and some other people, are gifted with inquiring minds. When a stranger comes out on the ice, they greet him cordially and show a justifiable curiosity as to his business and intentions, which causes them to fall an easy prey to the parlor rug trust.—Norway Letter in Chicago Herald.

Noisy Sunbeams.

Fill a glass vessel with lampblack, colored silk or worsted. Focus the rays of the sun in a lens—that is, hold a magnifying glass so that the rays pass through it before they fall on the glass vessel. Then revolve in the light, between the lens and the vessel, a disk with an opening or slit in it so that the light is alternately falling on the vessel and being shut out. Now listen, and you will hear a noise when the light passes through the slit, but there will be silence when it is shut out. You must place your ear close to the glass holding the silk or other substance.

Another experiment is to use a prism instead of an ordinary lens. This makes a rainbow, and as the rays pass through the slit it is possible to tell that some parts of the solar spectrum—as it is called—produce a sound as they fall on the glass vessel, while other parts have no effect.

His Reform.

Lady—What is the matter with my husband?

Doctor—I cannot be sure yet. Have you noticed him doing anything unusual lately?

"Let me see. Well, last evening, instead of lighting his cigar the moment he left the table, he walked into the library and put on his smoking jacket, smoking cap and slippers before beginning to smoke."

"Hum! My, my!"

"And later on, when he wrote a letter, he wiped the pen on a penwiper."

"Horrors! It's paresis!"—New York Weekly.

Funny Speeches.

Grose relates that Caulfield, meeting Mr. Thomas Sandby, said: "My dear Sandby, I'm glad to see you. Pray, is it you or your brother?" It was a Spaniard who remarked ingeniously that an author should always write his own index, let who will write the book. Edgeworth relates the story of an English shopkeeper who did pretty well in the direction of the bull proper when, to recommend the durability of some fabric for a lady's dress, he said, "Madam, it will wear forever and make you a petticoat afterward." This is quite equal to the Irishman's rope which had only one end because the other had been cut away.—Temple Bar.

THE SPECTATOR.

THERE WERE TWO FALSTAFFS.

One Mrs. Kemble's Interpretation, the Other an Impersonation Given in Beerbohm Tree's Theater.

Reference to Mrs. Kemble suggests a contrast, sharply noted in my mind a few years ago. As a very young man I had the keen delight of hearing Mrs. Fanny Kemble at one of the last series of readings which she gave in the Melonaon. I vividly recall the occasion when I listened to her delivery of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and was one of an audience which laughed itself almost faint over her interpretation of Falstaff. A middle-aged Englishwoman, in usual afternoon costume, read from an ungarnished platform, out of the big book which had come down to her from her aunt, Mrs. Siddons! Some thirty years later I was present at Mr. Beerbohm Tree's opening night in Boston, and saw the leading actor "made up" with the extreme skill, assisted by an accomplished company, using all the appliances of an excellent stage—succeed in carrying the part of Sir John Falstaff in the same comedy through an entire evening, without once evoking a laugh for his incomparably humorous text.—Atlantic Monthly.

AN HONEST NAME.

An Illinois Statesman Tells a Good Story—Knew His Father's Son Would Not Lie.

The Honorable Alva Merrill of Chillicothe, member for the Twenty-fourth District State of Illinois House of Representatives, tells an interesting story.

Some two years ago Mr. Merrill gave a testimonial stating that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured his rheumatism. This with Mr. Merrill's portrait, were published in thousands of papers all over the United States.

On the train returning home from Springfield one day last winter were the Honorable Mr. Merrill and several other members. After a time one of them said:

"Merrill, what time do you get to Chillicothe?"

This attracted the attention of an old man who had been apparently awaiting some identification of Mr. Merrill, and as soon as he heard the name he rushed up to his seat and extended his hand, saying:

"You are Alva Merrill, and you saved my life. I was most dead with Lumbago, and in an advertisement I saw your picture and your recommendation of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I knew your father and I knew his son would not lie, and, therefore, I decided to try the Pills.

"I am satisfied that Dodd's Kidney Pills, and nothing else, have saved my life and I have been waiting this opportunity to thank you personally, for had I not seen your recommendation I might never have been led to use this remedy; but, thanks to God, through your honest name and the honest medicine which you so heartily recommended, I am still alive.

"I have been watching you since you got on the train at Springfield, and thought I recognized you face as the one I had seen in the advertisement, and as soon as this gentleman called you by name I knew you were the man I had to thank."

"Dear Sister, is your health poor, do you feel worn out and used up, especially do you have any of the troubles which beset our sex, take my advice; let the doctors alone, try Lydia E. Tom Pratt

Firin'? Yes. Though my hair is white,
For my eyesight's good and clear;
I can see ahead on the track at night
As far as an engineer.

I was young as you when I got my run,
An' as full of snap an' go,
An' I felt that life was well begun
When I'd see the fire glow.

An' think she was making' steam fur me,
That had wiped an' rustled coal,
That I wasn't the servant of 73,
But her life an' her brains an' soul.

What got wrong with the kid before that trip
I never made out just right.
He was awful pale, an' he dropped his lip
When I kissed him an' says "Good night."

An' in front of the gauge an' before the glass
Across in the fireman's place,
In the darin' lights of the trains we pass
I could see that little face.

An' when the orders was brought ahead,
His face was before me still,
I never took in what the "con" had said,
But just says, "All right, Bill!"

The firemon says, "We're a-gittin' there,
You're my kind of an engineer.
But Tom, just wouldn't it raise your hair
If we'd meet number 9 right here?"

He'd just said the words when we turned a curve
An' I grabbed the lever an' air,
For a-shinin' out with never a swerve
Was a headlight there! right there!

I stayed in the cab an' felt it all,
The crash and the sickening grind,
I heard the butchered cattle call,
As they died in the cars behind.

I saw—but no, I can't tell it yet.
It was twenty years ago,
But in twenty more I could not forget
That sight ahead, I know.

For number 9 was a passenger train,
With a crowd from a holiday,
Comin' up with orders straight an' plain,
"You have got clear right o' way."

Discharged? Well, what could the company do?
Of course I expected that.
They were more than good, between me an' you,
In their dealin' with old Tom Pratt.

It was all the orders I didn't hear,
An' didn't make out just right.
It was all the fault of a blindin' tear
For a boy that died that night.

They gave me a job in a year or two,
As a fireman in the yard;
There was nothin' else for a man to do,
Though the drop an' the work was hard.

An' little boys that was kids knee high
When they gave me the 73,
Works up to their runs like you, while I Am a-doin' what you see.

Injustice? Not much: it was only right,
For a man whose brain ain't clear,
Or with dyin' babies, like mine that night,
Ain't fit fur an engineer.

After the Storm Had Passed.

BY D. H. TALMADGE.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It was rather an extraordinary situation. Tom Belwynd, elephant man with the Three World Show admitted without so much as an instant's hesitation that never during his career, which had not been a commonplace succession of events by any means, had he known anything like it. He was inclined to believe for a period of perhaps three minutes, while the effects of the shock were still strong upon him, that he was in some kind of a heaven, sitting upon green grass by the side of running waters. Across the stream upon the other bank was his ideal woman, the lovely creature of his dreams.

Then a loud splashing and trumpeting down the stream distracted his attention, and he turned his gaze anxiously and with reluctance in that direction. The vision upon the other bank rose to its feet, giving utterance to a squeak of the most conventional worldliness. The squeak settled it. The vision was such no more. Belwynd smiled, and his smile was answered. He spoke.

"You are in no danger, miss," he said, reassuringly. "It is only one of the elephants."

The information did not bring the expression of relief to the girl's face that he had hoped for, and he spoke again, introducing himself.

"I am the elephant man with the show, miss. Belwynd's my name—Thomas Belwynd. And when I tell you there's no danger I know what I'm talking about. It's old Pilate making all that fuss. He hadn't had a good play in the water for six weeks, and he's taking advantage of his opportunity. 'Tisn't every day that a tornado strikes us, and nothing short of a tornado gives the old chap the liberty he most desires."

"I am the elephant man."

"Where are the other elephants?" inquired the girl, dubiously.

"I'll be blessed if I know, miss; but I do know that they're not with Pilate. He's an aristocrat, and he won't associate with the others when he can help it. I have to chain him by himself in the menagerie tent, and I have to let him do his turn in the ring alone. He becomes offended if I don't, and sulks and makes a regular howling snob of himself. Here he comes now."

The elephant, lumbering gleefully up the bed of the stream, his small eyes twinkling, his trunk standing bolt upright before his face, caught sight of them as the last word left Belwynd's lips, and stopped abruptly. Belwynd addressed him.

"Pilate, old man," said he, quietly, "come here."

Pilate hesitated. He recognized the master, but he was not yet weary of vacation. His great body swayed back and forth uncertainly for a time, and the end of his trunk was gradually lowered to the water. Belwynd addressed him again, sharply.

"None of that, Pilate! Come here, sir."

With a sound not unlike a groan the beast obeyed.

"Down, Pilate!"

In another moment the mighty frame was stretched upon the grass, and Belwynd, a small stick in his hand, was looking triumphantly at the girl.

"You see, miss," he said, "people are afraid of elephants because they don't know 'em. There are animals in almost every barnyard of this blossoming state of Iowa that are more dangerous to handle. Now cows—I'm timid of cows. I never feel safe when there are cows around. I left home as much for that reason as any other. Father insisted that I help to milk, and I just slung a few of my more valuable possessions into a bandanna handkerchief and followed off the first circus that come along rather than do it. I've never been home since, though I write to mother regularly every Sunday morning. I sent her the money to clear the mortgage off the old place last week. Know anybody in Ohio?"

The girl raised her big brown eyes—big brown eyes and yellow, curly hair had been the prime essentials to beauty in Belwynd's estimation—from the elephant to Belwynd's face. She was trembling slightly, and her voice quavered.

"Ohio is my home," she replied. "I came from near Chillicothe."

"That's funny. So did I. Who'd ever have thought that two lonesome people from the same place who'd never seen each other before would have been blown out from among ten thousand by a tornado and plumped down together in a nice pleasant place like this hollow to talk it over! We're lucky not to be dead. We must be a quarter of a mile from the show ground, and we didn't touch once on the way, or breathe,—at least I didn't. It looks like fate."

The girl smiled. "How do you know I'm lonesome?" she asked.

"Because your home's in Ohio," he answered promptly, "and you're a long ways from it, and——and——you're afraid of elephants. Everybody is lonesome when he's away from home. Home wouldn't amount to shucks as an institution if he wasn't."

"I am lonesome," admitted the girl. "I'd give anything if I was back in Ross county this very minute." She glanced significantly at the elephant, and wiped the corners of her eyes. "I didn't have to leave. But my uncle wrote to me asking if I didn't want a position in his restaurant out here, and I was foolish enough to take it. I thought it would be better than the farm. And after I'd taken it I was ashamed to go back till I'd stayed a year, 'cause I said I was going to stay a year. Father wrote me long ago, saying he could tell by the tone of my letters that I was homesick. He said I'd better come back. I wrote and told him that nothing but a——a——"

"Tornado," suggested Belwynd.

"Yes, that nothing but a tornado——that's what it amounted to——would make me come back till my year was up, and he said I was just like mother—set in my way. After that I got a letter from mother, and she said she was sorry I was so stubborn, but she knew I couldn't help it, 'cause I was father right over again. My father's name is William Travis. Perhaps you've heard of him."

"No," said Belwynd, honestly. "I never did. Your home must be south of Chillicothe, isn't it?"

"Yes. Yours is north?"

"Yes."

"But it's all old Ross county."

"Yes," looking at the girl in frank admiration; "it's all old Ross county."

"And we're far away from it."

"Far away from it."

The girl drew a long breath. "Wouldn't you like to go back?" she asked.

"Well," confessed the elephant man slowly, "sometimes I do feel a hankering of that sort, and I can't account for it. I never got much else than kicks and pushes when I was there. Maybe 'twas my own fault, but I like to think 'twas more because none of my folks understood me. Old Ross county turned me down unreasonably hard, yet the hankering comes in spite of it. I'm a good deal like a man I knew once who was with the show. Him and his wife done a turn on the trapeze that was good for letters a foot high on the bills. It was a stunning act. But the little woman took sick. Overwork, I guess. They called it consumption. 'Twas heartbreaking to hear her cough. But she never lost hope. Folks sick with that thing don't, they say. She stuck by the show till the last minute. The day she died she rode old Pilate here in the street parade."

"O!" The brown eyes contemplated the prostrate beast with a new expression. Then they flashed sympathetically into the gray ones of the elephant man.

"Her husband was a good deal cut up when the end came. He knew she was better off and all that, but somehow he couldn't seem to get reconciled. He hadn't married her because he loved her particularly,—'twas more because she was a clever performer on the swinging bar. It was a matter of business. Such things are not uncommon in the show line. Maybe they're not uncommon in other lines. I don't know. He was like most other men,—he had his notions about what went to make up female loveliness, and this woman, his wife, wasn't according to 'em. But after she left he quit the trapeze and took up another branch. He didn't know why he done it. He just felt that way. And three years later he found the woman that he'd dreamed of in his youth."

"And they were married?"

"No, they weren't married." Belwynd inadvertently bent the stick in his hand, breaking it. For a moment his face took on the look of one who mourns. "They weren't married. They never will be. It was a most peculiar thing. 'Twas sort of ridiculous, in fact. The man looked at the woman, and he knew she was beautiful, but something on his inside kept him from asking her to marry him. He knew she was beautiful, but, 'confound it!' he said to himself, 'she doesn't cough and her face isn't thin like the faithful and true little woman's who's dead.' And he went on his way—alone."

"It is a pretty story," said the girl softly, after an interval. "Why have you told it to me, a stranger?"

"Pilate, old man," said he.

"You aren't a stranger," replied Belwynd. "You came from old Ross county, and——and you——you are the other woman. Come, Pilate, old chap! We must go and help pick up the muss. Good-by, miss."

The girl started forward impulsively. Then she stopped and turned away her face. "Good-by——Tom," she said.

Red and White Blood Cells.

It is an old story in physiology nowadays that those wonderful living white cells which teem in untold millions in our blood, exercise the duty of attacking and devouring the microbes with which they come in contact. The pity of it is that they should so often fail in the war they wage against disease, although this is perhaps an unjustifiable grumble, seeing that we can never know to what extent we owe our freedom from infection to the work of these microscopic sanitary inspectors. The question has before now been mooted whether the red corpuscles may not also exercise an inhibitory action on the growth and development of germs which find their way into the vital fluid. Dr. L. Helm, a foreign investigator, has recently published certain researches which tend to give an affirmative aspect to this suggestion. He tells us, as the result of his observations, that the red blood corpuscles do exercise a destructive action on bacilli, and that we are entitled to regard the blood as thus doubly fortified against successful microbe invasion. Perhaps this view of things may reconcile diverse opinions which have been held regarding the action of the white blood corpuscles themselves.—London Chronicle.

A Pastor's Many Lectures.

"One of the most remarkable men in this country," declared a Philadelphia man, the other day, "is the Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia. He told me not long ago that he had either lectured or preached every evening, with possibly a dozen exceptions, during all of the past sixteen years. He has delivered the lecture he calls 'Acres of Diamonds,' more than 2,500 times. In addition to his duties as pastor of the largest Baptist church in Philadelphia, he is president of a college attached to the church, in which more than a hundred young men are educated by means of money raised entirely through Dr. Conwell's efforts."—New York Times.

Prehistoric Drawings.

At a recent meeting of the Academie des Sciences, M. E. Riviere, a savant attached to the College of France, exhibited some interesting reproductions of drawings and paintings, discovered on the walls of the Grotto of La Mouthe, in the Perigord district.

The designs are the first found in France which are proved beyond doubt to belong to the prehistoric epoch known as the Reindeer age.

One hundred and thirty yards of the total length of 200 yards have now been explored, and M. Riviere's investigations have been rewarded by the discovery, on the hearthstones of the primitive inhabitants, of the remains of fauna, represented by thousands of rudely-shaped silica and bone implements.

The most interesting find, however, is a series of designs representing animals of the period. The drawings include the wild ass, bison, reindeer, wild goat, antelope, mammoth and a species of bear.—London Daily Mail.

Great Naval Stronghold.

It is not generally known that within eighty miles of Victoria, and forty-six miles inside Puget Sound, there is a nucleus of a navy yard which is destined to be one of the most important—if not the most important—in the Union. Ten years ago a wilderness, it now teems with life. Its situation is ideal. It is absolutely land-locked, its shortest approach being a narrow, winding channel six miles long, heavily fortified and mined. Its longest approach is fourteen miles, with an entrance so narrow an enemy's ship would stand no chance of getting through.—Harper's Weekly.

CUT BRITISH TIES

HUGE CONSPIRACY TO FORM A REPUBLIC IN NORTHWEST TERRITORY.

DAWSON TO BE THE CAPITAL

PLAN TO SIEZE POLICE AND OVERTHROW LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

AWAIT THE SUMMONS TO ARMS

AMMUNITION AND SUPPLIES PLANTED READY FOR THE ATTACK.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 18.—An unconfirmed story comes from Skagway, Alaska, under date of Nov. 6, telling of the discovery of what is alleged to be a huge conspiracy existing at Dawson, and ramifying to Skagway, Victoria and Vancouver and Seattle, for the overthrow of the local government of the Northwest Territory, and the establishing of a republic, with Dawson as its capital.

According to the details of the story, arms, ammunition and provisions have been taken in over the railroad and cached at strategic points. Prominent American residents of Skagway are said to be ringleaders in the conspiracy. Miners to the number of 5,000 are said to await the summons to arms, ready to fight for the independence from dominion rule of the gold fields, camps and towns. The plan the mounted police, arrest the civil authorities and take the government into their own hands. The rigors of the Arctic winters would give the insurgents six months' immunity from attack by Canadian or British troops, and the adventurous arch-conspirators hope for intervention or outside assistance by the time the melting of ice and snow will permit the invasion of their isolated republic.

It is further related that a hurried conference, lasting until midnight, was held at Skagway Nov. 5, at which were present Capt. Corrigan of the Northwest mounted police, who had arrived from across the Canadian border late that evening, Judge Brown of the United States district court, United States Marshal Shoupe, United States Attorney Frederick and Maj. Hovey, commanding the United States troops at Skagway, attended the meeting. This was the last of several between the civil and military representatives of the two powers in relation to the mysterious transportation of supplies into the interior and rumors of a conspiracy to lead the miners in a revolt against the Canadian government in the Northwest Territory. Those present maintained subsequently the strictest silence concerning the new evidence laid before them, and their evident anxiety helped to confirm the rumors of conspiracy.

Capt. Corrigan took a train back across the border the next morning, while United States Marshal Shoupe embarked on the first steamer for Seattle, which port he reached several days ago. The object of his visit was presumably to confer by telegraph with the authorities at Washington. He sailed Saturday afternoon on the Dolphin on his way.

MANY LIVES LOST.

Terrible Gale Does Great Damage on the Newfoundland Coast.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 18.—The terrible gale which has been raging on the Newfoundland coast during the past three days has carried death and destruction in its track. Shipping has suffered severely as a result of the storm and many lives have been lost. A private dispatch which reached Lewisburg, C. B., last night, states that the Norwegian steamer Ella, under charter of the Black Diamond Line company, had been lost on the Newfoundland coast in the vicinity of Belle Isle with all hands. The steamer left Montreal on Friday with a general cargo for St. John's, N. F. The Ella was 901 tons register and was built at Sunderland in 1898. This was her last trip of the season on the route. She carried a crew of about twenty men.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 18.—An effort will be made to secure the return of Ben Kilpatrick, alias Harry Longbaugh, now held in St. Louis on suspicion of being one of the Montana train robbers. He is wanted for murder.

GOPHERS FALL DOWN.

Husky Minnesotans Walloped by the Badgers.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 18.—Wisconsin Saturday earned the right to dispute and perhaps claim as her own the Western football championship. The vaunted team from Minnesota, confident and husky, was humbled by a score of 18 to 0—a safety, three touchdowns and one goal were scored against it.

The great grandstands on Randall field were literal mountains of moving humanity. Thirteen thousand people filled seats within the inclosure. Clouds of cardinal and maroon and gold made the scene most picturesque. All kinds of ear-splitting devices, including whistles from a locomotive shunted on a sidetrack behind the Badger rooters, served to make life yet more miserable for the impartial on-lookers. But it was a crucial football contest and anything was excusable. Before the game began Mueller, the Gopher guard, was withdrawn by Minnesota. The Minnesota representatives were notified that Quarterback Doble would be protested before the conference if played, but Doble played and played miserably and his case is yet to be decided.

Minnesota's team slumped badly and did not play its game.

ELOPED WITH HIS STEPMOTHER.

South Dakota Farmer in Pursuit of His Wife and Son.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 18. — Carl Seivert of Plankinton, S. D., an aged farmer, was in Sioux City yesterday in pursuit of his wife and son, whom he declares eloped together recently and located at Washta, Iowa. He threatened them with all sorts of vengeance. The son, Fred, is about thirty years old, while his stepmother, with whom he ran away, is sixty-one. A short time ago Carl Sievert was persuaded to deed his farm to his son Louie, who was to keep the aged couple. Instead of doing so, he compelled them to leave, and they went to reside with Fred, where the intimacy is said to have started which culminated in the elopement.

DEATH RECORD APPALLS HUNTERS

Many Returning From the Woods to Save Their Lives.

Duluth, Nov. 18.—The appalling record of shooting accidents in the woods of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin during the first week of the deer season, is deterring many persons who had intended to go deer hunting, and they will remain at home. Almost every day some hunter or party of hunters arrives out of the woods in a hurry to get home and out of danger. In such cases narrow escapes from being shot are reported, and they do not care to take further chances.

CRUSHED INTO ETERNITY.

Aged Peddler Killed on St. Paul Road Near Winona.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 18.—L. D. Mead, an aged peddler of this city, met instant death at Minnesota City by being run down by the north-bound fast mail train on the Milwaukee & St. Paul road as he was crossing the track in a wagon. Mead was muffled up in a fur coat and did not hear the train approaching. He was struck by the boiler head and badly crushed.

She Has Friends.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 18.—Aberdeen citizens are generally wrought up over the discharge of Miss Emma Bickelhaupt, one of the city teachers, by the board of education. Public sentiment is strongly in the lady's favor, and even the board was divided on the question. In order to show their appreciation of Miss Bickelhaupt a public reception was held Friday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Perry, which was very largely attended.

Against the Breweries.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 18. — Judge Smith has rendered a decision upholding the constitutionality of the liquor law, which prohibits the issuing of a license for a wholesale liquor house in towns that have voted against the issuing of retail liquor licenses. The case was that of the Hamm Brewing company against Turner county, mandamus to compel the county commissioners to issue a wholesale license to the brewing company.

Fell From a Train.

Washburn, Wis., Nov. 18. — A man who came here from the Pennsylvania coal mining districts a month ago, and who has been working in the woods, was accidentally killed by falling from a logging train on the Washburn & Northwestern railroad Saturday evening, twenty-seven cars passing over him. FORCED TO FLEE

INSURGENTS ARE ROUTED BY A COMPANY OF THE NINTH INFANTRY.

ANOTHER FIGHT ON SAMAR

REBELS TRY TO RUSH AMERICANS, BUT FAILING, THEY SCATTER.

TWO AMERICANS ARE KILLED

SEVERAL RECENT ENGAGEMENTS WITH INSURGENTS IN BATANGAS.

Manila, Nov. 18.—Company E of the Ninth infantry, Capt. F. H. Schoeffel, was attacked by a force of bolomen and several insurgents armed with rifles at a point six miles from Tarangin, in the Island of Samar. The insurgents tried to rush the Americans, but failing to accomplish their purpose they quickly broke and scattered. The men of the Ninth had a corporal and a scout killed and one private wounded. Sixteen of the bolomen were killed, while the riflemen escaped.

Ten Hotchkiss rapid-fire guns will be sent to the Southern islands for operation in the mountains. Capt. Herman Hall of the Twenty-first infantry has been scouting for several days in Batangas province. He had four separate engagements with the insurgents there. Judging from the firing on these occasions Capt. Hall estimates the force of each band of the rebels at from thirty to fifty. They made no attempt to charge Capt. Hall's party. Capt. Hall's scout resulted in the capture of one insurgent officer and 50,000 pounds of rice. Gen. Sumner, commander of the district of Southern Luzon, highly praises Capt. Hartman and his troop of the First cavalry who last Wednesday morning attacked 400 insurgents intrenched in rifle pits at Buan, Batangas province, and Routed Them.

Gen. Sumner says the blow then administered by Capt. Hartman is the most severe the insurgents have experienced since he (Gen. Sumner) assumed command of the district.

Owing to the accidents to the United States transports Sheridan, Warren and Hancock, all having met with accidents in the inland seas of Japan, the return of the visiting congressmen is now delayed until the latter part of the year.

The Filipino priest Deposoy has been sentenced by court martial to the penalty of death for the murder of certain of his countrymen who favored the Americans. Out of respect, however, to the condemned man's calling and the great religious body to which he belonged and most unworthily represented, Gen. Chaffee has commuted his sentence to twenty years' imprisonment. Gen. Chaffee desires it to be understood that the leniency exercised in the case cannot be known as a precedent, and that no person in the islands can be permitted to plead his office, however sacred and exalted it may be, as protection against crimes committed.

BRITISH CATCHES.

An Average of a Hundred Boer Prisoners Per Week.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 18.—Boer prisoners continue to arrive here from the various British mobile columns in the Orange River Colony at the rate of about 100 per week. The Official Gazette contains a list of the names of Boers who have died in the refugee concentration barracks in Orange River Colony since the publication of the last statement. The list contains 230 names, and of these 188 are those of children under the age of fourteen.

PLUCKY MAID.

Girl of Sixteen Uses Hammer Effectively on Burglars.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Aroused from her sleep by the sound of intruders in the house, Ruth Embrey, a school girl, rose from her bed and walked to the first floor, and, finding two burglars in the house, attacked them with a hammer and forced them from the house without the valuables which they had gathered on a table preparatory for removal. The girl is sixteen years old and lives with her aunt, Mrs. Atlas Woodberry, a school teacher.

ICE BREAKS AND MAN DROWNS.

First Skating Accident of the Season Occurs Near Detroit, Minn.

Detroit, Minn., Nov. 18.—Frank Jacobs, an old resident, was drowned Saturday afternoon while skating on Detroit Lake. He was a member of the Grand Army and prominent.

ROBBERS STEAL MORE STAMPS.

This Time Postoffice at Ross, Wis., Was Entered—$100 Haul.

Fight With Mussulmans.

Constantinople, Nov. 18. — Conflicts resulting in much bloodshed are reported to have occurred between christians and Mussulmans at Beyrout. Similar reports have been received from Scutori and Albania. The Mussulman's commander in Albania has resigned on finding pacification impossible.

Queen Wilhelmina Is Recovering.

The Hague, Nov. 18.—The queen's mother on her return from the royal chateau at Hetloo last night told those who called on her that Queen Wilhelmina was progressing favorably. She will need another week's complete rest.

Robbed and Murdered.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 18.—The body of S. T. Baker, a Confederate veteran, was found in Colonial Park yesterday. The body was robbed of a watch, chain and other valuables, and there were evidences of a struggle.

BLOODY BATTLE IN KENTUCKY.

One Striker Killed and Several Men Wounded.

Henderson, Ky., Nov. 18.—The situation in the Western Kentucky coal field is decidedly grave. Since 4 o'clock yesterday morning the gangs of lawless intruders from other states and from other counties in Kentucky, who have been sent into Hopkins and Webster counties by the United Mineworkers' union, have made two fierce attacks upon guarded mines, in one of which one man was instantly killed, another shot through the body and will die, and some seven or eight others more or less seriously wounded. In addition to this, a deliberate attempt was made late in the afternoon to assassinate two men employed by the St. Bernard Coal company, who were driving peacefully along the highway on their way to their homes in the vicinity of Nortonville. This general outbreak of anarchy and outrage has at last aroused the authorities of the state to action. Yesterday the Hopkinsville company was ordered to Madisonville, and the Madisonville company was ordered to report under arms at their armory at 11 o'clock last night. It is probable that a battery of artillery from either Louisville or Lexington will be on the way to the seat of war within twenty-four hours.

CULLOM SUCCEEDS DAVIS.

Illinois Senator Will Be Chairman of Foreign Relations Committee.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Senator Cullom of Illinois will be chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate to succeed the late Senator Davis. "Ever since Senator Frye announced that he would not take the chairmanship of that committee," said Senator Cullom yesterday, "I have expected to take it, being the senior member of the committee after Mr. Frye. That is still my intention. It is so understood by my friends and other senators. Saturday I talked with Senator Lodge, who is next on the committee, and he offered me his congratulations on my coming chairmanship, which I accepted. We conferred as to the future work of the committee. There is no rivalry between us, and, of course, there will be no contest for the place. I cannot understand why rumors to the effect that I was undecided whether or not to take this chairmanship should be put into circulation. I had no other intention since Mr. Frye declined the honor."

EULOGIZES LI HUNG CHANG.

Empress Dowager Orders a Memorial Arch Erected.

Pekin, Nov. 18.—The empress dowager has issued an edict eulogizing the late Li Hung Chang and ordering the erection of a memorial arch near his birthplace. The edict also directs that the rank of marquis, conferred upon the eldest son of the late Chinese statesman in his own right, shall descend through twenty-three generations. It confers high rank upon the other sons of Earl Li upon whom the posthumous rank of marquis has been bestowed, and bestows and confers dignities upon his grandsons, together with lucrative offices.

FEAR FOR CHILD.

All Kinds of Atrocities Threatened Unless Immunity Is Bought.

Cincinnati, Nov. 18. — Considerable feeling of apprehension has been caused in Avondale in this city by a supposed attempt at blackmail, by threatened kidnapping. Mr. Leonard Smith, president of a message company, received a letter full of threats of atrocities to be committed on his six-year-old son unless Mr. Smith would buy immunity with $5,000 cash. Mr. Smith and his wife are greatly agitated and their fear has been communicated to the neighbors, who keep close watch over their children.

DICKERING WITH BRIGANDS.

No Reply to the Latest Proposal of Mr. Dickinson.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 18.—The brigands who abducted Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, and Mme. Tsilka, her companion, have not yet replied to the latest proposals of Mr. Dickinson, diplomatic agent of the United States at Sofia. This is believed to be due to the fact that the band has many leaders and that the latter are unable to agree among themselves. There is a general impression here that time is being frittered away while waiting for the brigands to reduce their demands.

LOSE WARDROBES.

Fire in the Finest of the Dormitories at Yale.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 18. — Fire practically ruined the finest of the Yale students' dormitories, the Hutchinson, which was erected a few years ago at a cost of $200,000. The furnishings of the buildings and the personal effects of 200 or more students were also destroyed. Eugene Hale Winslow, a student from Punxsutawney, Pa., was cut off from exit by the stairways, and was rescued with difficulty from a fifth story window. He was unconscious when brought to the ground, and his condition is serious.

ROBBERS DRIVEN AWAY.

Citizens of a Kansas Town Bring Out Their Shotguns.

Wellington, Kan., Nov. 18. — Safe blowers raided Milan, a small town sixteen miles west of here, and after entering every prominent store, among them the one in which the postoffice is located, wrecked the safe and fixtures of the Milan State bank with dynamite. Two doors were blown off the safe, but the third, on which was the time lock, resisted the force of the explosive, and citizens rushed into the streets with shotguns and drove the robbers away before they had secured any plunder.

ROBBERS EMPTY BANK VAULT.

Total Value of Plunder Secured at Greenville, Iowa, Not Known.

The bank is owned by the First National bank of this city. The amount taken is not known, but the damage to the vault and building was $1,000. The time lock shows that it was broken at 2 o'clock. There is no clue.

The train was flagged, but Engineer Engles was unable to come to a stop in time to avert a crash. Three cars were smashed, only one of them containing merchandise, and the others empty. Damage estimated at $1,000, including damage to engine. No one was injured.

OVER HIS BODY.

Robbers Shoot Saloonkeeper and Loot the Place.

Rhinelander, Wis., Nov. 17. — George Smith was shot and robbed in his saloon at Tomahawk Lake, seventeen miles north of here. The robbers, two in number, both wearing masks, told Smith to throw up his hands. Instead of obeying Smith struck one of the men with his fists, knocking him down. The other then shot the saloonkeeper, the bullet striking his right wrist, going through into his stomach. Smith fell, and the men then looted the place, securing $400. Smith is still alive.

SLEEP AMID FLAMES.

Quick Action by Conductor Saves Lives of Sleepers.

Appleton, Wis., Nov. 15.—Conductor Henry Stark, of the Appleton & Neenah interurban line, saved a family from being burned to death while on his run Tuesday night. While passing through Menasha Stork saw flames bursting from a small frame house, stopping the car he rushed to the place and tried to awaken the inmates by pounding on the door. This proving of no avail he threw several stones through the windows which aroused the sleepers, who were partially overcome by the smoke. A boy first staggered to the door, and with his assistance Stork succeeded in saving the parents and sister of the boy, who, but for his prompt action, would have died in the burning building.

DIED FOR VARIETY LASS.

Man Killed and Opera House Fired to Hide Crime.

Wausau, Wis., Nov. 15.—Joseph and James Nolsen, uncles of Thomas Le Claire, who was burned to death in the recent theater fire at Hurley, have just returned from that place, and assert that their nephew was murdered and the building fired to conceal the crime. They claim they discovered that on the evening of the fire Thomas Le Claire had a fight over a variety actress to whom he had been paying attention. Le Claire, they say, was on the same floor as those who were saved, but no one was found who had seen him during the fire. The story will be investigated, and if sufficient evidence can be obtained arrests will follow.

LOGGING CAMPS CLOSED.

Fear of an Outbreak of Smallpox the Cause.

Ashland, Wis., Nov. 15.—At the instigation of the government officials Senator William O'Neil of Washburn yesterday closed all of the logging camps on the Bad River reservation, throwing out of employment nearly a thousand men. It is presumed that fear of a smallpox outbreak is the cause for closing the camps. Senator O'Neil stated that he did not know how long it would be necessary to keep them idle and that would depend solely upon what the Washington officials decided to do after they had satisfied themselves as to the conditions.

Damaging to McKnight.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 15. — At the close of the second day of the trial of Ben McKnight for beating his wife to death, and the first day of evidence, things look dark for him. The state succeeded in introducing Mrs. McKnight's own story on her death bed of how her husband came home, dragged her from the bedroom, kicked her, stomped on her and twisted her arm. McKnight sits as stolid as a stone and has not betrayed a sign of emotion.

St. Jacobs Oil for Chest-Colds, Bronchitis, Croup and Pleurisy.

An outward application for bronchial difficulties is many times far more effective than syrups, cough mixtures, cod liver oil, etc., simply because it penetrates through to the direct cause, which is, as a rule, an accumulation of matter or growth tightly adhered to the bronchial tubes.

St. Jacobs Oil, possessing as it does those wonderful penetrating powers, enables it to loosen these adhesions and to induce free expectoration. Cases have been known where expectorations have been examined after St. Jacobs Oil had been applied, and the exact formation was clearly shown, where the adhesions had been removed or pulled off the bronchial tubes. All irritation of the delicate mucous membrane of the bronchae is quickly removed by the healing and soothing properties of St. Jacobs Oil. In cases of croup and whooping cough in children St. Jacobs Oil will be found superior to any other remedy.

St. Jacobs Oil is for sale throughout the world. It is clean to use—not at all greasy or oily, as its name might imply. For rheumatism, gout, sciatica, neuralgia, cramp, pleurisy, lumbago, sore throat, bronchitis, soreness, stiffness, bruises, toothache, headache, backache, feetache, pains in the chest, pains in the back, pains in the shoulders, pains in the limbs, and all bodily aches and pains, it has no equal. It acts like magic. Safe, sure and never failing.

Doesn't Like Consulship.

Gerald Carlton, who served as consul at St. Pierre, Miquelon, under appointment from President McKinley, was pointing out how undesirable such positions are:

"It cost me $500 to get there," said he, "and when I arrived, being one of them 'literary fellers,' I hadn't any more money than I could conveniently carry around with me. There was no salary attached to the place, it being a fee office. I found that my predecessor had cleaned up everything in sight.

"To add to my troubles, the 'Queen of the Islands,' a wealthy widow, attempted to marry me, and the Pooh Bah, a sort of missing link, had a habit of being over-communionable. I at last asked President McKinley to stop considering me a consul. Then I packed my grip and started for the land of the free and the home of the brave. No more consulships in mine, thank you. I've had that and been cured!"—New York Times.

Disconcerting.

"American ideas are making great progress in England."

"Yes, confound 'em!" said the man with his trousers rolled up. "They get one all confused. A lot of the papers over there have almost quit printing the point of a joke in italics."—Washington Star.

Rheumatism and the Eyes.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 18th.—Mr. G. A. Wade, the celebrated criminal lawyer of this city, whose opinion on legal matters is unquestioned, has recently made public his unqualified opinion on the matter of medicine. Mr. Wade says that Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble affect the eyesight, and further that there is no case of the kind that can not be cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

He has no fear of being set right by any of his medical friends, for both statements have a living and indisputable proof in the person of the great lawyer himself, who, as a result of Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble from which he suffered for years, became totally blind.

Physicians, the best in the country, pronounced his case incurable and hopeless, but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, restored his sight, drove away the Kidney Trouble and with it the Rheumatism and made an all-around well man of him.

A Resolute Widow.

"When does the next train that stops at Montrose leave here?" asked the resolute widow at the booking office window.

"You'll have to wait five hours."

"I don't think so."

"Well, perhaps you know better than I do."

"Yes, sir! And perhaps you know better than I do whether I'm expecting to travel by that train myself or whether I'm inquiring for a relative that's visiting at my house! And maybe you think it's your business to stand behind there and try to instruct people about things they know as well as you do, if not better! And perhaps you'll learn some day to give people civil answers when they ask you civil questions, young man; but my opinion is you won't!"

"Yes, ma'am!" gasped the booking clerk.—London Answers.

The Trials of Genius.

"John, dear," she said, in her sweet, affectionate voice which she only used on rare occasions, "are you still up with your Christmas work?"

"Pretty well," he sighed, as he put a period to a poem which had almost given him nervous prostration. "Why do you ask?"

"Because, my dear, I am afraid you are undermining your health, and I want you to take a recess and write me a short story to pay for my new dress, a couple of poems for my hat and gloves, a good, stirring campaign song that will bring in enough for a ton of coal, and one or two of those darling love poems for some lard and a sugar-cured ham, and ham, dear, is only 12 cents a pound."—Atlanta Constitution.

Child Training in Germany.

In the German cities it is refreshing to find, scattered through each park, many good-sized beds of clean sand. These beds are confined by a wooden border, to prevent the sand being scattered or washed away by rains. No matter how small the park, or in what quarter of the city it is situated, one is sure to find at least four or five of these small spots of delight for the children, and from early morn until sometimes far into the twilight you will never find one of these little enclosures entirely deserted.—Harper's Bazar.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 20, 1901.

Attorney General Douglas had a narrow escape from death while out deer hunting last week. His companion, J. E. McLean, of Minneapolis, was mistaken for a deer and shot at. The bullet just missed Mr. Douglas and killed McLean instantly. Northern Minnesota has a number of such accidents every season, due to the carelessness of green hunters.

St. Hilaire has reason to be proud of her fire department. The men who compose it are workers when their services are needed, and the people generally are willing to jump in and help. The apparatus they have to use might be improved upon but the boys themselves, with some drill and practice work, would be pretty hard to beat.

The Jeffries-Ruhlin prize fight the other evening didn't amount to much and the crowd present howled because they didn't get value for their money. The thing looked like a pure fake. The fighters did not hurt each other much, but they did hurt the audience—awfully.

The Subjection of Man.

"No, I never have a bit of trouble with my husband," remarked the frail little woman with the intelligent face. "In fact, I have him right under my thumb."

"You don't look very strong," doubtfully commented the engaged girl.

"You mistake me, my dear. It's a mental, not a physical, subjection."

"Would you mind telling me how"—

"Not a bit. Always glad to help any one steer clear of the rocks. First of all, you must know that a man in love is the biggest sort of a fool and says things that make him almost wild when he hears them in after life. I realized it, and from the very beginning of our courtship I kept a phonograph in the room, and every speech he made was duly recorded. Now, whenever my husband gets a little bit obstreperous I just turn on a record or so. Heavens, how he does rave! But he can't deny it. They always will, though, if you don't have proof positive."

"Thank you," gratefully murmured the engaged girl. "I'll get a phonograph this very day."

His Prize.

An amusing story, which may perhaps be entirely true, is told of a short-sighted but energetic member of the Russian secret police.

He was walking through a little frequented street of St. Petersburg one night when he spied high up on a lamppost a placard.

"Aha!" he said to himself, scenting mischief on the instant and alert for action. "That's one of those incendiary notices about his majesty the czar! It must come down at once!"

With some difficulty, being of a stout build, he succeeded in climbing the post and dislodging the placard. He bore it to the ground, and there, peering at it by the light of the lamp, he read two Russian words, the English equivalent for which is the well known legend "Wet Paint."—Youth's Companion.

A Wife's Allowance.

It is one of the most humiliating elements in woman's life in America today and one of the phases which is most uncomplimentarily reflective upon American husbands that a just allowance is withheld from many wives. No matter how small the allowance may be, so long as it is fair in proportion to the income earned, every wife should have a purse of her own, sacred to herself and her needs and free from the slightest intrusion on the part of her husband. Every wife is entitled to this, and no young man—I care not how small his income nor what his reasoning may be—starts married life aright who withholds that courtesy and that right from his wife.—Edward Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Tired Farmer.

"Yes, sir, you simply start our automobile plow and leave it to itself while you sit on the fence here in the shade and enjoy your weekly paper and a jug of hard cider. The plow will go right ahead and break up your field better than you could possibly do it, and when it has finished all you have to do is to press the button here and stop it."

"Waal, say, couldn't you fix it so's it would kind o' steer up here close to the fence, so's I could press the button without gittin' down?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Fact.

Mr. Jones—Madam, let me tell you that facts are stubborn things.

"What a fact you must be," replied his wife.—Exchange.

A SALE OF WARTS.

One Juvenile Transaction That Seemed to Confirm a Theory.

"This theory," said the traveling man, "that warts will go away when you stop thinking about them may have something in it, and I am inclined to have faith in it. I know from actual observation that warts can be transferred and will give you the case in point.

"I was buying a newspaper when I noticed that the hands of the newsboy were covered with warts. His stand was within a block of my house, but I am away so much the little fellow did not know me by name. I said to him:

"'You should get some one to charm away those warts,' that being the method of getting rid of them when I was a boy.

"'They ain't mine now,' he said. 'I sold them last week to Teddie Stearns, and they'll all go to him.'

"Now, Teddie Stearns is my own boy, and I did not like to think of his smooth, chubby hands being disfigured with warts, and we did not live in a wart atmosphere. They belong more exclusively to the barefoot boy with cheek of tan conditions. I had been such myself. When I went home, I called my boy to me and looked with some anxiety at his hands. They were as clean and white as a girl's.

"'What is it, papa?' he asked curiously.

"'I am looking for warts.'

"'Oh,' and he drew a long, delighted breath, 'there ain't any yet, but they're sure to come, for I bought them from "Carrotty Mike" for a pin. He says I'm sure to get 'em. Ain't you glad?'

"Glad! I could have cried, and I believe his mother did cry. But that blamed little cub said he wouldn't be a tenderfoot, and he would have warts. I read the riot act to him and went away for a month's trip, and when I came back he was as proud as Punch. His hands had grown a crop of warts that discounted anything I ever saw in that line. I hunted up 'Carrotty Mike,' and, would you believe it, there wasn't a wart on his hands! He had transferred them all to my boy."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CULLINGS FROM FICTION.

The man who knows a woman knows the world.—"A Summer Hymnal."

The people who help us most are those who make light of our achievements and have faith in our possibilities.—"Sir Christopher."

For things never come quite right in this world. The threads seem to slip out of our hands as we are going to tie the knot.—"Sister Teresa."

There's nothing like marrying a man if you want to know him better, only it limits your acquaintance with other people afterward, you know.—"A Little Gray Sheep."

But if you are looking for a wife, Carus, choose ye the woman ye would like to keep ye company through a month's rainy weather in the Isle of Mull.—"Cinderella."

What is the good of it? What will it bring her? No woman yet has possessed a wonderful head who did not pay for it at some time with her heart.—"A Woman Alone."

As a rule, the men whom men draw and the women whom women depict are nearer the truth, for it is a blessed law of nature that men and women shall view one another through the eyes of the imagination.—"A Point of Honor."

The Proofreader.

An anonymous writer in the American Printer of New York says:

"The ideal proofreader for a small printshop ought to be an accomplished printer, a sensible person, a person understanding the scope and limitations of the English language, one comprehending the true offices of punctuation, one with a keen and true appreciation of literature, a storehouse of exact knowledge, a perfect grammarian, a perfect speller and with a fund of humor sufficient to enable him to do his whole duty along these various lines without making for an early grave. If he does not really know everything, he ought assuredly to be able to scent out an error and to know how to get at the truth. If he reads the proofs for a weekly newspaper also, he ought to know all about local affairs and all about the town or city in order to prevent the reported marriage of the girl who merely acted as bridesmaid and untangle the mixed topography of the reporters' articles."

Henry Ward Beecher's Wit.

On one occasion as Mr. Beecher was in the midst of an impassioned speech some one attempted to interrupt him by suddenly crowing like a cock. The orator, however, was equal to the occasion. He stopped, listened till the crowing ceased, and then, with a look of surprise, pulled out his watch. "Morning already!" he said. "My watch is only at 10. But there can be no mistake about it. The instincts of the lower animals are infallible."

There was a roar of laughter. The "lower animals" in the gallery collapsed, and Mr. Beecher was able to resume as if nothing had occurred.

Don't Drink During Meals.

Be careful to limit the amount of water and fluids which you take during meals, since large quantities of these, especially ice water, hinder digestion. Not more than one glass of water should be taken during each meal. In order to quench the thirst which is so apt to clamor for water at meals an eminent authority suggests taking a glass of hot water fifteen or thirty minutes before meals. This acts especially well in the morning, as it cleanses the stomach.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A good friend is one's nearest relation. One's greatest relation is not always a good friend.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE FRENCH SOLDIER

SOME OF THE BRUTALITIES TO WHICH HE IS SUBJECTED.

Hazings and Other Punishments Which Sometimes End in the Victim's Death That Are Winked at, if Not Ordered, by the Officers.

Soldiers in the French army are not subjected by law to corporal punishment any more than it has been a part of the regulations governing the Military academy at West Point that cadets should "brace" or "qualify" on molasses and prunes. Nevertheless the French soldier is put through a hazing process which is most severe and several times has caused death. The French soldier is known as Pioupiou or Dumanet, just as the English soldier is known as Tommy Atkins. Dumanet finds when he joins the colors that life is not all skittles for a soldier.

The thing which distinguishes the hazing in the French army from the hazing in American colleges and universities is that it is suggested and almost ordered by the commissioned officers. An officer will say to a corporal or a sergeant, "You have a man here who has done so and so," naming some trivial offense, more than likely to be some neglect of the deference due to the officer. "It would do him good if he were tossed in a blanket."

The officer turns on his heel and walks away, while the unfortunate soldier is placed in a blanket, with saber, spurs, jack boots, bayonets and such pleasant bedfellows, and the combination is tossed until the hazers are too tired to continue. This is great sport for the man's comrades, especially if they are half drunk, which they are likely to be. This diversion has rather gone out of favor just now, because several soldiers who have been tossed had the bad taste to die after the discipline.

In some of the French barracks a favorite method of punishment is to hang the offending soldier up by his heels and then to spank him with a sword bayonet. In Algiers, where the men are far removed in the outlying garrisons from the central authority and at the mercy of their tormentors, they are subjected to many forms of hazing at the suggestion of the officers.

At one time the "silo" was much in favor among the hazers in the Algerian army of occupation. It consisted in putting a man in a deep hole made in the shape of a reversed funnel dug by the Arabs in the ground as a place for the storage of corn. The unfortunate man was left there sometimes for days, with hardly anything to eat or drink and exposed all the time to the heat of the sun, while at night the place was cold. Many died from hunger, thirst or cold, while many others became insane.

The military authorities when they became aware of these tortures issued an order prohibiting such a punishment, but it is still practiced in isolated parts of Algiers where no eye can see of which the officers are afraid.

Several years ago Prince Pignatelli d'Aragon, a young Spanish noble, ran away from his home and went to Algiers to join the foreign legion, the refuge for men "with a past." His friends announced to the French military authorities that the prince had gone to join the legion, but the authorities were able to get no word of his arrival. At last a soldier suggested that perhaps a stranger who wandered into camp and had considerable difficulty in speaking French might be the prince. The sergeant to whom the prince had spoken was drunk at the time and became annoyed at the Spaniard's broken French, so he ordered that the stranger be placed in the "silo" without more ado. Here the miserable young man remained for two days without eating or drinking, and then a good natured sentry broke the rules and gave him food. As soon as he was rescued from the "silo" the young man started for Spain, having most thoroughly reconsidered his determination to enter the celebrated foreign legion.

Another form of punishment which used to be popular in Algiers was the "carcan." A piece of wood, usually the trunk of a tree, was used. The man was laid on it, usually bound so that the middle of his back would be resting on the wood, with his head and feet hanging down to the ground. His feet were tied to an iron bar and his hands to another, and, left lying face upward, he was exposed for hours to the terrible heat of the sun. Some men have survived 12 hours of this torture.

A form of punishment still popular among the French colonial troops—that is, popular with those who inflict it and not with those who suffer it—is the "crapaudine." It consists of throwing the man face downward and tying his wrists and ankles behind his back so that his wrists and ankles are brought together.—New York Press.

An Embarrassing Laugh.

During a funny turn on the stage at the Walnut Street theater, Cincinnati, one night a man in the balcony leaned over the railing convulsed with laughter. During an extraordinary burst of hilarity his false teeth flew from his mouth and fell in the lap of a lady who was sitting in the parquet. Those near looked up and saw the toothless man waving frantically to the lady to pick up his teeth. This caused a general laugh at his expense. The teeth were returned by an usher.—Exchange.

Teaching a Dog.

To teach a dog to "speak" hold some dainty before him when he is hungry. At first he will not know what is wanted, but say "Speak!" to him, and when he barks, which he is pretty sure to do when he finds the morsel still beyond his reach, feed it to him at once. He will soon associate the work "speak" with the bark and the dainty.

Taught by Experience.

"We shall need," said the officer who was arranging for the government expedition, "food supplies for six men and a boy."

"Supplies for eight men," said the secretary, jotting it down. "What else?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Neglected Apple.

Mrs. Benham—You used to say that I was the apple of your eye.

Benham—Well, what of it?

Mrs. Benham—Nothing, except that you don't seem to care as much for fruit as you once did.

Fire at the Saw Mill.

The fire department was called out this morning by a alarm turned in from the saw mill. The boys responded promptly and on arriving at the mill it was found that the burner and tramway leading to it was blazing fiercely. By hard and well directed work the fire was soon under control. The tramway and framework close to the burner was badly scorched but the loss will not be very heavy. The origin of the fire is unknown.

PRINCESS VIROQUA, M. D.

Endorses Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound After Following Its Record For Years.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Health is the greatest boon bestowed on humanity and therefore anything that can restore lost health is a blessing. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a blessing to State and Nation. It cures her mothers and daughters and makes them well and strong.

PRINCESS VIROQUA.
Practising Physcian and Lecturer.

"For fifteen years I have noted the effect of your Vegetable Compound in curing special diseases of women.

"I know of nothing superior for ovarian trouble, barrenness, and it has prevented hundreds of dangerous operations where physicians claimed it was the only chance to get well. Ulceration and inflammation of the womb has been cured in two or three weeks through its use, and as I find it purely an herbal remedy, I unhesitatingly give it my highest endorsement.—Fraternally yours, DR. P. VIROQUA, Lansing, Mich." —$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

If you are ill do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. for special advice; it is entirely free.

An Astonished Surgeon.

"Why, there's nothing wrong with your vermiform appendix!" remarked the surgeon, after he had performed the operation.

"Nothing at all, doctor," muttered the patient, "nothing but the name of it, and you might as well cut that out."—Detroit Journal.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 15th.—A medical authority says: "In many families throughout the world Garfield Tea often takes the place of the family physician, for practically everyone suffers at times from disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels. Certainly, from no other medicine can such good results be obtained. This Herb remedy makes people well, thus greatly increasing their capacity for enjoying life. It is good for young and old."

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Lameness.

The detection of lameness in horses is often attended with so much difficulty that a few hints along this line must prove instructive to many who have not received the benefits of a veterinary education. In the first place a horseman should make himself perfectly familiar with the natural gaits of horses in normal condition. He should know exactly how horses stand and walk under all circumstances and conditions and will then be the better able to discover departures from the normal. When a horse is known to be lame he should be examined after he has been rested in the stable. Watch him as he backs out of his stall. If be jerks one hind leg up a little one suspects "crampiness" (chorea). If on being made to "stand over" he jerks his leg the lameness is most likely to be due to spavin. If when standing still he "points" one forefoot the seat of the lameness is in the foot and he is afraid to put the heel to the ground. If he stands with the toe resting upon the ground and the ankle flexed forward the seat of the lameness is likely to be in the shoulder or elbow. As a rule, however, a horse suffering from deep-seated shoulder lameness does not stand in this position, but stands normally with foot square upon the ground. Having watched the horse before and just at time of removal from stall it is important to start him off at a trot at once as some forms of lameness disappear when the horse is walked for a short distance, and such lameness is not apparent when the animal is walking. Have the horse trotted away and back. It is difficult to tell whether the lameness is "fore" or "hind" unless this is done. When the lameness is in front and the animal is trotted away from the observer lameness may appear to be in a hind leg, which is not the case. If the lameness is in a nigh fore leg, for instance, the off hind quarter rises and falls as he goes away. On trotting him towards the observer the reason for this will be found in the fact that the weight of the body is thrown upon the off foreleg, with a corresponding drop of the nigh leg. This should be remembered in telling which fore limb is affected. The bob of the head and ear is towards the side opposite to the one which is sore and lame. Bob your head with the horse while he is trotting and it becomes an easy matter to decide which leg is the lame one. When the lameness is not in the foot we must look higher for it. A close examination should be made for causes of lameness above the foot. If the animal is under six years of age we may expect splints to cause the lameness if the history is that he gets lame when used for a time, but recovers when rested. Splints are found just under the knee on either side of the bone of the leg. The nearer the splint is to the knee the worse will the lameness be. If splints are not present then examine the tendons for thickening and "bowed" condition. If the lameness is in the shoulder and very severe the foot is apt to be trailed behind; with knee flexed, for the horse is unable to bring it forward without great effort and pain. If the shoulder is the seat of lameness and horse stands down even trot him and the leg will be seen to roll outwards. Further, he is worse when trotted down hill and cannot lift the foot easily over an elevation. If the elbow is affected it drops when trotting and this is also a symptom of injury located underneath the shoulder blade, as where a horse has almost fallen, but very suddenly and "wrenchingly" recovers himself. The hind leg is "rolled" outward in hip lameness; dropped very markedly in atrophy of the muscles of the space between stifle and hip; held backwards in dislocation of the patella (knee pan); thrust forward when walking in ring bone lameness; held from the ground in severe pain at any point, but notably the ankle and hock joints, and nail pricks cause the animal to walk painfully upon the toe. In founder the fore feet are stuck out in front of the body and the hind ones thrust forward under the body. In sprain of the psoas muscles or muscles of the loins the hind legs are carried stiffly and the animal wabbles from side to side or walks sidewise. Where lameness is due to rheumatism the animal lies down most of the time, and soreness and lameness are apt to change from joint to joint.—Farmers' Review.

Poultry Briefs.

(From the Farmers' Review.)

The suggestion of a correspondent of the Farmers' Review that wire netting be put over all the windows in the poultry house is a good one. Two-inch mesh wire costs little, and a few cents' worth will cover any poultry house window. This not only saves the cost of a pane of glass now and then but it saves the wounds that are likely to result to the fowl that flies against the window and breaks it. Moreover a broken window is frequently left for so long a time before being mended that drafts on the fowls become possible, and these result in colds that open a way for the development of the roup germs.

There is always trouble in getting incubator eggs in the fall. The man that wants large quantities of fertile eggs at this time must make provision beforehand for them. He must breed his hens with the idea of their first batch of eggs being laid by the time the incubator is to be set to work. This means that his layers are to be provided for by hatching some chickens in the latter part of winter and pushing them along on stimulating feeds, so they will begin laying by the latter part of October. This can be done with a little forethought and good feeding methods.

It is interesting to note that the course in poultry keeping at the Rhode Island Agricultural College is to be continued this winter and that it appears to have become a settled part of the college work. It is a short course of six weeks and is open to all. Among the students are persons of quite mature age. The course this winter will open January 8 and continue till February 19. The topics to be considered are those of most interest to poultry raisers and include the following: Breeding of water fowls and turkeys; incubation and brooding; eggs and flesh production; capunizing; poultry diseases; poultry buildings; ventilation and heating. The work being done at this college can well be duplicated in our other agricultural colleges.

A new breed of hens is being imported from France called the Faverolles. They are described as good sized birds of the Houdan type, and are said to be strong rivals of that breed. They resemble in some ways the three breeds: Dorkings, Houdans, and Brahmas, and are said to have been produced by crossing those three breeds. Their eggs weigh about the same as do Plymouth Rock eggs and have the brownish tint denoting Asiatic blood. They are reputed to be large producers of eggs, but so are all new breeds. They have yet to stand the test and competition of American life.

Coop and Glass Covered Run.

Herewith we illustrate a coop especially adapted to chicks that hatch when atmospheric conditions are such that it would not be advisable to permit them to run in the open air. It is supposed to be large enough only to shelter a single brood. The glass adds so greatly to the heat in the run that the young chicks can use the run on quite cold days, and this usability increases as the chicks get older and cover themselves with feathers.

Constitutional Vigor Needed.

At a meeting of dairymen on the exposition grounds at Buffalo, Mr. Gregg of Minnesota spoke on the points necessary in dairy cows and sires. He called attention to the necessity for strengthening the constitutional vigor of dairy animals, and warned against trying to develop the dairy capacities above the constitutional ones. Health, strength and dairy qualities should be looked after. We fancy that the judges of our dairy cattle will find these points hard to guard. The judge may form a correct opinion of the dairy qualities of an animal, but to determine the amount of vigor is a more difficult thing. The man that has charge of such an animal all the time for years may have a pretty clear conception of the truth, but the casual observer cannot have such. The history of the ancestors also are necessary to shed light on the health and vigor of their offspring. Thus new problems are arising for the judges to solve, and we believe the breeders of dairy cows will in the future demand that the questions be solved.

Habit a Factor in Stock Raising.

Habit is a considerable factor in regulating the stock supply of a country. There are certain sections of this country, notably in the South, where conditions are favorable for stock-raising, but where the industry has never gained a foothold. The only reason discoverable is that the farmers in such sections have never formed the habit of stock raising. In a recent report to the Farmers' Review, a correspondent in Wisconsin said that in his country the farmers went into dairying when the price for horses fell, and when the price of horses again rose the dairying habit had become so firmly fixed that the farmers continued to give their attention to the production of milk rather than to the production of horses. This factor of habit is seldom taken into consideration when planning new enterprises in new localities. When the great depression came in the horse breeding business several years ago multitudes of men gave up the production of horses for market and turned their attention to other lines of farming.

Increasing Use of Potash.

The use of potash for fertilizing purposes is increasing very rapidly in this country. The following table of imports of potash salts for ten years was furnished the Farmers' Review by the agent in charge of the German Kali exhibit at the Illinois State Fair. The items represent tons of 2,000 pounds each:

A Chicken Without Feathers.

John L. Hubbell, who is engaged in raising chickens at Ansonia, Conn., has two freaks. One is a chicken that has two bills and but one eye, never having had the second eye; and the other bird is a chicken, now two months old, that is minus all feathers, never having had a sign of one on it. It does not care to mix with the other chickens to a great extent, for there are no feathers to protect him from their pecking. This they delight in doing, but he does not enjoy it in the least. There are no indications that he will ever be clothed.

How thick should seeds be sown? Professor Bailey says regarding some seeds: "Seeds that germinate very slowly, as parsnips and celery, should be sown thick in order that the combined forces of the germinating plantlets may break the crust on the soil. This caution is always necessary on soils that tend to bake, whatever the kind of seed."

DOWN IN THE DEEP

NAVAL OFFICERS REMAIN UNDER WATER FOR FIFTEEN HOURS.

SUBMARINE BOAT A SUCCESS

MEN FELT JUST AS WELL AS IF THEY HAD SPENT THE TIME ASHORE.

LOUD IN PRAISE OF THE FULTON

ADMIRAL LOWE SAYS THEY MIGHT HAVE STAYED DOWN MUCH LONGER.

Greenport, N. Y., Nov. 25.—The Holland submarine torpedo boat Fulton came to the surface yesterday morning at 10:30, after fifteen hours.

All on board were alive and well and as fresh as if they had been sealed up in the boat but a few minutes instead of many hours. The test took place at the company's tuning-up plant at New Suffolk, while the fiercest gale and rainstorm that has visited this section in twenty-three years was blowing.

All preparations for the test was in order early last evening, and at 7:30 the following passed down through her companionway forward of the turret: Rear Admiral John Lowe, retired; Lieut. Arthur MacArthur, commander of the torpedo boat Winslow, which lies in the Holland company's basin, and who will be in command of the submarine boat Adder, which is here for tuning up; Capt. Frank T. Cable, navigator for the Holland company; John Wilson, machinist; John Saunders, engineer, and Henry Morrel, electrician.

Comes Up With a Rush.

The heavy iron hatch was closed over them, and after it was securely fastened the Fulton sank slowly, steadily and evenly out of sight. Before going down the men had eaten a hearty dinner and had with them their lunch and breakfast. This morning promptly at 10:30 the huge craft ran to the surface so suddenly as to almost startle the many people who had gathered on the shore to witness the finish of the test. The conning tower was not opened for several minutes after the Fulton came to the surface, so one of the workmen swung out to her by the derrick and peered in through the heavy glass windows, then shouted ashore that all were well.

It was evident that his report was true, for there was no haste on the part of those inside to open the cover of the tower. When it finally did open, Capt. Cable's head was the first thrust to view.

Didn't Know a Storm Raged.

He saluted the watchers who had been ashore all night and looked around in a very surprised way and remarked that if he had known the weather was so very bad above water he would have remained under a while longer. He then came out on deck and assisted out the second man, Admiral Lowe.

The sea was breaking all about the Fulton and a long gangplank was thrust out to her for the men to come ashore on. Admiral Lowe said: "Well, I have had a fine night's rest and feel just as well as if I had been ashore in usual surroundings. The air on board appears to be now about as good as when we went on board last evening, much purer than you will find in many New York city court rooms. We might have stayed down a great deal longer. Really, I don't know how long, for little of the air in storage was used. I must have slept about ten hours out of the fifteen we were under. The boat is all right."

No Anxious Moments.

Capt. Cable took the test in the most matter of fact way possible and after a word with his friends went up to his home to bid his wife good morning. Mrs. Cable stood on the shore last evening when the boat went down and when questioned said she had not the slightest fear about the welfare of her husband. Capt. Cable says:

"The Fulton settled evenly to the bottom and rested there without motion till she was lifted this morning. There was no motion to her to indicate the severe storm passing over. The men were divided into four hour watches for the night and then amused themselves playing euchre, reading the new magazines and papers and spinning yarns. Not a valve or any machinery was touched during the test. The Fulton goes to Washington this week by the outside route."

DEAD BODIES RECOVERED.

Eight Mining Experts Who Lost Their Lives in a West Virginia Mine.

Bluefield, W. Va., Nov. 25.—The bodies of the lost party of eight well-known mining men who entered West mine of the Pocahontas Collieries company on Friday morning, were recovered yesterday.

At 7 o'clock in the morning a rescuing party numbering forty persons entered at the main entrance, bratticing the mine as they went in order to improve the circulation of the air. They had reached a distance of three thousand five hundred feet from the entrance when they encountered such quantities of white damp that it was impossible to proceed further. Retracing their steps, they decided to make another attempt from the Tug River entrance, some six miles across the Flat Top mountain. They went in this entrance about 10:30 o'clock, and after going a distance of some six hundred feet found the bodies of A. S. Hurst, chief inspector, Bob Odham, sub-inspector, and Frazier G. Bell, mining engineer, all huddled together. From their positions they must have met death suddenly and without pain.

CHAMBERLAIN IN POOR HEALTH.

British Colonial Secretary Unable to Assume Tasks Other Than Official.

London, Nov. 27.—The friends of Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, have for some time been concerned with regard to his health. Saturday Mr. Chamberlain wrote the Handsworth School, declining to distribute prizes at that institution because, as he said, "It is absolutely necessary for me to confine myself to public work."

Skull Crushed With a Club.

Highland, Kan., Nov. 25.—J. F. Ward, a member of the city council, crushed J. B. Springer's skull with a club, fatally wounding him, after Springer had twice shot him, a result of an old family feud. Ward is seriously but not mortally wounded. Springer cannot live.

Killed at a Poker Game.

Pittsburg, Nov. 25.—Harry McGee, son of a well known oil operator of this city, is dead as the result of a shooting affray during a poker game at his home in North Bridgewater.

VINDICATION FOR SCHLEY.

Admiral Dewey Will Not Sign a Report of Censure.

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—Admiral Dewey has taken the position firmly that he will not sign any verdict that in any way censures Admiral Schley, according to a Washington dispatch to the Ledger. The other members of the court, Admirals Benham and Ramsey, have not taken this decided position, but so far as they have expressed their conclusions it is understood they will no doubt join in the ultimate vindication of Schley. Admiral Dewey, it is said, takes into consideration the uncertainties and perplexities that beset Schley at Cienfuegos and Santiago, and compares them with his own feelings when he sailed into Manila bay. The court is rapidly approaching the completion of its judgment. Unless a mistake has been made as to the presentations of the court the decision will go beyond the expectation when the record was closed, and Admiral Schley will receive an unequivocal and unalterable quittance of all the varied charges made against him and be given full honor for what he accomplished as the commander-in-chief in the battle of Santiago.

RAYNER REFUSES A FEE.

Schley's Attorney Declines Payment for His Services.

Baltimore, Nov. 25.—Isidor Rayner's fee for his services in the Schley inquiry case was nothing. The noted Maryland lawyer refused to accept one penny from the admiral either in remuneration for his services or in repayment of the money he spent in the hotel bills incurred during the long inquiry. These facts leaked out Saturday, when it became known that two magnificent presents had been sent Mr. and Mrs. Rayner by Admiral and Mrs. Schley. At first Rayner refused to discuss either the fee or the presents, but late last evening he admitted that he had declined to receive from Admiral Schley any remuneration, although that gallant officer tendered the man who conducted his case a signed blank check.

Mr. Rayner said: "I feel that I should not be asked to say anything on this question, but the newspapers have treated me so generously that I cannot find the heart to deny a fact that you have established so well. The admiral is such a generous, noble soul that he would have sacrificed his last cent for those who represented him in the case."

The present sent Mr. Rayner by Admiral Schley is a heavy open-faced timepiece of solid gold. The chain is a very heavy one of finest gold. At its end is a solid gold pencil. The present to Mrs. Rayner is a magnificent heart, with pendant, a stone of rare brilliancy. Around the heart is a border of fifty diamonds.

GOPHERS BEAT PURPLE.

Poor Generalship Is Costly to Northwestern.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Minnesota defeated Northwestern 16 to 0 at Marshall Field Saturday afternoon in a long-drawn-out, tedious game, which began late and was not completed until long after it was too dark to distinguish either plays or players. Northwestern's poor generalship was responsible for the size of the score, as two of the Gopher's touchdowns were almost entirely due to the purple's failure to punt the ball out of danger when its goal was threatened. In this way a magnificent defense was nullified to a considerable extent, for the team from Evanston put up a sturdy fight throughout the game and held the Gopher giants' mass plays well. But in two instances, after a plucky fight had gained them the ball almost at their last line, poor headwork sent the tandem crashing into the Gophers for short gains. Once a penalty gave the Minnesotans the ball within easy distance, and the purple defense, already worn down, was unequal to the task of again stopping the heavy plays.

HARVARD DOWNS YALE.

Crimson Team Makes Sons of Eli Look Like Scrubs.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 25.—Harvard Saturday won the intercollegiate football championship on Soldiers' Field by conquering Yale 22 to 0. The result came so unexpectedly that the New Haven men are wondering how it all happened. Harvard made three touchdowns, from which two goals were kicked, and a magnificent goal from the sixty-yard line was kicked by Quarterback Marshall. Harvard played beautiful football all the day. The attack and defense was so strong that the Yale varsity, the same team that vanquished Princeton at New Haven by a score of 12 to 0 last Saturday, was made to look like a scrub eleven at times.

QUEEN DRAGA'S PASSION.

King Treats Her Brutally and She Attempt Suicide.

Paris, Nov. 27.—The Matin publishes a sensational story explaining the rumors that an attempt had been made to assassinate Queen Draga of Servia. The newspaper states that a diplomat at the Servian court is its authority. Since he was disappointed in his hope for an heir, the story goes, the king has treated his wife brutally. After swearing at her and reproaching her in the presence of several persons, the queen retorted and the king slapped her twice. Her majesty rushed to her chamber and instantly took poison. When the drug began to work she ran out of the room, shrieking "Save me!" Her cries were perfectly audible to every servant in the palace and their gossip started the rumor of an attempted assassination. The court physician, with a stomach pump and powerful antidotes, succeeded in saving the queen's life.

Stabbed in a Street Row.

Cincinnati, Nov. 25.—Harry Devington was murdered late last night, being stabbed in a street row. William Grimes is charged with the murder. Both were tinners. Bevington leaves a widow and three children.

Money for Spain's Navy.

Madrid, Nov. 25.—The minister of finance has consented to the demand of the minister of marine for the appropriation of 12,500,000 pesetas for the navy in addition to the sum already appropriated.

CAMP BROKEN UP

STRIKING UNION MINERS WHO DEFIED THE COURTS ARE ARRESTED.

NOTHING LEFT BUT ASH HEAPS

CHARGED WITH A BREACH OF THE PEACE AND UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY.

PRISONERS REFUSE TO BUDGE

BUT CHANGE THEIR MINDS WHEN A DEPUTY EXHIBITS HIS STRENGTH.

Madisonville, Ky., Nov. 25.—The famous and much-talked-of camp of the striking union miners that has been located about a quarter of a mile south of Nortonville, in the southern part of this county, is a thing of the past. There is nothing now left to mark the rendezvous of those who defied the officers and even the courts and gave the state and county authorities so much trouble for the past two months, save ash heaps, straw that was used for beds, holes in the ground made by tent stays and other marks of debris incident to camp life. All of the campers on whom the sun rose yesterday morning, with the exception of a very few who escaped the officers, are prisoners behind the bars of the county jail, charged by County Judge Hall with a "breach of the peace, unlawfully assembling and banding together, thereby making the camp a

Menace and Terror

to the public peace." The four large tents, with all the camp paraphernalia, were captured yesterday and brought in with the prisoners. A special train left Madisonville at 6:20 a. m. yesterday carrying County Judge Hall, Sheriff John H. Hankins, Deputies James Thomas and Samuel Jennings, also Gen. Murray, his aides, Capt. Ellis of Owensboro and Capt. Gordon of Frankfort, and Captains Powers and Strang with their Madisonville and Hopkinsville companies. The train took the siding at Nortonville. Judge Hall, the sheriff and his deputies got into a conveyance and drove to the camp, a quarter of a mile distant. On arriving at the camp it was found that all the men save twenty or thirty had left, taking with them all the Arms and Ammunition.

All who were present Judge Hall ordered at once arrested. The four tents were soon torn down, loaded on wagons and hauled to Nortonville, where they were packed in a box car that was brought along for that purpose. When the time came to remove the prisoners to the train, they refused to budge, saying that the officers would have to move them, which one of the deputies proceeded promptly to do. Stepping down, he picked one of the men up and shouldered him as though he was a sack of flour. The officer was not very particular about the way he carried the prisoner, and just as he was in the act of throwing him over into the wagon, the man begged to be allowed to walk. The others seeing that there was to be no foolishness on the part of the officers agreed to walk also.

MAD FOR BREAKING GLASS.

Insane Young Man Makes a Town Look Like It Had Been Struck by a Cyclone.

Eaton, Ohio, Nov. 25.—Between midnight and Sunday morning about $5,000 worth of plate glass windows in the business portion of this town were broken by William Rossman, who had recently been discharged from the asylum for insane at Dayton as cured. Rossman used stones for demolishing 143 windows, 113 being large plate glass windows of business houses. He is a member of a prominent family, his mother owning the Hotel Rossman. Yesterday the town looked like it had been struck by a hurricane. Rossman would have smashed all the windows in the town had he not been caught with difficulty and landed in jail. His hands were badly cut, and he is being attended by a physician. His mania before confinement for insanity was the breaking of windows.

SICK MAN IS PENNILESS.

Turkey's Revenues Are Minus Quantity and the Ottoman Bank Refuses Credit.

Constantinople, Nov. 25.—Never has the Turkish government been in such financial straits as at the present time. It is impossible to see how the expenses of the ramazan and bairam during December and January, and involving £350,000, can be met. The Ottoman bank utterly refuses to make any more advances and the penury is so acute that even the troops in many of the provinces are unpaid. The consequence is that there have been mutinies in several districts. Hostile demonstrations here recently have only been quieted by the authorities hastily scraping together a few thousand piastres, as something on account. The discontent in the army forms the real danger of the situation.

Cleveland Much Improved.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 25.—The condition of ex-President Cleveland, who is suffering with a cold, is very much improved. Dr. Wikoff, his physician, gave out the following statement for publication last night: "Mr. Cleveland is getting along very nicely and to all appearances is entirely out of danger. He passed a restful night and had had a very satisfactory day."

Felt Plant Burned.

Pittsburg, Nov. 25.—Fire yesterday completely destroyed the large plant of Julius D. Long & Co. in Allegheny, entailing a loss of $60,000. Two firemen were caught by a falling wall and badly injured, but will recover.

Many Churches Destroyed.

Madrid, Nov. 25.—Numerous churches in the provinces have been destroyed during the last few days by incendiary fires. Thus far the police have secured no clues as to the culprits.

KILLED BY A BULL.

Fate of an Old Settler in South Dakota.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 25.—Wenzel Kreitzinger of Lesterville died from injuries received last Sunday in an attack made upon him by a young bull. He was in front of the animal tying it to the manger, when it viciously attacked him, throwing him into the air and then butting him repeatedly with his head when he fell into the manger. The animal had no horns, but his buttings inflicted internal injuries from which death resulted after four days of intense suffering. Mr. Kreitzinger was one of the oldest settlers of Yankton county, living nearly half of his sixty-six years on the farm on which he died.

SECRET IS SOLVED.

Wisconsin Sculptor Solves the Secret of His Father's Invention.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 25.—Emil Oscar Strauss, a young sculptor of this city, has forwarded to Emperor William of Germany a statuette which was begun more than fifteen years ago by the father of Strauss on an order for Emperor William I. The elder Strauss invented a new art material which attracted the attention of the kaiser, and he ordered a piece of the work made. The younger Strauss has worked for twelve years to solve the secret of his father's invention, and the original piece of work ordered by William I. has just been completed.

WRECK ON C. G. W.

Engine and Three Cars Ditched Near Spring Valley.

Spring Valley, Minn., Nov. 25.—There was a wreck on the Chicago Great Western at this place Saturday evening at 5:30. A freight train going south as it was pulling into this station was derailed by a tampered-with switch. The engine and three cars were thrown in the ditch and all the cars left the rails. Head Brakeman Holverson of Winona was buried beneath a car load of barley. The engineer was slightly injured.

KREUZER GETS $3,575.

Jury Gives Final Decision in Railroad Damage Suit.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 25.—The jury in the big Kreuzer damage suit returned a verdict for $3,575 Saturday evening. George Kreuzer was employed by the Great Northern in clearing away a freight wreck at Evansville, and a car roof fell on him. He sued the road for $15,000, and a jury gave him $5,000 one year ago. The supreme court set the verdict aside and ordered a new trial, which is just finished.

WISCONSIN DEBATERS CHOSEN.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 25.—The Electoral college, composed of representatives of the five debating societies of the University of Wisconsin, met and elected the following men to represent the university in debate with the University of Iowa: A. D. Gillet of West Superior, Henry Grass of Sturgeon Bay and George L. Lohr of Milwaukee. The debate will be held in Iowa City in the spring.

Morphine and Liquor.

Farmington, Minn., Nov. 25.—Daniel Burns, aged twenty-four years, a resident of Lakeville, burned to death some time Thursday night in a straw stack near Credit river. He was suffering from dementia, caused by the excessive use of morphine and liquor, and had wandered away from his friends. It is supposed that Burns set fire to the stack accidentally.

Elevator Is Burned.

Appleton, Wis., Nov. 25.—Fire Saturday morning totally destroyed the massive elevator of Holbrook & Dallet. The loss is $25,000. Some 20,000 bushels of grain, 500 bushels of potatoes and $1,000 worth of clover seed were in the building. The loss is covered by insurance. The blaze originated from an exposed electric light wire.

Dakota Hotel Destroyed.

Woonsocket, S. D., Nov. 25.—Hotel Dumont, one of the best hotels of this place, took fire, the guests barely escaping with their lives and leaving all valuables behind. The upper story was completely gutted. The fire was extinguished without loss to other property. The loss is about $4,000, covered by $2,500 insurance.

Tracked in the Snow.

Black River Falls, Wis., Nov. 25.—Three men who refuse to give their names were brought here from Merrillan, and lodged in jail. They were tracked in the snow from the depot to a barn and captured. Just what the charge is cannot be learned, but is something relative to the Omaha depot.

His Neck Broken.

Black River Falls, Wis., Nov. 25.—John Nichols, a widower about fifty years old, was found dead in the road near Irving last night. A coroner's jury decided that he fell from his wagon and broke his neck.

Fire at the Soo.

The IDOL of the DAY
1901

The FIRST THANKSGIVING

The snow upon the hillside lay,
And thatched the cottage roof,
The web of vines by the Pilgrim's door
Was filled with icy woof.
The boughs were leafless on the trees,
Across the barren plain
The north wind swept despairingly
And moaned like one in pain.

(It whimpered like some hungry child
That clasps its parent's hand
And pleads for bread when there is none
In all the dreary land.)
Above the little Plymouth town,
Circling with empty maw,
Mocking their hunger, flew the crow,
Shrieking his "haw, haw, haw."

Patience, a blue-eyed maiden,
(Her eyes with tears were dim),
From hunger feeble, trembling knelt
And raised her voice to Him.
"Dear Dod," she said in pleading tones,
Tender, plaintive and sweet,
"We's almost 'tarved, an' won't 'oo please Send down some fings to eat?"

Then all day long her watchful eyes
Gazed down the village street,
Not doubting but she soon would see
Some one with "fings to eat."
And, lo! before the sun had set,
With wild fowl laden down,
Four hunters from the forest drear
Came marching into town.

And (as in answer to the prayer),
To add to all the cheer,
And banish famine from the place,
Came Indians with deer.
The joyous villagers rushed out
The ladened ones to meet,
But Patience knelt and said: "Tanks, Dod,
For sendin' fings to eat."

"HE SHALL DIRECT THY PATH."

A Thanksgiving Story.

"Trust in the Lord with all thy heart * * * He shall direct thy path."

Old Martha Brent, murmuring snatches of her day's verses, little realized that a challenge to her faith was close at hand.

She was dusting some books on a shelf in her sitting room, and just then she accidentally knocked one of them to the floor.

The books had belonged to Martha's husband. She dusted them daily, but she never had opened them since his death, ten years before. Above the book shelf hung a bronze medal her husband had won for bravery in battle.

ACCIDENTALLY KNOCKED ONE TO THE FLOOR.

Stooping to get the fallen book, Martha also picked up a paper that had tumbled out of it. It was a deed conferring a small piece of property below the town to one Frederick Willis.

"Well, now, I think; I never knew James deeded that away!" thought Martha.

She had just laid the paper aside, when the door burst open and a little boy came flying in.

"Granny!" he whispered, hurriedly, "you won't let him take me from you, will you?"

"Why, Jacky!" said Martha.

The boy's beautiful, flushed face was upturned to hers full of eager entreaty.

"Promise, you won't, Granny!"

"No, no, Jacky," she said, patting his head; "you never shall leave Granny unwillingly."

"Morning, Martha," said a large, rather determined-looking man, appearing in the doorway.

He was Stephen Butts, a relative of the man who had married Martha's only daughter, who, with her husband, now was dead.

He presently stated the object of his visit. He had come to town from his ranch, wishing to take Jacky back with him. He and his wife would be glad to adopt the boy, he said.

"No, Butts," Martha replied, with a touch of asperity, "I shouldn't feel a bit relieved to be rid of Jacky."

"And I must stay to take care of Granny," chimed in the child, slipping his firm, pink hand into the wrinkled, brown one.

Butts argued the matter awhile. He wanted the boy. Finally he went away, saying that he would not accept Martha's decision as final. He would be in town again for Thanksgiving. * * *

That afternoon Martha went to the office of her lawyer, Mr. Crell.

Mr. Crell greeted her cordially. "I'm glad you called in today, Mrs. Brent," he said, giving her a chair. "I wanted to see you."

"No good news!" he said. "I've heard from Mr. Ford, but I'm sorry to be obliged to tell you that he writes he does not see much use of continuing your pension case. He cannot discover any one who knew Sergeant William Clay or James Brent."

James Brent had retaken his true name when he got his discharge from the army three years before his death, and came to live in this western town, and now it seemed impossible to prove that he and Sergeant Clay were the same man.

His widow mortgaged the home to Lawyer Ford, the pension attorney, who seeing no chance of winning the case demanded payment of the mortgage. Crell told of Ford's demands.

Martha started. She grew very white. She had a poor head for business matters, and she had not fully realized, when she mortgaged her property to meet the expenses of employing the Washington lawyer, that she must lose it if she did not get her pension. In the latter event the ten years' arrears due her would easily have paid up the mortgage.

"I hope we may be able to save the place some way," said Mr. Crell, observing her distress. "How about selling that land on the river?"

"Oh, sir, I cannot sell that; it—"

Martha, half extending the deed from under her shawl, drew it sharply back into hiding.

A fierce flood of terror set every nerve in her old body trembling. "What did you say, sir?" she asked, weakly. Mr. Crell explained that it would be wise to sell the land. "I'm sure your husband would approve," he said.

Martha rose from her chair abruptly. "Yes, I believe James would want me to sell it," she declared; "he'd want anything rather than Jacky and I'd be without a home!" She went away quickly.

Martha did not work well that afternoon. Her mind was distracted. She kept slipping her hand into her pocket to feel the deed. Its possession confused her actions.

Unable to stand the strain any longer she started to Crell's office to tell the story. But on the way she met Jacky returning from school.

"Come, you're tired. Let's hurry home," said Jacky. "Why, that's not the way home, Granny! You're starting uptown. See, it's well I came to fetch you. Take my shoulder; I'm pretty big now."

Martha's determination wilted weakly away. She went home with her boy.

It was not until they were seated at supper that her sense of right put in a claim again.

"I've taken the second wrong step, and I've got to stop here!" She pulled herself up.

She knew that if the worst came to the worst she might go to the poorhouse, and tried to persuade him to go to Butts'.

Jacky's face clouded; he flung himself back in his chair.

"Now, Granny," he cried, with tears, "you're talking as though you wanted me to go and you said you didn't; you promised that I might always stay with you."

Martha's face fell from the wheedling expression it had assumed. She gave up the effort to persuade the child to wish to leave her as beyond her strength. She rose abruptly after a few minutes and walked to the stove. She lifted a lid and snatched the deed from her pocket.

"Why, what are you doing now?" Jacky asked, surprised at the nervous intensity of her actions.

Martha stopped herself shortly at his question.

"I was going to burn this paper, but maybe I'd better not," she muttered.

She sat down again, quite spent from the day's perplexities. She did not coherently plan what she should do. She let matters drift for the next few days.

Then one morning Mr. Crell came to her house with a notary and a deed all drawn up for her to sign. He gave her the deed to sign. She trembled and before she could write her name the pen fell to the floor. She would not pick it up. "I won't sell the land," she said. "Let this place go if it will, and Jacky and I are going to live on the shack on the river land."

Nothing the perplexed lawyer could say would alter this decision, and at last he took the notary away.

However, sincerely desirous of saving the old woman from the consequences of what seemed a strange vagary, Mr. Crell came to her another day, saying that he had arranged by telegraph to postpone the time of paying the mortgage.

But Martha stubbornly refused to alter her plans. She put a little furniture into the two-roomed log shack on the river property, and moved there with Jacky.

"There won't be any crime in just borrowing the land while I live," she told herself.

One evening, when they had been in the shack some weeks, as he sat studying the depressed lines that had come into her face, an idea occurred to Jacky.

"Granny," he broke out, "the reason we're not very cheerful here is just because we haven't enough honorableness."

Then, as Martha caught her breath, she glanced at him sharply.

"We ought to have grandfather's medal hanging up as it was at the cottage," he explained. "You see, Granny, we're always so proud and happy when we look at it and remember what a brave soldier he was. It makes us wish to be all honorable and right ourselves. Why Granny!"

Martha had suddenly dropped her face in her hands, and was swaying her poor old body to and fro.

"Jacky! Jacky!" she cried out, "Go get the medal, quickly!"

He flew for it, quite distracted at the remarkable effect of his words. He had merely repeated things she had often said to him.

Martha had controlled her agitation when he came back to her side after a few minutes. She was sitting up very straight and calm, and there was a brightness in her eyes, as if the spirit behind them was working strongly. Her mouth had dropped from the set look it had recently worn. It trembled slightly.

"Jacky," she said, "stand before me, my man. Jacky, you say that thinking of grandfather ought to make us brave and honorable. Do you mean it?"

"Oh, yes, Granny."

"And if he was ready to do his duty in his way, we must do ours in our way as bravely?"

"Ye-es, Granny."

"Then, Jacky, we shall. I'll do mine and you'll do yours, little lad, even though it's the hardest trial that could come for us to be parted." * * *

The next morning Martha carried the deed to Mr. Crell and told him the story of how she had found it and of her resolve to restore the land to Willis.

"Oh, Mrs. Brent!" he exclaimed when he was through reading it, springing up to grasp her hand. "How glad we are you brought me this at last! You say you were not able to read all of it? Well, Frederick Willis was a soldier serving with your husband, and the land is left him in gratitude for once saving Brent's life. It is mentioned here that Brent served under the assumed name of Clay. Now all to do is to find Willis, and through him prove Brent's identity, and we shall get your pension!"

"HOW GLAD WE ARE."

Thanksgiving Day, when Stephen Butts drove in from his ranch, Martha was back in her cottage. He looked at her pleasantly as she opened the door for him.

"I haven't come to urge you to let us have the boy, Martha," he said kindly. "Jenny said I shouldn't, since you're so set by each other."

He had his wagon loaded with pumpkins and butter and eggs and other good things produced on his ranch. He stored them away in Martha's chair.

"He shall direct thy paths," she murmured, with new fervor.

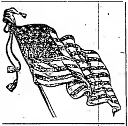
WEDNESDAY, NOV. 27, 1901.



The stand which Gov. Van Sant has taken in opposition to the giant railroad combination known as the Northern Securities Company, shows that he is not afraid to fight for the welfare of the people, and should win for him the unqualified approval and support of every citizen of the State of Minnesota.

An extra session of the legislature has been decided upon and will surely be held. This extra session is not called directly for the purpose enacting such laws as will disbar the Northern Securities company from operating in Minnesota, but it is understood that, if the existing laws should prove inadequate, good and sufficient laws will be passed to cover the case in point.

Gov. Van Sant has shown himself as the true friend of the masses and whether he wins or loses in the fight—for there will be a fight—he is right. The people will doff their hats to Governor Van Sant and support him to the end of the struggle.

A country exchange remarks that, "The home grown, hand-spanked barefooted, hard-fisted country boy makes a much better fight in the battle of life than the pampered, high-collared, creased-trousers youth of our cities, whose clothes have always been dusted with a whisk broom instead of a shingle. Let the town man out of a job try a year on the farm. Plowing behind a mule will take the kink out of his top-not, the frog out of his throat, the gas off his stomach, the weakness out off his legs, the corns off his toes, and will give him an appetite, an honest living and a sight of heaven.

Thieves entered the schoolhouse at McIntosh a few days ago and stole a lot of scientific equipments including dissecting instruments and magnifying glasses. They were evidently anxious to add to their education and it is too bad that the authorities have been unable to get hold of them and help them a little in their effort. Some prison education is what they need.

A Formidable Meal.

Sometimes the names given to different varieties of plants and vegetables are confusing, not to say startling. It sounds as if one had indulged in a most æsthetic meal to say, "I have just eaten an early rose." But when one remembers that Early Rose is the name of a popular variety of potato the æstheticism vanishes. Potatoes seem to be especially liable to have names bestowed on them which have a most "unedible" sound.

Two women out on a bicycle tour became hungry, and there was no inn in sight, but there was a farmhouse near by, and an old man was pottering about in the adjacent potato patch. To him they appealed for food. He promised to do what he could, saying that, at any rate, he could assure them of good potatoes, as he had every variety in his garden. The women enjoyed the meal and especially commended the potatoes.

"Yes," said the farmer, "you have not done so badly. You have eaten two Schoolmasters, two Blacksmiths, four Kidneys and a couple of White Elephants."

Three Ways.

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman, making a tour around the city a short time since, were observed looking through a confectioner's window at a beautiful young woman serving in the shop.

"Oh," exclaimed Mr. Patrick, "do let us be after spending half a crawn with the dear croytur, that we may look at her convaniently and have a bit of chat wid her."

"You extravagant dog," said Mr. Bull. "I'm sure one-half of the money will be sufficient. But let us go in, by all means. She's a charming girl."

"Ah, wait a wee," interposed Mr. McAndrew. "Dinna ye ken it'll serve our purpose equally weel just to ask the bonnie lassie to gie us twa sixpences for a shilling, and inquire where's Mr. Toompson's house and sic like. We're no hungry and may as weel save the siller."—Birmingham Mercury.

A WOMAN'S LOVE.

A sentinel angel sitting high in glory
Heard this shrill wail ring out from purgatory:
"Have mercy, mighty angel; hear my story!

"I loved, and, blind with passionate love, I fell.
Love brought me down to death and death to hell,
For God is just, and death for sin is well.

"I do not rage against his high decree
Nor for myself do ask that grace shall be,
But for my love on earth who mourns for me.

"Great Spirit, let me see my love again
And comfort him one hour, and I were fain
To pay a thousand years of fire and pain."

Then said the pitying angel: "Nay! Repent
That wild vow! Look! The dial finger's bent
Down to the last hour of thy punishment!"

But still she wailed: "I pray thee, let me go!
I cannot rise to peace and leave him so.
Oh, let me soothe him in his bitter woe!"

The brazen gates ground suddenly ajar,
And upward, joyous, like a rising star,
She rose and vanished in the ether far.

But soon adown the dying sunset sailing,
And like a wounded bird her pinions trailing,
She fluttered back, with broken hearted wailing.

She sobbed: "I found him by the summer sea
Reclined, his head upon a maiden's knee.
She curled his hair and kissed him. Woe is me!"

She wept: "Now let my punishment begin!
I have been fond and foolish. Let me in
To expiate my sorrow and my sin."

The angel answered: "Nay, sad soul; go higher!
To be deceived in your true heart's desire
Was bitterer than a thousand years of fire!"

DYNAMITE AND MINERS.

Long Immunity From Accident Results In Contempt of Danger.

"After a miner had handled dynamite for eight or ten years without a serious mishap it is a good idea to put him to doing something else about the works," said a gentleman of this city who has had a great deal of experience with high explosives. "The chances are a hundred to one that his long immunity from accident has given him such a contempt for danger that he is an unconscious menace to everybody on the premises. He will do things that not only imperil his own life, but the lives of all his comrades. To give you an illustration, once I had an old Cornishman at work at a mine in which I was interested and had intrusted him with a general supervision of all the blasting. He had been handling dynamite for twenty years or more and was justly regarded as an expert. During that entire period he had never had an accident worth speaking of, and by degrees the care and vigilance that were responsible for his excellent record had worn away until he was beginning to entertain the delusion, common to old hands, that the danger of the stuff was very much exaggerated.

"One day I was passing through a cut where some blasting had been going on and noticed the old Cornishman hammering a drill into what seemed to be a boring in the rock. I asked him what he was doing, and he told me coolly there was a cartridge in the hole that had failed to explode and he was 'just knockin' out the tampin' to reprime it.' I was horrified, for at every blow he was liable to explode the dynamite, and I ordered him sternly to stop and never repeat such a performance. The proper method would have been to have drilled a new hole near by and exploded the first charge with a second blast. He obeyed sullenly, grumbling to himself, and less than a month afterward was blown up while doing exactly the same thing. He lost his left arm at the shoulder, his left eye and part of his left ear. He also lost his contempt for dynamite, and when he finally emerged from the hospital I gave him back his former job. I never had a more scrupulously careful employee than he was from that time on. It seems a brutal thing to say, but there is nothing that does an old dynamite hand as much good as to get blown up once or twice."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Parental Economy.

"Papa," said Dicky, "all the other boys are going to have torpedoes or firecrackers or something for the Fourth of July. Can't I have anything at all?"

"Dicky," said Mr. Stinjey, beckoning mysteriously, "come with me, and I'll show you something."

He took him out to the summer kitchen and showed him a large package, neatly folded and tied with a string.

"There," he said, "are all the paper bags that have been brought into the house for a whole year from grocery stores and other places. I have had your mother save them for you. Every one of them will make as much noise as a firecracker if you fill it with air and pop it right."

It was not exactly what Dicky had set his heart on, but it was all the Fourth of July he got.—Youth's Companion.

Willing to Take Chances.

"So you're going to marry Mike?" said the mistress inquiringly.

"Yis, mum."

"Are you sure you are not making a mistake?"

"Well," returned the cook thoughtfully, "he's not the best man in the world, to be sure, but if I lave him go how kin I be sure of gittin' another wan? I've been thinkin' about it, an' it looks to me like it's right an' proper to take what ye kin git when ye kin git it. Them that holds off for the big prize has been known to lose the little wans. I think I'll take Mike."—Chicago Post.

The Usual Way.

"Do you expect to realize a fortune from your latest invention?" asked the capitalist.

"No," said the inventor, "I don't really expect to. I had some hopes, but I suppose it will be the usual programme. I'll imagine the fortune and some one else will realize it."—Washington Star.

I have lived to know that the secret of happiness is never to allow your energies to stagnate.—A. Clarke.

NATURE'S MISTAKES.

SOME THAT MEN CONSIDER TO BE OF REMARKABLE VALUE.

Paradoxical as It May Appear, the Perfection of a Precious Stone Is Largely Due to Some Imperfection In Its Making by Nature.

Paradoxical as it may appear, the perfection of a gem is largely due to some imperfection in its make. Some little mistake made in the laboratory of nature produces a defective stone which is perfection itself from the lapidary's point of view. Ninety-nine out of every hundred emeralds dug from the mine are almost white and of little value, but the hundredth one is of a rich velvety green and, if without other flaws than its color, sells for $300 a carat or 240 times as much as its colorless brother. The reason of the rich color which gives the emerald its value is that nature, in making the stone, put in too much oxide of chromium, just as the cook sometimes gets too much saleratus in the biscuits. The standard of perfection in the laboratory of nature is the colorless emerald, and her deep green ones are some of her failures; failures which, nevertheless, delight mankind, however much they may disgust nature. You could buy a ton of oxide of chromium for the price which half a grain of it gives to a cheap and common crystal.

When nature makes mistakes in manufacturing diamonds, the results are equally remarkable. Her standard for a diamond is a pure white stone, but sometimes a foreign substance gets into the crucible, and the result is a red or blue diamond. A fine white brilliant of one carat can be bought for $125, but a blue stone of that size would be cheap at $3,500. A red diamond is of even greater value, a red stone of fifteen grains having been sold for $5,000. Yet the little particle of foreign material which nature carelessly let fall into the mixture when she was making that stone down in the heart of some primeval volcano is of less value than a grain of common salt and only got there by mistake.

Nature manufactures in her laboratory a material called spinel. You can buy a block of spinel as large as you can carry for a few dollars. Sometimes in making spinel small quantities of chromic acid get into the material and color it a deep red. The pieces so colored nature rejects as spoiled in the making and throws them in the dust bin, from which men dig them out and call them rubies. A ruby of thirty-two carats recently sold for $52,000. Yet the material of the cheap spinel and the valuable ruby are practically the same, save for that small fraction of chromic acid which got into the ruby by mistake.

When nature starts out to manufacture opals, she endeavors to make them without any cracks in them. In this she seldom succeeds, coming nearest to perfection in the Mexican opals, which have few cracks in them and therefore little luster. The fiery glow of the oriental opal and the play of light in the depths of that exquisite stone are due entirely to the numberless cracks which seam the surface of the gem. It must give nature a poor opinion of mankind when she sees him selling the Mexican opals, which are nearly perfect, for 12 cents a carat and paying $25 a carat for her failures, the cracked fire opal of the east.

Not only in gems, but in many other things, does nature make mistakes and failures, the results of which are highly valued by men. The chank shell, a shell much like the conch shell of these shores, is one of the commonest shells on the beaches of India, and millions of them are gathered and burned for the lime that is in them. Yet in a temple near Kandy, Ceylon, are two chank shells which hold the place of honor in a shrine covered with gold, and no amount of money could buy them from their guardian priests. Their value consists in the fact that nature was not quite herself the morning she fabricated these shells and gave a right handed twist to them instead of a left handed one, such as has been given to all other chank shells, so far as man knows, since the beginning.

Baron Rothschild once paid $300 a dozen for some Schloss Johannisberg wine, and it is admitted that, taking everything into consideration, it was not an exorbitant price. Yet the wine of the same year from the vineyard directly adjoining the Johannisberg vineyard, on the same bank of the Rhine, a vineyard whose soil is, to all appearances, the same, only brought $5 a dozen. And there is no special secret about the manufacture of Johannisberg wine or about the variety of grape used. Its great value comes from a little joke of nature. In the soil of the Johannisberg vineyard there is an infinitesimal amount of a certain salt which is found in the soil of no other vineyard. The admixture is so slight that no chemist has ever been able to imitate it, yet it is worth many thousands a year to the owner of the vineyard.

When Gold Looks Green.

Gold can be beaten out so thin that it allows light to pass through it, in which case, though it still appears brilliant yellow by reflected light, it is green as viewed by transmission—that is, by the light that passes through it. This curious effect can easily be observed by laying a piece of gold leaf upon a plate of glass and holding it between the eye and the light, when the gold will appear semitransparent and of a leek green color.

And There Are Others.

Waggs—Old man Blowitt has a remarkable memory, hasn't he?

Naggs—Wonderful. Why, he actually remembers a lot of things that never happened.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Warts.

A simple remedy for warts is a dram of salicylic acid with an ounce of collodium in a bottle which has a tiny brush run through the cork. Apply this mixture to the warts twice a day, and in a few days they will dry up and fall off.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Recreant.

"I trust, Brudder Eph'm," said the pastor, "you is still walkin' in de straight an' narrer path?"

"I'ze sorry to say, pahsun," replied Uncle Eph'm, deeply penitent, "I'ze backslode a good deal lately."—Chicago Tribune.

Origin of Ice Cream Soda.

According to a Wisconsin legend, ice cream soda had its origin in Milwaukee, the town that made lager beer famous. A confectioner whose trade was among the wealthy used to make a good, rich soda water by adding to it, when drawn, pure cream. His trade rapidly increased, and one night when he had a crowd to serve he ran out of cream. In desperation he used a small quantity of ice cream to give the drink the proper rich consistency, and what resulted is history.—Beverages.

Failed to Reach Canada.

N. B. Hannoy made a hurried trip to Stephen last week as the result of information received to the effect that N. O. Ostrom, a farmer who has been renting the Gus Peterson place near Wylie, had departed northwards towards the Canadian line taking with him some property on which the Bank of St. Hilaire held a chattel mortgage. The amount due was in the neighborhood of $150. When Mr. Hannay reached Stephen he took Sheriff Fosberg of Marshall county with him and together they started east to Greenbush a distance of perhaps 45 miles where they overhauled Ostrom and the mortgaged property. It did not take long to induce Mr. Ostrom to settle the claim which he did by paying part cash and turning over his team to cover the balance. Mr. Ostrom may finish his journey across the line at will but he will have to either walk or buy other meons of transportation. Verily, the way of tho transgressor is hard—when he tries to remove mortgaged property and gets caught at it.

Womb troubles, causing pain, weight, and backache, instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the laws that govern the female system, and is as harmless as water.

It quickly removes that Bearing-down Feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, Dizziness, Faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues," and backache. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Thrifty Newsboy.

As an instance of thrift, no better example, perhaps, can be found in all Boston than that afforded by Joseph Jollos of this city. About five years ago he emigrated from Kiev, Russia, to this country with less than $1 in his pocket. With this capital he began selling papers at the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets. With the exception of one morning, this time owing to illness, he has been found at his stand every morning for five years. His average earnings have been about $1 per day. From this small income he has been able to support himself and place in a savings bank $1,000. On Wednesday he and his brother Jacob bought, in the North End, a house, for which they paid $3,000, making a partial payment and giving a mortgage for the remainder. This young financier now expects to withdraw from the paper business and engage in the shoe trade in Salem street. He has two brothers in this country and three sisters. His parents are still in Russia.—Boston Post.

An Aspect of Innocence.

At the town of Alacranes, Gen. Wood spent some time visiting the jail. He had all the prisoners lined up before him, and he asked one after another for what reason he was there. Pointing to one fellow, he said:

"What are you here for?"

The man looked up, fearlessly, and said:

"Because a cow was seen walking behind me."

The fellow made the statement in such an injured manner that everyone in the party had to laugh, including the jailer, who hastened to explain to the general that the reason the cow was walking behind him was that he had a rope attached to her.—Havana Post.

As to the Next "Multi."

What will eventually be the limit of individual wealth? Half a century ago "ten thousand a year" was considered to be a vast fortune. Then "fifty thousand a year" was the phrase commonly used to describe the income of fabulously rich men or women. Later we took to speaking of "millionaires." In quite recent times the "multi-millionaire," with twenty millions, had reached the limit of private wealth; then forty millions; now the limit has risen to a hundred millions, and already the word "billionaire" has come into use in the United States. Will the multi-billionaire ever replace the multi-millionaire?

Miller's Ready Response.

De Witt Miller, the Chautauqua lecturer, was conducting a "question box" at a recent assembly of one of the local branches. It was the privilege of the audience to ask Mr. Miller questions for the lecturer to answer. One woman asked: "What do you think of the faith cure?"

"Somewhat after the manner of the man who said that those who believed in the 'mind cure' had very little faith. I will say that those who believe in the faith cure have very little mind," was Miller's ready response.—New York Times.

His Grievance.

Cleek—What, glum? And so soon after the honeymoon? Isn't your wife all your fancy painted her

Bunker—Oh, yes; but she can't golf a little bit.

Cleek—And you grumble at that? Why?

Bunker—But she thinks she can.—Brooklyn Life.

Another Disputed Claim.

"Well," said the first bicyclist, "we ought to be right in the middle of Biggsville, according to that map; yet, as you may see for yourself, we are on a mud road, some miles from anywhere."

"I can't understand it," said the second bicyclist, "unless the map was made by some of those naval experts."—Baltimore American.

Connubialities.

Mrs. Billus—John, you ought not to be so hard upon the young man who comes to see Bessie. You were a young lover once, yourself, and my recollection is that you were sometimes a very silly one.

Mr. Billus—Silly? I was an idiot, Maria; I was an idiot! I've found it out since!—Tit-Bits.

Need Going After.

"Do you believe that all things come to him who waits?"

"No," replied the hustler, decisively. "Pretty nearly everything that a man wants doesn't come to him who waits, but the things worth having come to him who gets up and humps himself."—Chicago News.

SAMPSON'S SON TO BE A CADET.

President Will Carry Out McKinley's Promise to the Admiral.

Washington, Nov. 21.—President Roosevelt has informed an applicant for a cadetship at the naval academy that the next at-large appointment will be given a son of Rear Admiral William T. Sampson. This was in accordance with a promise made by President McKinley to Admiral Sampson. The president has informed applicants for appointments that he will adhere to the practice of giving vacancies at West Point and Annapolis to sons of army and naval officers and to those also of distinguished officers in the Confederacy.

Parental Sarcasm.

"Yes," said Farmer Corntossel, "our boy Josiah is devoting a good deal of time to games and light literature jes' at present."

"Isn't that rather an unprofitable result?"

"Yes. But, you see, all the cabinet offices an' big diplomatic places is filled; so I reckon Josiah feels that there ain't much else for him to do at present."—Washington Star.

The Bishop as a Parishioner.

It is told of Frederick Temple, now archbishop of Canterbury, that when he was Bishop of London he was examining theological students on the matter of parish calls, and offered himself as an object-lesson for such a call. He went into the next room and lay down on a sofa, with his face to the wall, and a young Irishman, whose lot it was, entering directly after, walked up to him, laid his hand on Dr. Temple's shoulder, and said: "Ah, Frederick, Frederick!—the drink again!"

Whisky and Whiskey.

What is the difference between whisky and whiskey? Most people imagine that it is a mere difference in spelling, but a correspondent writes that, in answer to a written order for whisky, given to a spirit merchant, Scotch was sent. This led to a personal interview with the seller, at which it was pointed out that the customer always bought Irish, never Scotch. The order was referred to, and the merchant, placing his finger on the word whisky, said, without an "e" it denoted Scotch; if Irish was required the spelling should be whiskey. It would be interesting to know why "e" should spell "Irish."—London Chronicle.

Buffalo Bill's Horses.

Buffalo Bill greatly bewails the loss of his horses in the recent railroad accident to his show. "All these horses," he says, "were thoroughly trained and experienced, and it will take time and money to replace them. It is not easy to train these mustangs, and even after they're well trained, they need experience to become reliable and serviceable. Insured for $250 apiece, they were worth at least $1,000 each to me. My horses have to do so much more than the circus horse that they cannot be so readily replaced. I have already made arrangements for another lot, and will soon have them in training at the Bridgeport winter quarters."—New York Times.

For weakness, stiffness and soreness in aged people use Wizard Oil. Your druggist knows this and sells the oil.

The Raw Food Habit.

Just now the raw food diet threatens to become a fad. Certainly many people are experimenting with the new diet idea. It would be far better for the average man or woman to adopt an absolutely raw diet, and eat everything which he could possibly eat or relish in a perfectly raw state, than to swallow into his stomach the horrible messes which are concocted by the average cook. It is safer, on the whole, for man to take his food as he finds it in its natural state than to take it as he finds it on the table of the average boarding house or hotel. In other words, it is safer for man to take his food straight from the hands of his Maker than from the hands of a French cook.—Good Health.

Great Bets in History.

Lord George Bentinck, in 1843, in betting on his horse Gasper, for the Derby, stood to win $720,000, but saved himself on Cotherstone, and netted $144,000.

At another time, a bet of $432,000 against $144,000 was booked between Lord Glasgow and Lord George Bentinck.

The marquis of Hastings bet and lost $494,000 on the Hermit's Derby.

Bell & Co. of Wall street, in August, 1900, had $250,000 placed in their hands to bet on President McKinley, at odds of 2 1-2 to 1. Their offer was absorbed in fractions.

Lord Dudley bet $120,000 to $10,000 on Peter in a race at Ascot with a bookmaker named Morris. Peter was beaten.

A syndicate, headed by a man named Lambert won $400,000 on Don Juan in the Cesarewitch at Newmarket in 1883.

SHOULD HAVE BEEN AN ACTOR.

He Did Not Want to Pay What He Owed His Neighbors, This Farmer.

"Look here," said a Suffolk farmer to a friend, "I'm going to kill my pig, but I owe so much pork to my neighbors that I shall have none left for myself if I pay it all back. What would you do?"

"Quite easy to trick 'em," said the friend. "Kill your pig and leave it hanging outside until late at night, so everyone can see it. Then take it in, and say someone stole it. Stick to the tale, and you'll be all right."

The farmer followed instructions, and the kind friend watched his chance and stole the pig. The poor farmer came around the next morning to tell what had happened.

"Somebody has stolen my pig!" he cried.

"Good!" said the friend. "Stick to it, and the neighbors'll believe you, sure enough."

"But it was stolen, I tell you!"

"Excellent!" quoth the friend. "Just you stick to that tale."

"You confounded ass!" yelled the farmer. "Don't you understand? It was really stolen."

"Superb!" laughed the delighted friend. "You ought to have been an actor, so you ought."

That Suffolk farmer slammed the door and went away fuming.—London Answers.

CANADA'S CAPITAL AROUSED.

Never Was There Such Excitement —Physicians' Association Trying to Explain.

Ottawa, Canada, Nov. 25th.—This city is stirred up as never before. Some seven years ago the local papers published an account of a man named George H. Kent, of 408 Gilmour street, who was dying of Bright's Disease, and who, at the very last moment, after several of the best physicians had declared he couldn't live twelve hours, was saved by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

People who knew how low Mr. Kent was refused to believe that he was cured permanently, and the other day, in order to clinch the matter, the papers published the whole case over again and backed up their story by sworn statements made by Mr. Kent, in which he declares most positively that in 1894 he was given up by the doctors, and that Dodd's Kidney Pills, and nothing else, saved him, and further, that since the day that Dodd's Kidney Pills sent him back to work, seven years ago, he has not lost a single minute from his work. (He is a printer in the American Bank Note Printing Company.)

Mr. Kent is kept quite busy during his spare hours answering inquiries, personally and by letter, but he is so grateful that he counts the time well spent. Indeed, he and his wife have shown their gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills in a very striking way by having their little girl—born in 1896—christened by the name of "Dodds."

Altogether, it is the most sensational case that has ever occurred in the history of medicine in Canada, and the perfect substantiation of every detail leaves no room to doubt either the completeness or the permanency of the cure.

The local physicians have made the case of Kent and Dodd's Kidney Pills the subject of discussion at several of the private meetings of their association.

A hansom price, I must allow—but hidin' sum deceits.
Beet sugar manyfacterers admit es they hev found
Thet "granylated" costs 'em sumthin' like tew cents a pound.
In fact thet leaves a profit on which they'd greatly thrive—
And—if it kin be sold fer three, why should we pay 'em FIVE?
It seems ter me es thet's a game thet's mighty like a skin—
But—if thar's any benefit—waal,—whar dew I cum in?

When Uncle Sam's in want o' cash we're glad ter help him out,
'N we'll stand all the taxes thet are needed, never doubt,
But when his pocket-book's well lined an' nary cent he lacks,
Et seems ter me his duty's ter repeal thet sugar tax.
Them fellers wot is interested sez its to protect
The beet-producin' farmer thet the duty they collect,
But I guess thet explanation's a little bit too thin—
The sugar maker,—he's all right;—but—whar dew we cum in?

Take off raw sugar duty an' the price will quickly fall,
To everybody's benefit, fer sugar's used by all.
The poor will bless the Government thet placed it in thar reach—
('n millions of our citizens free sugar now beseech)
The dealer 'll be delighted—less expenditure fer him—
More demand 'n bigger profits—which at present are but slim.
An' the farmer 'll be as well paid as he ever yet hes ben—
But he'll buy his sugar cheaper—thet's whar he an' I'll cum in.

Now, whar's the sense er reason of the sugar tax to-day,
When our treasury's a-bulgin' an' we hev no debts ter pay?
The duty on raw sugar's Fifty million every year—
An' the people's got ter pay it—thet's a fact thet's very clear;
Fifty million! Great Jerusha! Ter protect beet magnates, too,
Why should they tax ALL the people—just ter help a scattered FEW?
And the FEW? Beet-sugar MAKERS! Don't it really seem a sin
Thus ter help an' fill thar coffers?! Whar dew you an' I cum in?

The farmer growin' beets hes got a contract price fer years,—
Free raw sugar wouldn't hurt him, an' of it he hes no fears.
But mebbe, like myself—he's also growing fruit so nice—
Ter preserve it—at a profit—he needs sugar—at a price!
The repealing of the duty surely cuts the price in two—
Thet'll make a mighty difference, neighbor, both ter me an' you!
Let the sugar manyfacterer make such profits as he kin,—
Ter him it may seem right enuff—but whar dew I cum in?

An' I ain't a-goin' ter swaller all the argyments they shout
Thet the farmers need protection—an' must bar raw sugar out.
Common sense is plainly showin' that the people in the land
Want raw sugar free in future—an' its freedom will demand.
'Tis a tax no longer needed—hateful to the public view,—
Taxing millions of our people to enrich a favored few.
They can't blind me any longer with the foolish yarns they spin,—
While they're busy makin' money—whar dew you and I come in?

I'm a-goin' ter keep on hustlin', talkin', pleadin' with my frends,—
Ain't no sense in lettin' others gain thar selfish privet ends
I'm a-goin' ter write ter-morrer to my Congressman 'nd say
Thet he oughter do his best ter kill that tax without delay!
Feller-farmers, do your utmost—whether you grow beets or not
To repeal the tax on sugar—you can but improve your lot!
Cheaper sugar helps your pocket, greater blessings you can win—
When we've three-cent granylated—that's whar you an' I come in!"

A Great Traveler.

Among the women who have become famous as travelers, the Russian Princess Demidoff is conspicuous. Her husband was educated in England, and there acquired a taste for athletic sports and hunting, and has shot "big game" in Europe and Asia. In his travels he has been accompanied by his wife, who has stalked the chamois in the Caucasus, caught 150 trout in a single day in the Big Laba, journeyed across Asia to Japan and thence to Kamchatka and shared in perilous adventures of every kind.

The princess is a daughter of Count Warnskoff Daschkoff, who was once at the head of the czar's household, and is said to be extremely pretty and charming. Her accomplishments include the art of cooking, and she has been known in her travels to make fresh rolls to accompany the trout she had caught.

COLLIDE IN A FOG

CROWDED STEAMERS CRASH TOGETHER IN SAN FRANCISCO BAY.

FIFTY LIVES REPORTED LOST

CRAZED PASSENGERS INDULGE IN WILD FIGHT TO REACH SAFETY.

DUE TO A MISTAKE IN SIGNALS

SURVIVING SHIP STANDS BY AND PICKS UP THE PASSENGERS.

San Francisco, Dec. 2.—During the heaviest fog which has occurred here for years the ferry boats San Rafael and Sausalito, plying between this city and Sausalito in Marin county, collided off Alcatraz Island. The former vessel was sunk.

The earlier reports place the number of lives lost at fifty, but so far as can now be determined only three persons perished. About twenty passengers were more or less injured.

The San Rafael left this side of the bay with some 200 passengers, mostly women and children, at 6:30 o'clock. When half way between the city and Alcatraz island, about twenty minutes later, the whistle of a steamer, apparently on the port bow, was heard, and the captain of the San Rafael slowed down his engines and proceeded at less than half-speed.

Mistake in Signals.

Whistles were exchanged between the two vessels, but the captain of the Sausalito evidently misunderstood the San Rafael's signals, for a few minutes after her first whistle had been heard the Sausalito emerged from the fog and crashed stern-on into the port side of the San Rafael just abaft the paddlebox, opening a great gap in the latter vessel's side for some distance below the water line. The crash was followed by the utmost confusion on both vessels, but as the Sausalito reversed her engines and backed away from the San Rafael, the passengers and crew of the latter vessel, imagining that the former was about to abandon them to their fate, gave way to their fears and a scene of indescribable confusion ensued. Life belts were cut down from their hangings and served out to

The Frantic People

by their cooler companions, while the terror-stricken crew rushed to the ship's boats. In the midst of the confusion the Sausalito steamed slowly alongside the sinking San Rafael and, with some difficulty, succeeded in getting a couple of lines aboard, with which they were moored together. Instantly there was a frantic rush over the side of the sinking ship to the Sausalito, and men and women fought desperately at the bulwarks of the doomed vessel in their haste to reach a place of safety. The crew of the Sausalito attempted to restore some sort of order, but they were utterly unable to stem the surging tide of humanity. To add to the scene of horror, many of the fear-crazed people jumped into the bay from the sinking ship, while the shrieks of the injured and frightened women and children, for

Many Had Been Hurt

when the collision occurred, added to the confusion. Suddenly, when most of the San Rafael's passengers had been transferred to the Sausalito, the former vessel gave a lurch, and, just as the lines mooring her to the Sausalito had been cast off, the San Rafael sank beneath the waters of the bay. The officers and crew of the Sausalito lowered her boats and picked up a number of the San Rafael's passengers, but as the Sausalito herself was slightly damaged, it was not considered safe to remain long after the disappearance of the former vessel, and she was headed, as her captain thought, for this city. Instead, she steamed out to the Heads in the dense fog, and was picked up some two hours later by a passing tug, which conveyed her to her slip.

SIXTY-EIGHT WERE KILLED.

Detroit Paper Recapitulates Deaths in Wabash Wreck.

Detroit, Dec. 2.—The Tribune prints an exhaustive argument that will tend to show that at least 68 people lost their lives in the Wabash wreck near Seneca, Mich., Wednesday night. It says that a recapitulation of the deaths in the wreck shows the following:

Train No. 4—Five passengers, 1 colored porter; total, 6.

Train No. 13—Firemen Raldorf and Dowd; 4 Italians, bodies identified, 56 Italians not accounted for in the identified dead, injured or the wounded; total, 62.

This gives a grand total of 68 dead on both trains.

SEVEN FIREMEN OVERCOME.

Heavy Fire Loss in Rochester, N. Y., Covered by Insurance.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Fire which started in the heart of the business section of the city about midnight damaged stock in Woolworth's store to the extent of $30,000, and the loss on the building was $20,000. The large department store of Burke, Fitzsimmons & Hone Company was also damaged, but the loss is not known. Some damage was also done by smoke to F. T. McFarland's stock of clothing. The losses are covered by insurance. Seven firemen were overcome and removed to the hospital.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 2.—Will Power, aged nineteen years, member of a well known family of Humboldt, Neb., while engaged in a football game at Auburn was making a run with the ball for a touchdown, when he was tripped, fell, and several players rallied on top of him. REED'S RULES TO STAND.

Republican Caucus Decides an Old Methods—Henderson Nominated.

Washington, Dec. 2. — Thomas B. Reed's celebrated rules will be adopted by the Fifty-seventh congress without opposition. This was decided upon Saturday by the Republican caucus, which nominated Gen. David B. Henderson as the next speaker and chose the old officers of the house to fill their respective positions for another congress. The decision of the caucus was not reached without opposition, as Representative Hepburn of Iowa attempted to have the rules adopted for a period of forty days, to give the new members an opportunity to study them.

At the Democratic caucus, also held Saturday, the chief feature was a proposal that all members of the minority seek no patronage from the administration. There was a clash over the silver issue between Bell of Texas and McClellan of New York. Others took part and serious trouble seemed at hand, when Mr. Richardson secured postponement of the discussion of all propositions until a committee of twelve reports on a declaration of party policy to a caucus on Jan. 10. Richardson of Tennessee was chosen minority leader and other honorary nominations were made.

CHINA DEFIES THE POWERS.

Is Boldly Violating a Condition of the Protocol.

Washington, Dec. 2.—Definite information has been received by the state department that the Chinese government is violating that condition of the international peace protocol which forbids the importation of firearms, material for their men and ammunition in China for a period of two years. China's boldness in this defying the powers causes much surprise here, particularly as the temper of the nations concerned in suppressing the Boxer troubles has not entirely been appeased and further transgression is likely to prove disastrous for the Flowery Kingdom. The question of the proper method of dealing with China's violation is under consideration, and it is said that a protest will be addressed by the United States and other nations to that government.

DISPLAY OF WILD WEST TACTICS.

Desperadoes Terrorize a Peaceful Town.

Alliance, Ohio, Dec. 2.—Three desperadoes gave a display of Wild West tactics here yesterday. They entered two houses, held up the inmates, held up seven persons on the street and finally stole a horse and buggy with which they made their escape. The home of Mrs. Margaret Teeters was the first entered, where she and her son Carl were robbed of their jewelry and $20. While one of the three guarded the Teeters home, two others entered the home of ex-Senator Silas J. Williams, next door, but got nothing. They next tried to enter a saloon, but were met at the door by Lawrence Cavanaugh, who, though covered by revolvers, shouted for help. Some young men who ran to Cavanaugh's assistance, were covered by the revolvers of the highwaymen and made to give up their valuables. The trio then jumped into a carriage stolen from a livery and got away. The police are on their trail.

St. Louis, Dec. 2.—While in a drunken frenzy last night Joseph Florry, a clerk in the employ of the Graubaer Ice company, stabbed his wife three times in the breast with a huge hunting knife and then cut his own throat, both dying instantly. BULLER IN FAVOR

A REMARKABLE DEMONSTRATION HELD IN THE GENERAL'S HONOR.

POLICE PREVENT SERIOUS RIOT

BIGGEST THING OF ITS KIND THAT HAS OCCURRED FOR MANY YEARS.

THOUSANDS OF MEN PARADE

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY FOR BULLER ADOPTED WITH ENTHUSIASM.

London, Dec. 2.—Yesterday was a day of excitement in London, and the authorities are thankful that "Buller Sunday" passed off without a serious riot. As it was the presence of the police in force prevented trouble, but in one instance the action of the police nearly precipitated a clash.

It is estimated that 50,000 people were at Hyde Park. This marks the biggest thing of its kind that has occurred for many years.

The government had taken every precaution to prevent disturbances. This included the reading, at three parades last week, of a special order in the military regulations which forbids officers or soldiers from "taking part in any meetings, demonstrations or processions for party or political purposes." A large body of police, many of whom were mounted, were of the procession's march and notably in front of the war office. The trade unions and workmen societies, with flags and banners, assembled along the embankment in the afternoon. There were thousands of spectators. Owing to the difficulty of marshaling the large bodies of men the procession was late in starting. It was headed by a huge banner, on which was a portrait of Gen. Buller. The procession traveled up Northumberland avenue, Pall Mall, St. James and Picadilly to Hyde Park. The windows of clubs, especially of the service clubs, were crowded by sightseers. At Charing Cross several mounted police rode up in the head of the procession and attempted to seize a plaster bust of Gen. Buller. The men carrying the bust, dashed it to the ground. This incident caused much indignation, but the leaders were able to curb and some of whom wished to attack the policemen. Opposite the war office there was considerable groaning and cries of "shame" from the men in the procession, but otherwise the proceedings were without incident.

Stationed Along the Line

Restrain the Paraders,

When Hyde Park was reached it was almost dark. Here speeches from several platforms representing England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Devonshire and the colonies were made. The confusion was so great as to render the words of speakers almost inaudible, but amid a roar of cheers, a resolution of sympathy for Gen. Buller was proposed and adopted with great enthusiasm and amid waving of handkerchiefs and hats.

Features of the demonstration were the passing of collection boxes for a workingmen's memorial to Gen. Buller and the large sale of buttonhole portraits and favors of the general.

DEFIES MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Mrs. Pullman Will Accompany Her Husband's Body to the East.

San Francisco, Dec. 2.—Mrs. George M. Pullman, Jr., who married the the Chicago millionaire's son last September, has retained George Knight of this city to begin suit for her husband's share of the rich Pullman estate. She will also accompany the body to the East in defiance to her mother-in-law's wishes. As Pullman was scarcely able to walk about when he married, and as he failed rapidly thereafter and drank incessantly, his will giving his wife all his estate, is open to suspicion of illegality. His friends say he was passionately enamored of Mrs. Brazell, and waited impatiently two years to secure his divorce. Two days after he was free he married her in Nevada. The Pullman estate is worth $3,000,000, and George's share would have been $2,000,000.

HER BABY BAKED.

Iowa Woman Places Her Child in the Oven to Keep It Warm.

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 2. — Mrs. J. Fred Meyers, living five miles from Correctionville, wrapped her five-months-old baby in a blanket, put her in the oven of the kitchen stove to keep warm and went out into the yard to gather fuel. When half an hour later she came back the fire in the stove had blazed up and the room was filled with smoke. Rushing to the oven she found the flames leaping from the blanket and clothes and body of the infant. Life was already extinct and the limbs were burned to a crisp.

LUMBERJACKS DRINK AND DIE.

Wood Alcohol, Diluted, the Only Stuff They Could Get.

Two Harbors, Minn., Dec. 1. — Two lumberjacks named David Cummings and Mike Montroy, employed at the Nestor camps on the Gooseberry river, sixteen miles from here, died yesterday from the effects of drinking some stuff, supposed to be wood alcohol. They had no liquor in the camps, but in some way got hold of this stuff, diluted it and drank it. Both died within a few hours. A cookee also drank some, but he will recover, though his condition is critical. The bodies of the dead men were brought to the morgue here and will be held until their relatives are heard from. Cummings' relatives live near here, while it is reported that Montroy is from Detroit, Mich.

BANK CASHIER MISSING.

Strange to Say He Leaves Bank's Affairs in Good Shape.

Montague, Mich., Dec. 1. — Henry H. Terwilliger, cashier of the Montague bank, a private institution, is missing from Montague. Thursday William S. Nufer of Whitehall received a communication from him enclosing two deeds assigning the bank's business to Mr. Nufer and C. L. Streng of Montague, as trustees. Mr. Terwilliger also enclosed a statement in which he says he left the bank's affairs in such shape that no one can say he is a defaulter. His statement that the bank's assets exceeded its liabilities by $15,000 is borne out by an investigation finished yesterday. In a note to his wife he says he is a wanderer on the face of the earth and that he will never return to Montague. It is the general belief that Mr. Terwilliger's mind has been affected by long and close application to business.

In addition to these gifts he gave to the Hebrew home for the aged in Chicago $50,000, and many other gifts for lesser amounts have been given to worthy institutions.

INCENDIARY FIRE.

Four Times in Eighteen Months Firebugs Attack Same Property.

Champion, Mich., Dec. 1. — Champion Iron company's big hay barn, containing eighty tons of hay, burned last night. The fire was of incendiary origin, and is the fourth time in the past eighteen months that the barn has been set on fire. The incendiary also made several attempts to burn the warehouse and other buildings owned by the Champion Iron company. The town is without equipment for fighting fires, but several hundred men prevented a big conflagration by the use of buckets.

The ranchers and farmers have had a good year, especially in stock, small grain and potatoes.

General Search for Lost Boy.

Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 1. — Alfonso, the four-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bulger, has disappeared from home. After an all-day's search by almost the entire neighborhood the little fellow was finally discovered at dusk by his father on the top of a high hill beyond Van Buren avenue above the stone quarry. He would probably have died had he remained out over night, for he was thinly clad.

BLAZE AT OSNABROCK.

Many Structures Go Up in Smoke in a Period of About Two Hours.

Grand Forks, N. D., Dec. 2.—The best business block in Osnabrock burned. Fire started in Dan McAllin's general store from some unknown cause, and nothing could be done to stop the progress of the flames till the buildings in the entire block were lapped up. The losers are as follows: Syverud Bros., general store; Dan McAllin, general store; Bidlake & Kitchin, hardware; Bennett, hardware; McAllin Bros., confectionery; Kelstad & Bangs, jewelry and confectionery. Every building was burned to the ground, with almost all the contents. Desperate efforts were made to stop the fire, but one by one the buildings caught fire and went up in smoke. The amount of goods saved was very small. Pott's general store also caught fire and was saved with the greatest difficulty. The fire finally burned itself out.

TERROR TO RATTLERS.

South Dakota Boy Kills Over Three Hundred Reptiles.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 2. — James Donegan, the young son of J. F. Donegan, an Aurora county farmer, this season broke all records for boys of his age in the number of rattlesnakes killed within a given time. In a certain locality in Aurora county is a veritable rattlesnakes' den, the only one of the kind in the state east of the Missouri river, and people residing in the vicinity are accustomed to give the spot a wide berth. Young Donegan was engaged all season in herding cattle near the rattlesnake den, and, when opportunity offered, he waged war against the venomous reptiles. The result was that during the season he killed a total of 341 rattlesnakes. As the township authorities pay a bounty of 15 cents for each of the rattles the young lad added over $50 to his summer's earnings from this source.

Hennepin County Official Charged With Malfeasance.

Minneapolis, Dec. 2.—Sheriff Philip T. Megaarden is temporarily suspended from office and will be under a cloud until the evidence taken in the charges against him have been passed upon by the governor. Then he will be either exonerated or removed. The governor took summary action in the case Saturday afternoon and issued an order suspending the sheriff of Hennepin county, pending the investigation. Aside from making this order he appointed Robert Stratton and Thomas H. Salmon a commission to sit and hear the evidence for and against the accused. The charge against Megaarden is malfeasance in office.

FATAL CATTLE DISEASE.

Farmers Do Not Know the Cause and Want an Investigation.

Anoka, Minn., Dec. 2. — Frank Rupprecht, a prominent farmer of Burns, lost several cattle last week from some peculiar disease. He thought it was due to overpacking their stomachs with corn fodder, having let them in a field when the stalks were still standing. Development failed to prove such the case, only to a partial extent. He has taken the matter to the state board of health and an investigation will be made. This case is one of several similar ones, other farmers in this vicinity having lost cattle recently. The symptoms are different from anything any veterinarian seems acquainted with.

An Interesting Letter from Washington

Clearbrook Wash., Nov. 28.

Editor Spectator:

Dear Sir:—When I left St. Hilaire last May I promised to write you a few lines for the Spectator so that you and all my friends in St. Hilaire might know how I found things here in Washington.

To begin with I will say that during the seven months we have been here we have all been well. We stayed about four months around Tacoma while I was looking over the country.

The upland around Tacoma is very sandy and poor. It has been heavily timbered but most of the good timber is cut off. It is, however, settling up very fast and strawberries and other fruits are the main crops. This land sells at from about $25 to $75 per acre. The valley land is all very rich—that is, it is very productive—and hops, hay, berries, fruit and potatoes are the principal crops. But, so far as good rich agricultural land is concerned, I dont believe I have seen a foot of land as good as your black soil in the Red River Valley. The climate we have here makes every thing grow almost everywhere. This valley land sells at from $100 to $150 per acre. Most of the farms consist of from 10 to 20 acres each and they take as high as $300 from a single acre of berries or rhubarb. Markets are good for all kinds of farm produce every-where on the Sound.

In August I bought a ranch, as they call it here, of 170 acres here at Clearbrook. We are 20 miles inland from Puget Sound. New Whatcom and Fairhaven are our nearest cities. The population of Whatcom is about 10,000 and that of Fairhaven 3,000. They are about two miles apart and are connected by the G. N. Railroad and electric cars. New Whatcom is our county seat and lies right on the edge of the salt water. Hardware, groceries, dry goods and clothing are fully as cheap here as in St. Hilaire. Boots and shoes, tinware and farming implements are higher. Very little wheat is raised this side of the Cascade Mountains. Corn does not do half so well here as Julius Pleth's corn did around St. Hilaire this summer. In the next county to us oats is their chief crop and they raise it to perfection. Oats really does well every where. Around here, where I live stock raising and dairying are their chief industries. There is very little cleared land and it costs from $25 to $50 per acre to clear it.

Pasture is good among the stumps and stock looks well. Fruit does fully as well here as anywhere on the coast. Red clover and alsike grow here to perfection. Some brag of having cut six tons from one acre in two cuttings, but three to four tons is probably the average. On new ground the second crop is fully as good as the first. We have had no frost or snow yet and the grass is as green as ever. Keeping stock is no expense. Sheep seldom, require any hay at all, I have not fed hay to any of my stock except the milk cows. Horses cost about the same here as in your county but cows are higher. The average cow sells for about $45, but as high as $60 to $75 is sometimes paid for fine cows.

Potatoes and roots of all kinds do well. The weather in the summer is not warm enough to ripen corn, watermelons, grapes or tomatoes. Lumbering is carried on extensively. There is plenty of small saw mills around and lumber sells for about 60 per cent of the St. Hilaire prices. Cedar shingle mills are plenty and each mill has a dry kiln in which they dry the shingles so as to save freight in shipping. Mining in gold, silver and other metals is advancing rapidly, but, as it is all quartz mining it takes large capital to engage in it.

Mount Baker, 10,000 feet high, is about forty miles south east and is perpetually snow covered. The Sumas Mountain group is only about three miles from here. They are partly covered with scrub pine but otherwise barren.

The spring weather I found wet and chilly, so much so that I clung to my Minnesota flannels until July 4th, when I began to warm up. It takes a few months to get used to this climate. The summer was very fine, neither too hot or too cold. The nights are cool with no wind. One day was just like another until the end of October when showers were frequent. November was rather wet but the children have not missed school a single day on account of the rain.

Some of the farmers, have not picked their apples yet though the leaves have nearly all fallen from the trees. It is common for these farmers to leave their potatoes, carrots, cabbages, etc., in the ground all winter and go out and get a supply as needed.

Land can be had right here for about $10 per acre—the price I paid and I am well satisfied.

We have subscribed $124 towards building a Swedish Lutheran church next spring. It will be located about 40 rods from my house.

If any of my friends want to know more about this part of the country I will cheerfully answer all questions.

Yours very truly,
Swan Anderson.

DWARFING AN OAK TREE.

The Japanese Trick by Which It Is Accomplished.

The Chabo Hiba; a dwarf Japanese pine tree, was recently sold for $1,200. It is six feet high and alleged to be 850 years old. It has long been supposed that the process by which Japanese gardeners succeeded in dwarfing forest trees was a long and costly one. It is now said that it is a simple process and that any one can do the trick. The following directions are given for producing a miniature oak tree:

Take an orange and scoop out the pulp. Fill the interior with a rich mold and plant an acorn in the center of it, leaving the hole in the rind for it to sprout through. Put it in a sunny place and water it frequently. Soon after the first shoots have appeared the roots begin to break through the orange skin. Take a sharp knife and shave these off carefully and keep them shaved. The tree will grow about five or six inches high and then stop. In a year it will be a perfect miniature oak. When the roots cease to grow, the orange skin should be varnished over and imbedded in a flowerpot.

The Japanese dwarf all kinds of trees and make them live to a great age. Some of these dwarfs, like the Chabo Hiba, are well known, and their owners have documentary evidence attesting their great age. The older they are the more valuable, of course, they are. In Japan certain families follow the calling, trade, art, or what you will, of growing dwarf trees from generation to generation, and you can buy a miniature oak 500 years old from a descendant of the man who first planted the acorn. Not only forest trees, but fruit trees and flowering shrubs, are dwarfed by these clever gardeners.

Swimming.

"No man can ever hope to be a strong swimmer unless he cultivates the power of endurance in the water," says a professional. "It costs me no more exertion to swim for an hour than it does to walk for the same period of time.

"In swimming a man should time his stroke with his breathing. He should take but one stroke to each breath. In this way the muscles of the body work in conjunction with the lungs, and no energy is wasted. In salt water, which, of course, is more buoyant than fresh water, a man who has trained himself in this way should have no difficulty in keeping afloat, say he were shipwrecked, until sheer weakness from hunger and thirst would force him to succumb."—Philadelphia Record.

Daly's Impecunious Employee.

The late Augustin Daly had in his employment a man who always addressed him a note periodically asking for an advance of money. This note was invariably answered by a most abusive letter, in almost insulting terms and threatening instant discharge if the offense was ever repeated—and inclosing a check for the money!

At regular intervals of about three months the man invariably made the same request, with the same results, always, however, getting a check inclosed. And thus it continued until Mr. Daly's death.—New York Times.

A Tarantula's Jump.

"There are strange sights in Porto Rico," said a returned traveler. "Tarantulas are one of them," he continued, "and you should see a tarantula jump! One of them went through a marvelous performance, with myself and a dog for spectators. The dog's barking awoke me early one morning, and I slipped into my shoes and ran out. Spot—that's the dog's name—was making frantic plunges at an enormous tarantula, as big as my palm and its legs covering as much ground as a soup plate. Its wicked black eyes made me creep.

"All of a sudden the thing shrank up like a sponge and jumped for the dog. I give you my word, it jumped fifteen feet if it was an inch. Twice the dog ran under the spider's jump—fact. Others were watching by this time, and they all saw it. Usually, though, he just side stepped a bit.

"I broke up little pieces of a branch of a tree and hurled them at the tarantula. My aim was just good enough to stir him up. At first he kept jumping away from us, but Spot always headed him back again. Then he jumped straight for us. At last a lucky shot keeled him over, and a few strokes with a convenient club finished him."

FOLLOWED THE LEADER.

A Case Where Naval Cadets Turned Discipline Into a Joke.

Among other good stories told by Cyrus Townsend Brady in his "Under Tops'ls and Tents," published by Scribners, is this:

It is related that a large number of naval cadets were negligent in following the service in the chapel, which was after the ritual of the Episcopal church. An incautious officer in charge on Sunday morning made a little address to the church party on the subject, saying he supposed that some of them erred through ignorance, but if they would observe him carefully and do as he did—in military parlance, follow the motions of the commanding officer—they would not go wrong.

Word was passed quietly through the battalion. They marched into the church. The officer in charge took his place in the front pew, settled himself in his seat and calmly blew his nose. Three hundred noses were blown simultaneously with a vehemence that was startling. The officer looked around and blushed violently in great surprise. Three hundred heads "followed the motions of the commanding officer." Six hundred cheeks violently tried to blush, a hard thing to for a midshipman to do, and so on through the service.

The man could not stir without instant imitation. He finally confined himself strictly to the prescribed ritual of the service, looking neither to the right nor to the left, not daring to raise a finger or breathe out of the ordinary course. This enterprise also was a startling success.

The cadets received other instructions later in the day from a furious officer who sternly resented their innocent statements that they did not know which was ritual and which was not and that he had not instructed them that blowing his nose stood on a different plane from saying his prayers. It was a huge joke everywhere.

BEE AND HIVE.

If the hive rests on the ground, it will be too damp.

It will pay to use foundations by filling all frames full.

Set the hive a little above the ground to admit of a circulation of air.

From 9 o'clock a. m. to 3 o'clock p. m. includes the hours of successful operating with bees.

Procure new blood in the apiary. Inbreeding is as objectionable with bees as with live stock.

It is necessary to unite all weak colonies that will be unable to build up into strong stocks.

Care should be taken to save all young brood and the brood combs of those containing brood.

On account of it being the only material that can be depended upon to stay pine is the best material for hives.

Combs should not be left in empty hives about the apiary. That is the worst place they can be left, as moths are always to be found near the bees and are sure to infest the combs.

One advantage in closed end frames is that a hive full of combs may be handled as though it were a single piece instead of a collection of loose pieces, thus saving work, worry and time.

If the bees cannot conveniently enter the hives during the sudden changes of cool weather, quite a number will be lost; hence care should be taken to have the entrances arranged so that the bees can enter readily.

Knots on Trees.

In the barks of our forest trees are contained a multitude of latent buds, which are developed and grow under certain favorable conditions. Some trees possess this property in a remarkable degree, and often, when the other parts are killed down by frost, the property of pushing out these latent buds into growth preserves the life of the plant. These buds, having once begun to grow, adhere to the woody layer at their base and push out their points through the back toward the light.

The buds then unfold and develop leaves, which elaborate the sap carried up the small shoot. Once elaborated it descends by the bark, when it reaches the base or inner bark. Here it is arrested, so to speak, and deposited between the outside and inner layer of bark, as can be learned on examining specimens on the trees in the woods almost anywhere.

Manx Taxes.

In the matter of taxation the Isle of Man is unique. There is no income tax, no succession duties chargeable against the estates of deceased persons, no highway or turnpike tolls. Roads are maintained by the revenue from two sources—a small tax upon every wheel and shod hoof and a levy upon every male inhabitant, who must give a day's work on the road or its equivalent in cash. There are no stamp duties on receipts, checks, promissory notes, etc.; in fact, stamps are used only for postage.—London Standard.

Stuck.

Penner—Say, give me a synonym for "psychic," will you?

Wright—Well, there's "psychological."

Penner—All right. How do you spell it?

Wright—Why—er—oh, I give it up. Why not use "psychic?"

Penner—I would, but I don't know how to spell that.—Philadelphia Press.

Why Care if the Baby Is Healthy?

Muggins is not handsome, and he knows it. When his first baby was born, he asked, "Does it look like me?" Of course they replied in the affirmative.

"Well," said he, with a sigh, "break it to my wife gently."—London Tit-Bits.

A Lake's Jawbreaking Name.

The town of Webster, Mass., has always been proud of the beautiful little lake within its limits, but never boasted of the jawbreaking name by which it is known. The lake has the longest and most unpronounceable name of any in the world, and residents and visitors who pass the summer on its shores and islands are quietly suggesting a substitute for the unwieldy Indian term which for many years has been applied to this body of water. The full name of the lake is Chargoggagoggmanchoggagoggagungamaug, but the residents have contracted it to Chaubunagungamaug.—Engineer.

The Eight Hour Day.

The eight hour day is not such a new thing. On April 2, 1792, the town of Partridgefield, Mass., now Peru, voted "to grant £150 for repairing highways in said town, to be worked out 2 thirds in June next, at 3s 6d per Day, and the other third in September at 3s per day. Eight hours in a day to be Deemed a Day's Work."

The Self-Sacrifice of a Poor Little Girl.

We had on our Parish Poor List a year ago the names of 'Matilda—and Father,' whose rent we were paying," writes the Rev. David M. Steele in telling of New York's poor, in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "They had been happy and prosperous once, but through hard luck and ill health the man had grown poor and morbid, and 'Tillie,' who had suffered from sunstroke, was a simple, gentle slave to her love for her father. Two weeks before his death he had a stroke of paralysis, and she came to me for some 'emergency relief.' I gave her two dollars, of which she gave back one, insisting that I 'keep it till she needed it.' After two days she came back, bringing along a memorandum of the items for which she had spent the money. It read:

For 'Poppa':		For Self:
Port wine	$ .60	An egg	$ .02
Beef tea	.30	Potatoes	.03
		A soup bone	.05

CAMPFIRE SKETCHES.

SOME SHORT STORIES FOR THE VETERANS.

Fort Cobb, a Kansas Military Post, That Will Soon Be Only a Memory—Its Importance at the Outbreak of the Civil War.

THE PASSING OF THE SWORD.

(The Russian army authorities have decided to equip their officers with firearms instead of the traditional sword. The leading military nations did the same some time ago, and the smaller ones will follow suit in due order.)

No more I'll flash in a headlong dash,
Or gleam in the thundering charge,
When the troopers' shout leaps madly out
On the red field's smold'ring marge;
My glory's over! I'll feel no more
The grip of a harrying hand,
And the smiting quick in the melee thick
Of the last, wild, desperate stand.

No more I'll crash with the lightning's flash
When steel bites deep in steel,
And the leaping spark lights billets stark,
Where the frenzied foemen reel;
At last! At last my guerdon past,
No more my crimsoned blade
Will seal the fate of a sinking state,
Whose empire erst I made.

My fame was born in history's morn,
And ever adown the years,
When warring man in his fierce clan
On my corse-piled path appears,
I've hewn his name amid battle's flame,
With all the world aghast;
And stainless still I obey his will,
And live in the splendid past.

Hurrah for the sword, that its fortime lord
Hath put from his grasp away.
One vale long ere I'm sheathed among
The dead of an elder day:
For my storied brand, that for aye is bonn'd
To sleep in the dreamless dust,
Hath blazed the way to this ruthless day
When I redden with naught save rust.

—Edward E. O'Sullivan, in Boston Pilot.

FAMOUS OLD FORT.

Fort Cobb, noted in the annals of the southwestern country, will soon be nothing more than a memory. The land upon which the fort and the adjacent buildings stood, writes a Wichita (Kan.) correspondent, has been purchased by a colonization company and will soon be cut up into farms. Some famous battles have been fought around Fort Cobb, and some desperate chances have been taken there by white men in settling up the country surrounding the historic old spot. In 1861 Fort Cobb, Arbuckle and Washita were the principal trading posts and government forts west of the Mississippi river. The headquarters of the military department of the Texas were located at Fort Cobb, and its soldiers did duty along the entire Mexican frontier, as well as guarding against Indian uprisings along the Washita and Little Missouri rivers. Fort Cobb attained its greatest fame because of the surrender of Gen. David E. Twiggs there at the outbreak of the civil war. Gen. Twiggs was at the time the commander of the United States forces in the department of the Texas, and on Feb. 16, 1861, he surrendered his entire command to Gen. McCullough, a United States officer who had gone over to the cause of the south, with his command, and who was at that time stationed at Indianola. It was one of the earliest defections from the Union forces of the civil war, and was solely due to the ironing that Gen. Twiggs had to the cause of the south, and not because he was outclassed by a superior force. Gen. Twiggs was dismissed from the Union army in disgrace. He afterward joined the southern forces and was given a commission in its army. Fort Cobb had not been long in the possession of the Confederates before it was recaptured by the Union forces and placed in charge of Maj. S. D. Sturgis, of the Fourth United States cavalry. This was in the early part of 1862. Some o' the men under his command were disaffected, and they had formed a plan to turn the fort and all its supplies over to the Confederate forces again. The latter were to approach under the guise of hostile Comanches, and make a feint of attack, when the post would be surrendered to them without resistance. When Maj. Sturgis learned of this he resolved upon the burning of the ammunition and supplies to prevent their falling into Confederate possession. He succeeded in carrying out his plan, but barely escaped with his life. In October, 1862, Fort Cobb again came into notice, because of a fight between the Cherokees as southerners and the Seminoles as loyal Indians. Several hundred were killed in battle, the Seminoles finally winning. The Cherokees soon afterward freed their slaves of their own accord and gave them the right of citizenship. The battle determined the status of the Indians—they nearly all became Unionists. Up to that time the Cherokee, Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians had been strong sympathizers with the south and a great many fights had taken place between them and the Seminoles and Creeks. In 1870 the old fort was abandoned, but has since then been used as a rendezvous for travelers and Indian agents. It has been the place where artists and writers centered upon their arrival in the land of the southern Indian to study his traits. The old buildings afforded plenty of room, and were the scene of many brilliant social entertainments. Here it was that Sam Houston in an early day wooed and won his Cherokee bride; here it was that John Howard Payne wrote his soul-stirring song, "Home, Sweet Home," and it is the place where Remington drew some of the Indian pictures that have since made him famous.

DECORATES HIS OWN GRAVE.

Few indeed have the strange privilege of decorating their own graves. Such a person, however, is to found in Corona, L. I. He enlisted in the Flushing Regiment and in the battle of Vicksburg was hit with the fragment of a shell. For a whole day he lay in the trenches. They thought him dead. When he came to, his mind and memory were gone. Strangers found him and asked him who he was. He could not tell. He was like a child. He was transferred, and after the war was taken to the soldiers' home in Washington. There he learned once more to read and write, to converse and thus began life over again. One day, thirty years after the battle that robbed him of his senses, the man woke up, as it were. The pressure on his skull was relieved. He came to his old self. His first question was about the battle.

"What battle?" they asked.

"Why, the battle I was in to-day. Was I hit?"

They told him that he had been hit thirty years before. He had been restored to his former identity. All memory of the intervening years now faded as completely as that which had gone before had faded previously.

"Who are you?" they asked. He told them. Then he started the long journey back to Long Island, in search of his former home and friends. Arriving at Flushing, one of the first objects that met his gaze was the soldiers' monument. It stands in front of the old Quaker meeting-house, dated 1661, and which was used alternately as a federal and a British stronghold during the revolution. The old man naturally paused and read the familiar names of his martyred comrades. To his consternation he saw his own name enrolled there. That was some years ago. Since that day the old veteran has never missed Decoration day in Flushing. He comes with a big wreath and lays it on the mound under his own name.

SOLDIERS ARE HUMAN.

Army officers are almost unanimous in asking the restoration of the canteen feature of the army post exchanges. The subject is a sore one with temperance and prohibition advocates, whose position concerning the canteen is much misunderstood. The objection they make is that the canteen gives a sort of official sanction to drink—in other words, puts the government into the business of selling beer. Advocates of the canteen assert that it cannot possibly be harmful, because only beer is sold, and that of a good quality, and in such quantities and under such restriction as to render intoxication impossible. Experience indicates that for many reasons the advocates of the canteen have the better of the argument. Soldiers are human; and like many other human beings are averse to too much restriction. Few of them acquire the habit of drinking in the army; indeed, with saloons on every corner in the cities from which most of them come, it is not likely that they would acquire habits of intemperance through buying an occasional bottle of beer at the canteen. As matters are, a soldier cannot drink in the post, but there is nothing to prevent his drinking outside. So that instead of having a bottle or two of beer every day he keeps his money until he gets permission to leave the post and then spends the pay of several months in a vile orgy in one of the neighboring dens over which the military authorities have no control. Then he is tempted to desert, rather than face punishment for dereliction in returning, loses his self-respect, never saves his money, and goes out of the army worse than when he entered it, simply because of the mistaken solicitude of well-meaning persons who forget that he is only a man.—Philadelphia Times.

WANTS HIS SALARY.

Among the residents of South Dakota is a veteran of the civil war who enjoys the unique distinction of having his name still carried on the rolls of the war department as a captain of the volunteer army of the United States. And because of this Uncle Sam will be called upon to pay him back salary aggregating $22,264. The old veteran is Capt. Lockwood and his home is at Redfield. He was commissioned a captain of volunteers in 1865. The government at the close of the war notified him that he could be discharged at any time upon properly identifying himself. By some oversight he was never discharged. He had not thought of the matter for about thirty years until the other day, when he came to the conclusion that if he had never been discharged from the army he was entitled to his salary as captain for the intervening years. His captain's salary was $52 per month. It is thirty-six years, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, since he drew his last month's pay, and if the courts or war department decide that he has legally been a captain all this time he will draw from the treasury of the United States the neat sum of $22,264. He has engaged the services of an attorney, who will prosecute the claim for him before the proper authorities.—Chicago News.

SHERIDAN'S SLEEPING BAG.

I was reading the other day that Wendell Phillips, the lecturer, when he traveled carried a sleeping bag, into which he crawled at night when at a strange hotel. It reminded me of the sleeping bag that DeB. Randolph Keim tells me Gen. Phil Sheridan carried while on the campaign against the Indians in midwinter. It was made of fur, with the fur inside, and Sheridan used to strip and crawl into it. The General had two big dogs that followed him about, and in the morning early when the reveille was sounded the dogs would go nosing about until they got into Sheridan's tent, when they would rush upon their sleeping master and run their cold noses into the sleeping bag. It had the effect of an electrical bath on "Little Phil," and the language he used was exceedingly free. The mercury in his tent would go up about forty degrees when he cut loose, and the dogs would rush growling down the camp street, while Keim would lie there and laugh.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

WHAT A LEADING AGRICULTURIST SAYS OF WESTERN CANADA.

Prof. Thomas Shaw of Minnesota University, Gives an Unbiased Opinion.

In a letter to "The Farmer," St. Paul, dated Sept. 1st, 1901, Prof. Thomas Shaw of the Minnesota State University has the following to say, after having made a trip through Western Canada:

"The capabilities of the immense area known as Western Canada are but little understood on this side of the line. Our people are apt to look upon it as a region of frost and snow, a country in which but a small portion of the land relatively will ever be tillable, because of the rigors of the climate. True, the climate is cold in winter, but Western Canada has, nevertheless, just that sort of climate which makes it the most reliable wheat producing country in all the continent.

An Immense Area.

Western Canada is not only an immense area, but the same description will apply to those portions of the country that are capable of being successfully tilled or grazed. Nearly all of the prairie Province of Manitoba can be brought under cultivation, although probably not one-third of its surface has been laid open by the plow. Assiniboia to the west is a grain and stock country. Saskatchewan to the north of Assiniboia has high adaptation for the same. This also may be said of Alberta to the west. Here lies what may be termed a grain-growing and stock producing empire, the resources of which have been but little drawn upon comparatively, viewed from the standpoint of the agriculturalist. When it is called to mind that even in the Peace River country in Athabasca, and several hundreds of miles north of the Canadian boundary, wheat was grown which won a premium at the World's Fair in 1893, the capabilities of this country in wheat production loom up more brightly than even the brilliant northern lights of the land that lies toward the pole.

Adapted to Stock and Grain Production.

The region under consideration is, however, mainly adapted to growing grain and grazing stock. Much of it is adapted to growing both grain and stock, but certain areas, especially towards the mountains, are only adapted to ranching, except where irrigation will yet be introduced. This, of course, can be done successfully along the many streams that flow down from the Rockies and water the country towards the east and north. The adaptation of the country for wheat production is of a high character. The cool nights that usually characterize the ripening season are eminently favorable to the filling of the grain, and to the securing of a plump berry, and consequently large yields. The crop this year is a magnificent one. In Manitoba and the territories it should certainly give an average of more than 20 bushels per acre. But should the yield be not more than 20 bushels, the crop will be a most handsome one, owing to the large area sown to wheat. Many farmers only grow grain. But those who do succeed as well in growing oats and barley as in growing wheat, hence these foods for stock should always be abundant. Some grow cattle mainly, and others combine the two. The last named, of course, is doubtless the safest of the three during a long course of years, that is to say, where much farming is practicable.

Quality of the Live Stock.

It was a pleasurable surprise to note the high quality of the stock. The average of quality in cattle is higher than the average of cattle in our state, unless in the dairy classes. This opinion is not reached rashly or without ample opportunity for investigation. I spent three long days in the show ring at Winnipeg making the awards in the beef classes. I question if any of our states, single handed, could make such a showing in cattle. It was my privilege to make the awards at several shows and at all of their fairs were evidences that much attention is given to the improvement of the stock. I noted carefully the character of the herds that grazed along the railroad and everywhere the high average of the quality of the stock was in evidence.

Reasons for Quality in Stock.

The quality of the grass is good. Many of the settlers came from Ontario and had been schooled as to the value of good stock before going west. The railroads and the government have taken a deep interest in making it less difficult and costly to the farmers to secure good males.

Those who are anxious of changing their residence should bear in mind that the lands in Western Canada are many of them free and others reasonably cheap.

Information will gladly be given by any agent of the Canadian government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere.

FISHING FOR CEDAR LOGS.

Sunken New Jersey Swamps That Furnish Priceless Shingles.

The cedar-shingle industry which flourished at Dennisville, Cape May county, N. J., a few years ago is now almost extinct, and the export of the once-prized wood, some of which is said to be nearly 3,000 years old, has been reduced to a minimum. The sunken cedar swamp reaches from the mouth of Dennis creek to what is known as Cedar Swamp creek, and runs along Cedar Swamp creek to the village of Petersburg. The age of this swamp is not accurately known. Twenty years ago Prof. Cook, then state geologist, visited Dennisville and examined a tree dug up by Charles Robart of Cape May, which he then said was 3,000 years of age. The valuable cedar, which consists of fallen trees, lies buried underneath the swamps, creeks, meadows and ponds at a depth of four feet. Thousands of acres have been worked, as this wood is very valuable for shingles. A roof of dug up cedar shingles will last for fifty years. The wood is not so plentiful now, as the log men have worked the swamps for years, and the present growth of cedar does not fall and bury itself. The process by which the wood is obtained is very interesting. An iron probe about five feet long is thrust into the mud until it strikes a buried log, when the logmen keep on sounding until they discover the length of the log. They then thrust in a saw and cut all the way round the log to free it from obstructions. If the log happens to be in the swamp or meadow it is dug out, but if in a pond or creek, as soon as it is freed from the saw it immediately springs from the mud and floats on the surface of the water. No signs of these buried logs can be seen and they are found only by probing. In many swamps there are three growths under the mud, with the present growth standing above them. An immense log has been dug from under a large aged stump that was also under ground. Some logs gnawed down by beavers have been worked in what is known as Robins' swamp. From 1860 to 1870 Elmer Edwards is said to have secured 100,800,000 dug-up cedar shingles. From one log $75 worth of shingles were obtained. A large amount was sent to Winchester, Mass., to be used in the manufacture of violins.—Chicago Record-Herald.

TRACING SLANG PHRASES.

Some of Them Go Back to Classical Greece and Rome.

A learned German philologist recently has been tracing so-called slang phrases through the labyrinth of various languages, and has found that many of them are of ancient and some of classical origin, like the famous phrase, "He's a brick." As most every one knows, this originated from the reply of the King of Sparta, who, when asked where were the walls of his city, replied that Sparta had 50,000 soldiers, "and every man is a brick." It was once the custom in France to serve to a guest who had outstayed his welcome a cold shoulder of mutton instead of a hot roast, as a gentle hint to terminate his visit. Hence the expression, "To give the cold shoulder." Back in the days of "Good Queen Bess" a shoemaker named Hawkins committed suicide by standing on a bucket to bring him nearer to the convenient rafter which he had selected for his hanging place. Having made fast the rope he kicked the bucket away and so accomplished his purpose. Hence to "kick the bucket." In Puritan times a certain Hezekiah Morton was in the habit of baking two or three dozen apple pies every Saturday, and arranging them in the pantry with labels, appropriating one or more pies for certain days. The pantry thus arranged was said to be "in apple-pie order." It was a custom of the Hungarians in their wars with the Turks to wear a feather in their cap for each Turk they killed. Hence "a feather in his cap." "Deadhead" is of extremely ancient origin. In Pompeii people who gained admission to the theater or the amphitheater without paying their way were "deadheads," because the check used for their admission consisted of a small ivory death's head. Perhaps the expression was older than Pompeii, and the ivory checks were the outcome of the word and not the word of the checks. But it is certain the word was used then as it is now.—New York Press.

Thrown from His Cab and Killed.

The following is a most interesting and, in one respect, pathetic tale:

Mr. J. Pope, 42 Ferrar Road, Streatham, England, said:

"Yes, poor chap, he is gone, dead—horse bolted, thrown off his seat on his cab he was driving and killed—poor chap, and a good sort, too, mate. It was him, you see, who gave me the half-bottle of St. Jacob's Oil that made a new man of me. 'Twas like this: me and Bowman were great friends. Some gentleman had given him a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil which had done him a lot of good; he only used half of the bottle, and remembering that I had been a martyr to rheumatism and sciatica for years, that I had literally tried everything, had doctors, and all without benefit, I became discouraged, and looked upon it that there was no help for me. Well," said Pope, "You may not believe me, for it is a miracle, but before I had used the contents of the half-bottle of St. Jacob's Oil which poor Bowman gave me, I was a well man. There it is, you see, after years of pain, after using remedies, oils, embrocations, horse liniments, and spent money on doctors without getting any better, I was completely cured in a few days. I bought another bottle, thinking the pain might come back, but it did not, so I gave the bottle away to a friend who had a lame back. I can't speak too highly of this wonderful painkiller."

It Comes High, Too.

He had just returned from the city, and he was strangely uncommunicative concerning his adventures.

"Did you buy anything while you were gone, Hiram?" she asked.

"Yep," he replied shortly.

"Pay much for it?" she persisted, for she rather expected the material for a new gown.

"Yep."

"What was it?"

"Experience."

"I thought you loaded up with that last time," she said bitterly.

"Well, this was another kind," he explained.—Chicago Post.

Women Look Younger Than Men.

I wonder how many people have noticed in the last twenty years the fallacy that "a woman looks older for her years than a man" has been exploded. A woman—the ordinary woman who takes care of herself and treasures her youth as a precious thing—looks than a majority of men of the same age. Women of forty and forty-five look many years younger than their husbands, who are usually but a few years their seniors, and because of the eternal youth preserving that obtains among the new century women the fashion of marrying men who are several years their juniors is becoming more and more the vogue.

A Clergyman's Discovery.

Fredericksburg, Ind., Dec. 2.—According to the positive declaration of Rev. E. P. Stevens of this place, that gentleman has found a remedy for all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. For years he suffered severely with these complaints, incontinence of the urine, making life a burden to him, but he never ceased experimenting, in the hope that some day he would discover a remedy. After many failures he at last succeeded and is to-day perfectly cured and a well man, and explains that his recovery is due to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. This remedy has been successfully applied to many cases of Lame Back, Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Diabetes and other Kidney Diseases, and there seems to be no case of the kind that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. This is the only remedy that has ever cured Bright's Disease.

Lobster Farms and the Law.

Reports from Rockport indicate that the farmers of Cape Ann are considering the advisability of securing a greater "rotation of crops." A lobster farm is one of the possibilities of agricultural life in the suburbs of Gloucester. If the idea spreads, the entire shore of that rocky portion of the coast may be dotted with lobster farms. The principal objection to the lobster farm is the fact that it must be illegal. The law forbids a citizen to have short lobsters in his possession. If the short lobsters are found in his lobster farm, how may they escape the penalties of the law? Still, inasmuch as the game commission has instructed its employes not to enforce the law against Sunday fishing, could not it also refuse to enforce the law for protecting the short lobster?—Boston Daily Advertiser.

His Opinion of the Scotch.

Andrew Carnegie, a short time ago, was in conversation with a friend, who was inclined to be very complimentary. He told Mr. Carnegie what a splendid gift his library was to Edinburgh, and so much more needed than other charity in the city, as the statistics showed that for a great many years there had not been one death by starvation there.

"That," answered Mr. Carnegie, "does not arise from the number of charities in Edinburgh, but from the impossibility of starving a Scotchman."—New York Times.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

VARIOUS RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF CONGRESS.

THE QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY

FAVORS THE PRINCIPLE, BUT OPPOSES ANY GENERAL TARIFF CHANGE.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE TRUSTS

PUBLICITY THE ONLY SURE REMEDY THAT CAN NOW BE EVOKED.

The following is a synopsis embodying the more important topics covered in President Roosevelt's message:

The untimely death of President McKinley is feelingly alluded to in the opening chapters of the message. The president says: "Of the last seven elected presidents he is the third who has been murdered, and the bare recital of this fact is sufficient to justify grave alarm among all loyal American citizens. . . . President McKinley was killed by an utterly depraved criminal belonging to that body of criminals who object to all governments, good and bad alike, who are against any form of popular liberty if it is guaranteed by even the most just and liberal laws and who are as hostile to the upright exponent of a free people's sober will as to the tyrannical and irresponsible despot.

"It is not too much to say that at the time of President McKinley's death he was the most widely loved man in all the United States, while we have never had any public man of his position who has been so widely free from the bitter animosities incident to public life. His political opponents were the first to bear the heartiest and most generous tribute to the broad kindliness of his nature, the sweetness and gentleness of character which so endeared him to his close associates. To a standard of lofty integrity in public life he united the tender affections and home virtues which are all-important in the makeup of national character. . . . There could be no personal hatred of him, for he never acted with aught but consideration for the welfare of others."

The president then pays eloquent tribute to the career and public services of the martyred president, whom he characterizes as one of the strongest champions the wageworker ever had. Continuing, he says:

"When we turn from the man to the nation, the harm done is so great as to excite our greatest apprehensions and to demand our wisest and most resolute action. This criminal was a professed anarchist, inflamed by the teachings of professed anarchists, and probably, also, by the reckless utterances of those who on the stump and in the public press appeal to the dark and evil spirits of malice and greed, envy and sullen hatred. . . . The blow was aimed not at this president, but at all presidents, at every symbol of government. . . . The anarchist is a criminal whose perverted instincts lead him to prefer confusion and chaos to the most beneficent form of social order. His protest of concern for workingmen is outrageous in its impudent falsity, for if the political institutions of this country do not afford opportunity to every honest and intelligent son of toil then the door of hope is forever closed against him. The anarchist is everywhere not merely the enemy of system and of progress, but the deadly foe of liberty."

The president recommends to congress that proper measures be taken for the exclusion of anarchists from this country, and for keeping within lawful bounds such disturbing elements as are now within our borders. The federal courts, in the president's opinion, should be given control over any man who kills or attempts to kill the president, and the punishment should be made proportionate to the enormity of the crime. Such a crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy, and all mankind should band against the anarchist.

The president next gives his attention to the business interests of the country, and congratulates the nation on its present abounding prosperity. Such prosperity, he says, can never be created by law alone, although it is easy enough to destroy it by mischievous laws. . . .

"The growth of cities has gone on beyond comparison faster than the growth of the country, and the upbuilding of the great industrial centers has meant a startling increase, not merely in the aggregate of wealth, but in the number of very large individual and especially of very large corporate fortunes. The creation of these great corporate fortunes has not been due to the tariff nor to any other governmental action, but to the natural causes in the business world, operating in other countries as they operate in our own. The process has aroused much antagonism, a great part of which is wholly without warrant. It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary never before has the average man, the wageworker, the farmer, the small trader, been so well off as in this country, and at the present time. There have been abuses connected with the accumulation of wealth, yet it remains true that a fortune accumulated in legitimate business can be accumulated by the person specially benefited only on condition of conferring immense incidental benefits upon others. Successful enterprise of the type which benefits all mankind can only exist if the conditions are such as to offer great prizes as the rewards of success."

The president points out reasons for the exercise of caution in dealing with corporations, among the more important of which is the international commercial conditions of the day. "America," he says, "has only just begun to assume that commanding position in the international business world which we believe will more and more be hers. It is of the utmost importance that this position be not jeopardized, especially at a time when the overflowing abundance of our natural resources and the skill, business energy and mechanical aptitude of our people make foreign markets essential."

Taking up the question of "trusts," the president says: "Many of those who have made it their vocation to denounce the great industrial combinations, which are popularly, although with technical inaccuracy, known as 'trusts,' appeal especially to hatred and fear. . . . Much of the legislation directed at the trusts would have been exceedingly mischievous had it not been entirely ineffective. In accordance with a well-known sociological law the ignorant or reckless agitator has been the really effective friend of the evils which he has been nominally opposing."

Overcapitalization, according to the president, is the greatest evil, because of its many baneful consequences, and a resolute and practical effort must be made to correct these evils.

Great corporations exist only because they are created and safeguarded by our institutions, and it is therefore our right and our duty to see that they work in harmony with those institutions.

The president says that publicity is the only sure remedy we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation or taxation can only be determined after publicity has been obtained by process of law and in the course of administration. The government, he thinks, should be given the right to inspect the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business.

Owing to the lack of uniformity in state laws, it has been impossible to get adequate regulation through state control. President Roosevelt thinks that in the interest of the whole people the nation should, without interfering with the power of the states in the matter itself, assume power of supervision and regulation over all corporations doing an interstate business. If the judgment of congress is that it lacks the constitutional power to pass an act along these lines, the president then favors the adoption of a constitutional amendment conferring such rights.

The president recommends the creation of an additional cabinet officer to be known as secretary of commerce and industries, whose province it would be to deal with commerce in its broadest sense.

The welfare of the wageworker the president places next in importance as a matter of public concern to that of the farmer. The president discusses various matters of vital importance in this connection. Among his recommendations for legislation in behalf of labor he places first the enactment of the Chinese exclusion act, which he strongly urges; protection against imported contract labor; to render effective the efforts of states to do away with competition of convict contract labor in the open market; vigorous enforcement of the eight-hour law on government work.

The president points out defects in our immigration laws, and recommends the adoption of stringent measures to exclude anarchists, illiterate persons and persons of low moral tendency.

The tariff next claims the attention of the president. On this subject he says:

"There is general acquiescence in our present tariff system as a national policy. The first requisite to our prosperity is the continuity and stability of this economic policy. Nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. Our experience in the past has shown that sweeping revisions in the tariff are apt to produce conditions closely approaching a panic in the business world. Yet it is not only possible, but evidently desirable, to combine with the stability of our economic system a supplementary system of reciprocal benefit and obligation with other nations. Such reciprocity is an incident and result of the firm establishment and preservation of our present economic policy. Reciprocity must be treated as the handmaiden of protection. Our first duty is to see that the protection granted by the tariff in every case where it is needed is maintained, and that reciprocity be sought for so far as it can safely be done without injury to our home industries. Just how far this is practicable must be determined according to the individual case, remembering always that every application of our tariff policy to meet our shifting national needs must be conditioned upon the cardinal fact that the duties must never be reduced below the point that will cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well being of the wageworker is a prime consideration of our entire policy of economic legislation. We have now reached the point in the development of our interests where we are not only able to supply our own markets, but to produce a constantly growing surplus for which we must find markets abroad. To secure these markets we can utilize existing duties in any case where they are no longer needed for the purpose of protection, or in any case where the article is not produced here and the duty is no longer necessary for revenue, as giving us something to offer in exchange for what we ask."

The condition of the American merchant marine is such as to call for immediate action by congress. The president says it should be made advantageous to carry American goods in American-built ships. The disadvantages under which American shipping is placed when put in competition with the shipping of foreign countries is pointed out and congress is asked to pass remedial legislation.

In discussing the country's finances the president says that the passage of the law making gold the standard money has been shown to be timely and judicious. Changes in the national banking law are urged. The collections from duties on imports and internal taxes continue to exceed the ordinary expenditures of the government, thanks mainly to the reduced army expenditures, and the president suggests that means be adopted to bring the revenues more nearly within the limit of our actual needs. Strict economy in expenditures is specially urged upon congress.

The president strongly recommends that changes be made in the interstate commerce law looking to the prevention of discrimination in railroad rates.

The question of forestry comes in for a generous share of the president's attention, and he makes suggestions for the extension and protection of forest reserves.

The president goes deeply into the question of irrigation, and urges congress to give this matter the attention its importance deserves. The construction of irrigation works by the government is strongly recommended.

Legislation for Hawaii should be shaped so as to promote the building of a healthy American community of men who till their own farms.

"Porto Rico," says the president, "is thriving as never before, and is being administered efficiently and honestly."

In Cuba such progress has been made toward putting the independent government of the island upon a firm footing that before the present session of congress closes this will be an accomplished fact. The president, with special emphasis, calls the attention of congress to the vital need of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States.

The president deals at length with the Philippine question. He says that only earnest effort is to help these people upward along the stony and difficult path that leads to self-government. We hope to make our administration of the islands honorable in our nation by making it of the highest benefit in the Filipinos themselves, and as an earnest of what we intend to do we point to what we have done. Already a greater measure of material prosperity and of governmental honesty and efficiency has been attained in the Philippines than ever before in their history.

The president then refers in the difficulties which have been and are still to be encountered in fitting the Filipinos for self-government. He then continues:

"In our anxiety for the welfare and progress of the Philippines it may be that here and there we have gone too rapidly in giving them self-government. If is on this side that our error, if any, has been committed. We have gone to the very verge of safety in hastening the process. . . . There is not a locality fitted for self-government that has not received it. . . .

There are still troubles ahead in the islands. The insurrection has become an affair of local banditti and marauders, who deserve no higher regard than the brigands of portions of the Old World. Encouragement, direct or indirect, to these insurrectos stands on the same footing as encouragement to hostile Indians in the days when we still had Indian wars."

Legislation looking to the introduction of industrial enterprises into the islands is strongly urged.

The crying need for a cable to Hawaii and the Philippines is pointed out.

The president urges the importance of the construction of the isthmian canal. He says:

"No single great material work which remains to be undertaken on this continent is of such consequence to the American people as the building of a canal across the isthmus connecting North and South America. Its importance to the nation is by no means limited merely to its material effects upon our business prosperity, and yet with a view to these effects alone it would be to the last degree important for us immediately to begin it. . . . It is emphatically a work which it is for the interest of the entire country to begin and complete as soon as possible. . . . I am glad to be able to announce to you that our negotiations on this subject with Great Britain, conducted on both sides in a spirit of friendliness and mutual good will and respect, have resulted in my being able to lay before the senate a treaty which, if ratified, will enable us to begin preparations for an isthmian canal at any time, and which guarantees to this nation every right which it has ever asked."

"The Monroe doctrine," says the president, "should be the cardinal feature of the foreign policy of all the nations of the two Americas as it is of the United States. . . . The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. It is in nowise intended as hostile to any nation in the Old World. Still less is it intended to give cover to any aggression by one New World power at the expense of any other."

"The work of upbuilding the navy," says the president, "must be steadily continued. No one point of our policy, foreign or domestic, is more important than this to the honor and material welfare and, above all, to the peace of our nation in the future. Whether we desire it or not we must henceforth recognize that we have international duties no less than international rights. There should be no cessation in the work of completing the navy."

The president concludes this portion of his message by pointing out the requirements of the service and urging upon congress to give the matter early consideration.

President Roosevelt also gives the other branch of the service considerable attention. No increase in the army beyond its present size is needed at this time. Various matters of importance to the army are considered at length and congress is invited to give its attention to recommendations for improvements in the service.

The merit system of appointments is strongly indorsed by the president and he urges that it be applied rigidly in our insular possessions.

Touching on the Indian question the president says that in his opinion the time has arrived when we should definitely make up our minds to recognize the Indian as an individual and not as a member of a tribe. He says:

"The general allotment act is a mighty pulverizing engine to break up the tribal mass. . . . Under its provisions some 60,000 Indians have already become citizens of the United States. We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what allotment does for the tribal lands—that is they should be divided into individual holdings. . . . The effect should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his own ground. . . . In the schools the education should be elementary and largely industrial.

The support of congress for the St. Louis exposition is urgently recommended.

The president recommends that the census office be made a permanent government bureau.

The remarkable growth of the postal service is pointed out, and attention is called to the benefits derived from the rural free delivery.

The Chinese situation is reviewed at length and the president puts congress in possession of the facts relative to the agreement reached by way of settlement of the troubles arising out of the antiforeign uprising.

In concluding his message the president refers to the deaths of Queen Victoria and Empress Dowager Frederick of Germany, events which called forth expressions of grief and sympathy on the part of the American people. When President McKinley died the people of Great Britain and Germany, together with the whole civilized globe were no less sincere in expressing their grief and sympathy.

REED'S RULES TO STAND.

Republican Caucus Decides on Old Methods—Henderson Nominated.

Washington, Dec. 9. — Thomas D. Reed's celebrated rules will be adopted by the Fifty-seventh congress without opposition. This was decided upon Saturday by the Republican caucus, which nominated Gen. David B. Henderson as the next speaker and chose the old officers of the house to fill their respective positions for another congress. The decision of the caucus was not reached without opposition, as Representative Hepburn of Iowa attempted to have the rules adopted for a period of forty days, to give the new members an opportunity to study them.

At the Democratic caucus, also held Saturday, the chief feature was a proposal that all members of the minority seek no patronage from the administration. There was a clash over the silver issue between Ball of Texas and McClellan of New York. Others took part and serious trouble seemed at hand, when Mr. Richardson secured postponement of the discussion of all propositions until a committee of twelve reports on a declaration of party policy to a caucus on Jan. 10. Richardson of Tennessee was chosen minority leader and other honorary nominations were made.

CHINA DEFIES THE POWERS.

Is Boldly Violating a Condition of the Protocol.

Washington, Dec. 3.—Definite information has been received by the state department that the Chinese government is violating that condition of the international peace protocol which forbids the importation of firearms, material for their men and ammunition in China for a period of two years. China's boldness in this defying the powers causes much surprise here, particularly as the temper of the nations concerned in suppressing the Boxer troubles has not entirely been appeased and further transgression is likely to prove disastrous for the Flowery Kingdom. The question of the proper method of dealing with China's violation is under consideration, and it is said that a protest will be addressed by the United States and other nations to that government.

FOOLS FEUDISTS

FRIENDS OF BERRY HOWARD MAKE A BOLD ATTEMPT AT RESCUE.

DRAW GUNS ON THE ENGINEER

HE REFUSES TO BACK THE TRAIN AND OUTWITS THEM BY STARTING UP.

SHERIFF HOLDS PRISONER SAFE

TAKEN TO FRANKFORT TO ANSWER FOR COMPLICITY IN GOEBEL MURDER.

Corbin, Ky., Dec. 9.—Friends of Berry Howard, the noted mountain feud leader, made an attempt to rescue Howard Saturday night as he was being taken to Frankfort to answer an indictment charging him with complicity in the murder of William Goebel, and for which he had been arrested Saturday afternoon by Sheriff Broughton and his deputy, who got the drop on Howard and his body guard, who had been lured to Pineville.

As soon as Howard had been arrested his friends, who had protected him for nearly two years, swore that he should never be taken in Frankfort, and a guard of twenty-five armed men was maintained over the prisoner while here, and ten men accompanied Sheriff Broughton and the prisoner to Frankfort.

Engineer Parleys.

When the train reached Pineville, Sheriff Broughton and his posse boarded the train with the prisoner and were given one of the coaches, which was locked at both ends. At the same time three men, friends of Howard, boarded the engine. They covered Engineer John Landgan with pistols, and commanded him to back the train to Middlesboro, the intention being to rescue Howard where his friends are greatest and where the mountains afforded quick escape. Engineer Landgan, with a pistol pressed against his heart, maintained his composure. He declared it was impossible for him to back the train as a freight train was closely following and a collision with great loss of life would inevitably result. "Drat the freight train," said one of the men. "Back the train to Middlesboro." Engineer Landgan parleyed with the men. He told them he did not and would only back the train if given a signal to do so by the conductor. Thereupon two of the men got off the engine to compel Conductor Doody to order the train backed. Engineer Landgan told the men who remained and still covered him that it would take all three men to compel the conductor to back the train, as he and the brakeman were both armed. The last man left the engine and started for the rear of the train.

Engineer Londgan was looking for his chance, and the moment the third man had swung clear of the engine and started for the rear of the train he opened the throttle wide and started his heavy train as rapidly as possible and without waiting for the conductor's signal to go ahead. Meantime a highly exciting scene was taking place on the station platform. As Sheriff Broughton and his

Deputies Attempted

to step aboard with the prisoner he waved back the crowd and declared he would take his prisoner to Frankfort if he lived. His bold defiance of the desperate men enabled him to get Howard aboard the train, and then the crowd surrounded Doody and commanded him to back the train to Middlesboro. He answered that he could not, on account of a freight train closely following. The mountaineers again told him as they told the engineer: "D—— the passengers; back her up."

"No!" thundered Doody. "You may kill me if you wish, but I shall never back this train." And he swung his lantern clear of the train as a signal to go ahead. The train began to move, and revolvers were drawn, but the mob had been cowed and not a shot was fired.

BERRY HOWARD CAPTURED.

Charged With Complicity in the Murder of Goebel.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 9. — Sheriff Broughton of Bell county, accompanied by three deputies, arrived here yesterday, having in charge Berry Howard of Bell county, who was indicted for complicity in the murder of William Goebel, and who has been a fugitive for more than a year. He turned his prisoner over to Jailer Lawrence of this county and Howard was assigned to quarters in the jail with Caleb Powers and James Howard, a relative, charged with the same crime. Howard protests his innocence and says that he became a fugitive in the mountain section only because he did not want to lie in jail here. He will ask for an immediate hearing and if this is denied, that he be released on bond.

BURGLARS IN OSCEOLA.

They Break Into Several Places and Make Themselves at Home.

Osceola, Wis., Dec. 9. — Saturday night a burglar or burglars entered the blacksmith shop of M. M. Nason, equipped themselves with the necessary tools to break open the Bank of England, starting first at the drug store owned by C. W. Staples, gaining entrance by a rear window. The plunder taken here consisted of money, cigars, all of his jewelry and notions, to the value of about $50 or $75. Here the burglar seated himself by the stove, ate fruit and smoked cigars to his heart's content. The safe being unlocked nothing was disturbed, but both money drawers were broken open and the cash taken. E. B. Ames' butcher shop was entered and several dollars and some meat was taken. At M. J. O'Reilly's lumber office an attempt was made to gain an entrance to the office from the rear, and about fifty matches, partly burned, were lighted in order to gain an entrance. All the locks of his lumber sheds were broken, but nothing of value was taken that can be ascertained. The work was undoubtedly that of some one residing not far from Osceola, as the job all around showed evidence of an amateur.

VAN SANT TO KEEP UP FIGHT.

Minnesota Railroad Commission Will Take No Steps to Fight the Proposed Railway Merger.

St. Paul, Dec. 9. — The members of the State Railroad commission, who had announced their intention of going to Washington to confer with the interstate commerce commission on the best means for preventing the Hill-Harriman railway merger, abandoned the project Saturday and will take no action. The commissioners called on Gov. Van Sant. Both sides are reticent about the talk, but it is said the commissioners attempted to drive the governor from his position, and he gave them to understand he intended to proceed on the lines originally outlined by himself. The governor's legal advisers have declared the laws of Minnesota ample to protect the state, and if they are found faulty the executive will call the legislature to enact laws that will hold. Gov. Van Sant received a letter Saturday from Gov. Rogers of Washington, in which the latter says he has already taken steps to ascertain if the laws of his state are strong enough to prevent the merger, but he adds that he has his doubts.

Fleischauer, the woman who con the house, was also arrested and entered a plea of guilty as charged in the indictment. She had previously served a term in state's prison for a similar offense and Judge Webber did not show her any mercy. He sentenced her to a term of five years and six months in the prison at hard labor.

PANIC AMONG PATIENTS.

Dangerous and Exciting Fire in a Sanitarium.

Milwaukee, Dec. 9.—A dangerous and exciting fire which came near resulting in loss of life, occurred yesterday at St. Mary's private sanitarium, 318 Berry street. For a time there was a panic among the patients. Although no lives were lost great difficulty was experienced in getting the twenty-seven inmates of the sanitarium out in time. Twenty-four of the patients were carried from the building by the firemen and members of the fire insurance patrol, ten of them being so decrepit with age as to be entirely helpless. The fire started in a barn in the rear from an overturned lamp. The property loss was small.

RENEGADE FIXED

AMERICAN DESERTER CAPTURED BY FILIPINO SCOUTS AND BEHEADED.

THEY ARE SURE OF HIM THIS TIME

HAS BEEN SEVERAL TIMES REPORTED AS HAVING BEEN KILLED.

FILIPINO GENERAL TO HANG

CONVICTED OF ORDERING ASSASSINATION OF AMERICAN CORPORAL.

Manila, Dec. 9.—Native scouts from Benbogon, province of Nueva Ecija, have killed David Fagin, the American negro deserter from the Twenty-fourth infantry (colored), who for two years has been leading Filipinos against the Americans. The native scouts decapitated their prisoner. The head, however, was identified as that of Fagin. They recovered his commission in the Filipino army. Fagin had on his finger a ring of Frederick Van Alstnetter, of the engineers, who was captured by Filipinos, supposedly under the command of Fagin himself Oct. 8, 1900. Fagin has been reported killed on several occasions. The authorities are satisfied that former statements of his death were erroneous and that he has now been killed.

A military commission has sentenced the Filipino Gen. Isidore Torres to be hanged, after finding him guilty of ordering the assassination of Corporal Fleidner of the Twelfth infantry at Malolos, province of Bulucon, last October. The sentence of the commission has been disapproved by Gen. Chaffee, who finds that the commission had reasonable grounds to doubt whether Gen. Torres personally ordered the assassination of the American soldier. Gen. Chaffee thinks that the high rank held by Torres in the insurgent army would be sufficient to prevent such unmilitary action on his part.

The case of Patterson the Englishman, private secretary to Sexto Lopez, whom efforts were made to deport from Manila after he had landed there without swearing allegiance to the United States, is still hanging fire before the supreme court. Patterson's attorneys claim that their client once having landed was beyond the jurisdiction of W. Morgan Schuster, collector of customs for the Philippines, who has been trying to effect Patterson's expulsion.

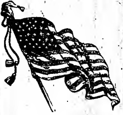
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 11, 1901.



Upon advice of Attorney General Douglas, Gov. Van Sant has decided to institute legal proceedings in opposition to the proposed consolidation of the railway interests in the Northern Securities company. The papers are now being prepared in the office of the attorney general and the action will be brought either in the state or federal courts. Just what the proceedings will be neither the governor or attorney general will say. A majority of the members of the legislature favor an appropriation being made at the extra session to fight the merger.—Minneapolis News Letter.

Attorney General Douglas has just rendered an opinion to the effect that under the constitution of this state, the Lord's prayer cannot be used in the public schools. This would seem to indicate that our missionaries are wasting their time abroad when such ideas are held at home. Wanted—missionaries to make our constitution and laws according to their respective ideas of religion.

Today the official decision of the court of inquiry will be rendered and Admiral Schley will be either censured or vindicated. But, no matter which way the decision may rend, Admiral Schley has the respect of the American people, which is more than can be truly said about his persecutors—Sampson and the Navy Department.

The report of the railroad and warehouse commission shows an increase of 199 miles of railroad trackage in Minnesota during the past year. Considering that there are no main lines now building in this section, Minnesota's showing is a good one.

Modern Advertising.

A little over half a century ago it was considered beneath the dignity of many substantial concerns to advertise beyond the insertion in the newspapers of an occasional business card. Some of the experiences of that time show how recently advertising, as we know it, has developed.

A retail hardware house in an eastern city once found itself possessed of ten times the number of articles of a certain kind that it had intended to buy. As they had been ordered especially for a new hotel and were of a peculiar design, there seemed to be no way of disposing of them except at a merely nominal sum.

One of the younger men connected with the concern offered to "move them" at a fair price provided he be permitted to advertise. The suggestion encountered much opposition, but finally a small sum was set apart to carry it out. The advertisement was drafted in an attractive way, and the people soon began to buy the new article. Finally the house was obliged to send to the manufacturers for more. When the next season's trade opened, the member of the firm who had most opposed the experiment whispered to the young man that he had better write out a few notices "and put them in the papers."

From such beginnings the advertising practice has come. Thousands of dollars are now spent not only in advertising itself, but in devising clever catch words, ingenious phrases and illustrations which will stick in the memory of the reader as well as new general methods.—Youth's Companion.

Birds' Eggs Superstitions.

The old, wrinkled, dusky aunties of the south tell children: "Do not eat the bluebirds' eggs. They make you love to wander." They believe that the pale blue eggs of that beautiful creature, "that violet of the air," that bird with "sky tinge on his back, earth tinge on his breast," will make the greedy nest robber restless as long as he lives. No place, however enticing, can hold the being who has once tasted a bluebird's egg.

He who eats a mocking bird's egg will be compelled to "tell all he knows." The one who robs a killdee's nest and eats its eggs will surely break an arm.

He who eats a dove's egg will be followed by bad luck, while the egg of any bird of yellow plumage will be sure to cause a fever, and he who eats an owl's egg will be always shrieking. The eater of a crow's egg will always, as old aunties say, "be gwine on foolish like a crow does go on, 'Ha, ha, ha!' But a partridge's egg," they declare, "du des make you thrive an' grow fas'. Dey is de onliest soft er birds' eggs dat you kin eat widout findin' 'em' danger[illegible]

Writing a Book.

The following confession of a novelist as to the method in which he wrote one of his books is not without interest: He had had the story outlined in his notebook for a long time and ought to have been able to write it, but did not feel able. Then one day he happened to think of it again and saw, almost as if it had been a stage scene, the little tableau with which the book was to close—one of those ends which are also a beginning. So he began to work and in a short time had completed the first three chapters. Then, for no reason that he can give, there was a jump, and he wrote the chapters which are now numbered XXI and XXII, the last in the book. Then he went back and wrote straight on from IV to XVII.

The story had been with him so long that it was the easiest thing in the world to write it, and so he got through this part of the work with remarkable celerity. In the eighteenth chapter nothing happens. Every day for a fortnight he rose, breakfasted and tried to write that chapter; every night he tore up a big pile of manuscript which he knew to be hopelessly bad. Then he got desperate. The chapter should be written and should stand, whether good or bad. He wrote it and left the house because it was bad and he had resolved not to tear it up. Next day he wrote chapter XIX, and on the morrow he rewrote chapter XVIII and somehow or other contrived to get into it all that he had failed to get before. Then he wrote chapter XX, and the book was completed.—London Post.

Obeyed Orders.

An old Yorkshire farmer was walking out one day looking very glum and miserable. He was a typical Yorkshireman, and he dearly loved a joke. But jokes seemed a long way off just then, and the old man was thinking deeply when he was accosted by a tramp, who made the usual request for a night's lodgings and something to eat, as he explained he had had nothing for two whole days. The effect upon the farmer when he said this was magical.

"Why, man," he said, "I've been looking for you all day."

And then without more ado he knocked him down and walked on him from one end to the other. The tramp got up, looking very staggered, and asked him why he had done that.

"Well," said he, "my doctor has ordered me to walk on an empty stomach, and now that I have fulfilled his injunction I can go and have a good feed, and you can come with me."—London Answers.

Bathing in Salt Lake.

"Salt lake is a remarkable sheet of water in many ways, and bathing in it possesses features which are unique," says a Utah man. "It is very invigorating and refreshing, to be sure, but it takes some time to become accustomed to the extraordinary buoyancy of the water. It is quite impossible to sink or to drown in the lake, but many people have been killed by the water. When there is a breeze and spray is dashed upon bathers, the water is so densely impregnated with salt that the liquid portion evaporates very quickly and leaves a deposit of salt on the skin.

"On several occasions people have drifted out while bathing or been wrecked and thrown overboard and afterward found dead on top of the water, choked to death by the accumulation of salt in their mouths and nostrils."

Child Baptism in Early Days.

The following from the early court records of York county, Me., we give verbatim et literatim: "At a general court held at Saco Sept. 17, 1640, it is ordered by the court that the Worshipful Thomas Georges and Edward Godfrey, councilors for this province, shall order all the inhabitants from Piscataquis to Kenebache, which shall have any children unbaptized as soon as any minister is settled in any of their plantations, they bring their said children to baptism, and if any shall refuse to submit to the said order that the party so refusing shall be summoned to answer their contempt at the next general court to be holden in this province."—Lewiston Journal.

No Reciprocity.

"Brownly thinks he has the smartest child in the world."

"Yes," answered the morose man. "That illustrates the ingratitude of life. There isn't one chance in a thousand that that child when he grows up will go around declaring that he has the smartest father in the world."—Washington Star.

A Woman Balancing.

When a woman stoops over to pick up something on the floor, why does she always balance herself on one foot, extending the other outward and backward as a counterpoise? This question, not new, never has been satisfactorily answered.—New York Press.

The Equality Line.

"All people," remarked the earnest citizen, "are born equal."

"Perhaps," answered the deliberate friend, "but they don't stay equal any longer than it takes for their parents to provide them with clothes and playthings."—Exchange.

Of More Immediate Value.

Miss Emerson (of Boston)—I presume yours is not one of the Mayflower families.

Miss Triplex (of Minneapolis)—No, indeed. Ours is one of the famous Minnesota flour families.—Chicago News.

He Loved Lawyers.

It is said that Peter the Great, after witnessing a contest between two eminent counsel at Westminster, London, remarked: "When I left St. Petersburg, there were two lawyers there. When I get back, I will hang one of them."

THE WIDOW TAX.

In Mindanao a Wife's Death Costs the Widower One Hundred Plates.

Becoming a widow or a widower is a much more serious business than getting married among some of the tribes in the Philippines. In Mindanao "marrying in haste" often leads to a prolonged "repenting at leisure," for they have an institution there known as the "widow tax"—"chabaloan" the natives call it. Upon the death of the wife the widower must pay a certain sum of money or its equivalent in goods to his father-in-law before he can go a-courting again. As money is a scarce article among these natives, the tax generally is paid in plates of common "stone china," which are much used by the natives as a medium of exchange. It is considered the proper thing for the bereaved one to pay 100 of these plates to his father-in-law for permission to look about him for a successor to the deceased helpmate.

If the husband dies, the widow at once becomes the property of her parents-in-law and so remains for life unless some relative comes forward and produces the necessary number of dinner plates. The natural result of this is that married people are all extremely solicitous for the health of each other. In sickness the invalid is sedulously attended by the partner of his or her joys and sorrows, the well person perhaps being moved more by the thought of those hundred plates than by real affection.

Divorce is unknown among these people, but a man may have as many wives as he pleases. It will be seen that in case of an epidemic which would sweep away his wives a married man would be in dire extremity. In the case of a death of a much married man his parents come into a small fortune, for they either have enough plates to render future work on their part unnecessary or they receive enough plates from the families of the widows to set up a crockery store.

A Cockney.

Bullokar, the lexicographer who gave the famous definition for "crocodile tears," was outdone by Minshen, another dictionary maker of London, who in 1617 issued the work which gave the following amusing account of the origin of the word "cockney:" "A cockney, or cockny, applied only to one born within the sound of the Bow bells—that is, within the city of London—which terme came first out of the following tale:

"A citizen's sonne, riding with his father out of London into the country, and being a novice and merely ignorant of how corne and catel do increase, asked when he heard a horse neigh what the horse dide. His father answered, 'The horse dothe neigh.' Riding further, he heard a cock crow and said, 'Dothe the cock neigh too?' And therefore cockney, or cockneigh, by inversion thus: Incoctus—i. e., raw or unripe in countrey-mens affaires."

When the Crowd Gathered.

At the close of some sports that were being held at a country village one of the competitors, coming across the local policeman, inquired when the theater opened.

"We have no theater here," said the policeman.

"Well, the music hall, then?"

"No; nothing of that kind here."

"Have you no evening amusement at all?" asked the stranger.

"Oh, yes," said the policeman, rising to the occasion. "If you wait till 8 o'clock, you'll see them shunting the goods train."—London Spare Moments.

Small Boy's Divorce.

Clarence, aged five, had been severely punished by his parents for disobedience, and the next day, without saying a word to any one, he called at the office of the family legal adviser, who happened to be a particular friend of the little fellow.

"Well, Clarence," said the man of the law after shaking hands, "what can I do for you?"

"Please, Mr. Brown," said Clarence, "I want to get a divorce from our family."—Newark News.

A Cautious Statistician.

"How large a permanent population has Crimson Gulch?" inquired the tourist.

"Well," answered Broncho Bob, "we've got about 407 living here, but with so much hoss stealin' an' bruce faro goin' on I wouldn't allude to anybody as bein' particular permanent."—Washington Star.

A Reasoner.

Old Lady—Now, little boys, can any of you tell me what commandment Adam broke when he ate the forbidden fruit?

Tommy—Please, ma'am, there wasn't any commandments then.—San Francisco Chronicle.

His Prayer.

The little son of an Episcopal clergyman of Los Angeles was visiting with his mother a Canadian city, where the two attended services at a certain church. It is the custom in that church for the clergyman and congregation to bow in silent prayer for a minute or two just before the sermon begins. It was a new proceeding to the child, for he was not accustomed to seeing this done in his father's church, but the little chap bravely and reverently did his part.

After the service was over the clergyman, one of the old evangelical school, who had noticed the reverence and apparent devotion of the child, spoke to him and commended his reverence with an affectionate pat on the head. "It was very pleasing," he remarked to a group of bystanders, "to see this little fellow so deeply engaged in earnest prayer just before I began my sermon. What prayer did you offer to the throne of grace, my little boy?"

All unconscious of the effect it produced, the little fellow candidly and instantly replied: "I said: 'Now I lay me down to sleep. I pray the Lord my soul to keep.'"—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the South.

Possibly the most general conception of the old life at the south held by the rest of the country is that drawn from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a work which, whatever its truth in detail—and there was doubtless much truth—yet by reason of its omissions and its grouping contained even more untruth as a correct picture of a civilization, says Thomas Nelson Page in The Atlantic. As an argument against the evils inherent in slavery it was unanswerable; as a presentation of the life it undertook to mirror it was rather a piece of emotional fiction, infused with the spirit of an able and sincere but only partially informed partisan, than a correct reflection. It served a purpose far beyond the dream and possibly even the intention of its author. It did much to hasten the overthrow of slavery. It did no less to stain the reputation of the south and obscure what was worthy and fine in its life. From that time the people of the south were regarded, outside its own border, much—as, shall we say, China is regarded today—as one of the effete peoples, as an obstacle in the path of advance and possibly among many as an object of righteous spoil.

Hon C. G. Rapp and H. E. Ives went to Crookston Wednesday evening to assist the Elks in entertaining the governor-elect of Iowa and a host of other distinguished guests from that state. After the lodge session had been completed a grand banquet was served at the Hotel Crookston and the feasting lasted until the small hours of the morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Olson were very agreeably surprised last Sunday evening at their home in River Falls. A party of their friends numbering about twenty drove out from the village to visit them and Mrs. Olson was presented with a handsome rocking chair. The visitors also took a goodly supply of eatables along and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Dr Blomburgh had a somewhat uncomfortable experience on Thursday night last. He went out in a livery rig to see a patient a few miles east and on returning the king bolt in the buggy broke and both Doc and the driver slid out upon the snow. They walked home about four miles and it is said the road smells sulphury yet on account of the grade of language indulged in.

Rev. W. H. Gooderham and family departed on this day for St. Hilaire, Minn., where Mr. Gooderham has accepted the pastorate of the Methodist church. During his pastorate of the Methodist church here and at outlying points the reverend gentleman has proved a faithful and an earnest worker, as hosts of friends who most sincerely regret his departure will abundantly testify. Mr. Gooderham is a gentleman of no mean ability, a thoroughly good man, and preaches an excellent sermon. We congratulate him and St. Hilaire, and trust that all will go well with him and his estimable family in their new location—Northwood, (N. D.) Gleaner, Nov. 29.

Bank Occupies New Building.

The new bank building was entirely completed last week and on Friday banker Hannay moved into his new quarters. The First State Bank of St. Hilaire will henceforth carry on business in one of the neatest little brick buildings in the state. The partitions in the interior are of quarter sawed oak set on a marble base and the counters are marble topped. The bank vault is thoroughly up to date in every respect, and, in fact, all of the interior is as neat and complete as money can make it. With the solid stone foundation, brick walls, steel roof and steel ceiling the building is as nearly fire proof as it can be made. It is worthy of comment that the business of this bank has outgrown the capacity of the old premises and credit must be accorded Mr Hannay for having provided such a neat, substantial and commodious building in which to carry on the business.

The old building has been purchased by Julius Pleth and is now located on his property for use as a real estate office. It will be thoroughly overhauled and refitted and within a very short time Mr. Pleth will have one of the finest real estate offices in the northwest.

Herman Adams and Albert Torstvnt drove to Red Lake Falls on Sunday. Mr. Torstvnt has accepted a position in Louis Adams barber shop there and contemplates spending the winter in that place.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

King on Time.

Editor John E. King, of the Red Lake County Courier, published at Red Lake Falls, is one of the most thoroughly up-to-date fellows in this part of the country. There is hardly a question or a subject you can bring up that he cannot converse on intelligently, at least. When he was here last week he had occasion to display his knowledge in a somewhat unusual way. A stranger approached him and politely asked him what the time was. King pulled out the remains of an old watch that had seen better days and, without a quiver, answered in his own peculiar drawl: "Wall—er—it's five minutes to something. I cant tell just what for I lost the small hand off this thing."

Death of John Lundin.

John Lundin, one of the old residents in this vicinity died Sunday evening at his home about five miles east of this village. He was about 80 years of age and has been ailing for some time. The immediate cause of death is given as apoplexy. He leaves four children. They are Axel Lundin and Mrs. Carl Wik, both of River Falls township; Mrs. Chas Westerberg, of Crookston, and Emil Lundin of Tacoma, Wash. The funeral will occur Friday.

Body Found in the River.

On Wednesday evening last Hans Jacob Hanson, a farmer living a few miles north of this place, while walking along the river bank saw what he thought was a mans body protruding between the logs in the ice. On investigating he discovered that the object really was the body of a man. On Thursday morning he went to Thief River Falls and notified Dr. Grundy, who he thought was the coroner, of his ghastly find. Coroner Bellmir was notified at Red Lake Falls and a party of men proceeded to the place and after an hours work, succeeded in removing the remains. The body was taken to the morgue of C. M. Evenson at Thief River Falls and an investigation held. The exposed portions were badly decomposed but from the shoes and clothing it was believed that the body was that of E. E. Brown, who has been missing from his home in Thief River Falls since Oct. 3rd. The body showed no evidence of any foul play and it is supposed that the unfortunate man fell into the river accidentally.

—A new line of fancy stationery and box paper, the latest styles, at the New Drug Store.

The woman's page is a comparatively recent feature in the newspaper field, but the comparison of a woman's page of to-day with that of a few years back makes one wonder how it ever lived to outgrow its swaddling clothes, for the back numbers look as if the horse editor had made it up in his spare time, and it was about as interesting as a patent medicine circular, and some papers still retain this antiquated form of effort and misname it.

The women's page to day, to take the Pioneer Press for example, is about as lively piece of journalism as can be imagined. They maintain a special corps of women writers and editors who are in touch with the women of the Northwest and are amply qualified to pass on the events of interest to them. The special articles are prepared by experts who are an authority in their line.

Club news, civic improvement societies, and all the various town topics of this character come in for their full share of attention. A careful perusal of a few numbers would surprise anybody as to the amount of really helpful matter contained therein.

All this is in addition to the regular fashion articles and society news which departments are maintained separately.

A Remarkable Book.

The most remarkable book in the world, so far as its appearance is concerned, is neither written or printed. It is in the imperial library of Paris, and the letters are cut out of tissue paper with a pair of scissors. A sheet of blue tissue, in which the letters are cut, is placed between two pages of white and so the matter is read. Another remarkable fact is the healthfulness and purity of "Golden Grain Belt" beer. It is brewed from the finest barley malt and hops and carefully aged. Order a case of your dealer, or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

NOTES ON SCIENCE.

CURRENT NOTES OF DISCOVERY AND INVENTION.

The Water Supply and Its Effect on the Public Health in Large Cities—Curious Frost Screens—Tooth Powder Distributer.

THE WATER-SUPPLY.

Water is the most essential to existence of all that man puts into his stomach—indeed, the only single thing he cannot live without, and yet there is nothing we eat or drink that so frequently carries in itself the germs of disease.

There is a definite group of diseases which, because they are specially liable to be spread by means of drinking water, are called water-borne diseases. Among these are such scourges as typhoid fever, cholera and dysentery. Mineral poisons are occasionally dissolved in water, and exert their injurious effects upon those who drink it. It is obviously, therefore, a matter of the highest importance that the drinking water of a household or a holding the post, and he decided that city should be in its purity above reproach, but the problem for the ordinary man is how to determine this point.

The appearance of the water is by no means conclusive, for it may be beautifully clear and palatable, yet contain myriads of deadly bacteria; or it may be muddy and of a disagreeable odor and taste, and yet contain nothing of a really harmful nature. The only way by which absolute certainty can be had lies in a chemical and bacteriological analysis, repeated at regular intervals.

But elaborate and repeated analyses of this sort can be had, as a rule, only in the case of large communities with a common source, and are not at the service of the individual who must look to his own supply from wells or springs. In such a case one must judge of the source by its surroundings.

If the neighborhood is thinly settled, and the well is forty or fifty feet from the nearest house or outbuilding and on higher ground, one may use the water for drinking with a reasonable sense of safety. The same is true of water from a spring which issues from the ground at a level considerably above that of the house and barns. But if water is drawn from wells in a town or from a well near the house or outbuildings, or below their level, or from a spring similarly situated, it is almost sure to be contaminated occasionally, if not constantly, and so is the water of a stream except in an absolutely unsettled country.

MAKING ARTIFICIAL WOODS.

A process has just been patented for making artificial woods out of pulp so as to imitate such costly kinds as mahogany and rosewood. Indeed, the inventor claims to be able, by the help of his machine, to reproduce the appearance of quartered oak, curly maple, bird's eye maple, or practically anything else that grows in the forest, so perfectly as to deceive the trained eye. Obviously such an achievement should be of high commercial value, inasmuch as the more expensive woods are luxuries within reach only of people of means, the rarest of them coming from distant tropical countries.

The process does not reproduce the texture of woods, but merely their appearance. The pulp is thrown upon a cylinder by an air blast projected through a number of pipes, and an irregular distribution of the particles is obtained by various devices, such as varying the intensity of the blast and causing the pipes to vibrate. In this way the knots and grain of the natural woods are said to be counterfeited with surprising success.

Artificial woods of this kind are available for use as veneers, the employment of which is so extensive at the present time. Nearly all of the imported natural woods are sold as veneers. They are cut in extremely thin slices, because they are too costly to be used solidly. Mahogany, rosewood, curly ash, figured birch, satinwood and Circassian walnut are most in demand, and veneers made from them bring from three cents to ten cents a foot. Some veneers are worth twenty cents a foot, though mere shavings, and a single log of a rare wood is sometimes valued at as much as $2,000.

Doubtless the principal use is expected to be found for the counterfeit mahogany and other woods in the making of furniture.

TOOTH POWDER DISTRIBUTER.

Heretofore it has been common practice in tooth powder holders to provide a receptacle which may be shaken in the hand and a portion of the powder discharged through a small orifice, or to support the holder upon a fixed base and to discharge the powder through a bottom opening having a gate or valve. With both kinds of apparatus it has been found difficult to discharge the powder freely, especially when it is composed of precipitated chalk in a large measure, this powder having a tendency to pack in the holder so as to be discharged through the small aperture with difficulty. John B. Sanger has designed a receptacle for this purpose which has no shoulders adjacent to the discharge opening to retard the passage, as the picture shows. In place of the ordinary top a pair of flat hinged jaws are provided, sloping at an angle from the sides of the holder, and having rear extensions to be grasped by the thumb and finger in opening the jaws. As the opening extends across the entire length of the jaws the discharge is made simultaneously throughout the entire length of the brush. Should the powder eventually become caked the brush handle may be inserted through the wide-open jaws to loosen it.

DOES NOT CLOG WITH POWDER.

ARMOR-PLATED WHALES.

The remarkable fact that the earliest known ancestor, or primitive type, of the modern whale bore heavy armor on its back, in the form of strong, bony plates, has recently been set forth by the German paleontologist, Dr. O. Abel. The plates occasionally found associated with remains of the primeval form of whale, the extinct zeuglodon, have generally been regarded as having belonged to gigantic turtles, but Dr. Abel shows that they were part of the skeleton of the zeuglodon itself. They resemble in their character the impenetrable bony shells of the huge glyptodonts that formerly inhabited South America. The suggestion is made that at the time when they carried armor whales were amphibious creatures, living on the coasts and needing special protection from breakers and from sharks.

IMPROVED DRESSING TABLE.

The object of the invention shown below is to increase the utility of a lady's dressing table by the addition of a secondary mirror, which is so carried that a second image or reflection is obtained, thus enabling a lady to secure a full view of the back of her head and yet leave both hands free to deal with the hair. This additional glass is suspended by two hinged arms from the supports of the main mirror, provision being made for extending these arms and holding them vertically, when the glasses are in use. Where only the single glass is provided frequent resort must be had to a handglass, and thus both hands are rarely at liberty at the same time. The result is that much straining of the eyes occurs and the task is rarely performed to the lady's satisfaction. While this new mirror is handy in use it is also conveniently disposed of when not needed for the toilet, resting either flat against the large glass or serving as a cover for a jewel or trinket box placed on the table. The patent on this arrangement has been granted to Samuel Breatnall of England.

AUXILIARY MIRROR FOR HAIR DRESSING.

GIGANTIC EARTHWORMS.

Sir Harry Johnston, whose discovery of a new species of animal in the Uganda Protectorate has excited much interest among naturalists, brought back to London and exhibited there early this summer a specimen of a gigantic species of earthworm which, when alive, was about three feet long and as thick as two fingers. Even larger species of earthworms than this exist. Ceylon has some giants of a blue color, that attain as great a size. In Cape Colony and Natal there is a species, particolored, green above and yellowish beneath, which, it is averred, sometimes attains a length of six feet. Giant earthworms are also found in Australia and South America.

CURIOUS FROST SCREENS.

In California, where fruit is frequently damaged by sudden warming at sunrise after being exposed to frost at night, it has been found that a screen of lath, poised like a roof above the trees, serves as an effectual protection by preventing the too precipitate action of the sun's rays. Investigation has shown that "air drainage" plays an important part in the prevention of frost, little damage being caused by the latter in places where the air is in motion. Wherever the air is stagnant the injury from frost is found to be most marked.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

New Fuel for German Ships.

U. S. Consul Hughes at Coburg reports that the German navy and some manufacturers are using a new fuel called "masut," an oily product from German brown coal. The coast defense vessels are fitted for the use of this oil, and some battleships and cruisers are arranged so that they can use both coal and masut. Masut is said to have one-fourth greater heat-producing power than coal, and is easier to handle, as it is necessary only to open a valve in order to fill a furnace.

A New Telescopic Gun-Sight.

Sir Howard Grubb, the celebrated Irish telescopemaker, has invented a new form of telescopic sight for use with a rifle. Neither fore nor back sight is employed with this contrivance, but the shooter, in taking aim, looks through a small lens which, by an optical device, throws an image of a bright little cross in front of the gun and in line with the barrel. This image serves as a foresight, and by simply holding the center of the cross upon the object aimed at, the marksman takes his aim. The invention is shown at the Glasgow exhibition.

Alligators and Crocodiles.

Alligators, according to the late Professor Cope, belong to a much more modern genus than that of their cousins the crocodiles. No undoubtedly extinct species of alligator has ever been discovered by geologists, but those animals are fast being exterminated at the present day on account of the value of their hides. Alligators are found in China, as well as in North America; the crocodile exists in Africa, southern Asia and northern Australia. The crocodile differs from the alligator in preferring salt water to fresh and in being more vicious in its disposition.

CHARCOAL BURNERS.

SUBSTITUTES RENDERING THE BUSINESS A LOST ART.

Gas and Gasoline Have Almost Displaced Charcoal as a Heat-Producing Substance—The Man Who Burns Charcoal Leads a Gypsy Life.

Charcoal burning in the United States, so far as the product concerns the cities, gives promise of becoming a lost art. Gas and gasoline have almost displaced it as a heat-producing substance. With the thinning of the forests, too, the source of supply is cut. Yet in the woods of Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio and Pennsylvania, a comparatively few follow the lonely life. Charcoal in its perfect state is a baked, not a burnt wood. Here is the distinction that keeps the charcoal burner awake sometimes from 48 to 60 hours at a stretch, especially if he be alone. For the baking of charcoal the wood is piled in a circle about a central pit, leaving interstices through which the heat from the fire burning in the center may circulate to the outer edge of the pile. Turf is piled over all until the pile resembles a volcano. It is the object to keep the wood covered until it cannot break into a blaze. High winds are troublesome. The sign of trouble in a kiln is a thin blue smoke that points to fire in the wood. This fire is put out by smothering from the outside. Only experience teaches when the charcoal is sufficiently baked. When this period is reached it has lost about three-fourths of its weight. An old observation is to the effect that "ten horses will draw the wood and three horses will draw the charcoal away." The slower the wood has baked the more substance and weight will be in the coals. When the pyre has burned sufficiently the fire is put out by drenching the heap with water. Even after hundreds of gallons have been poured through the heap, it may take three days for it to cool sufficiently for the charcoal to be removed. A kiln will produce 200 to 250 bushels of the coals. The charcoal burner leads a gypsy life. His cabin is near by the kilns, and in it is the picturesque disorder that is natural to man in the woods. His kitchen utensils are most in evidence. His bed is wholly secondary. He eats to live and lives to work with only an occasional "spree" in some nearby town. In the woods sobriety is everything to his craft. He is a wonder to the visitors, as he plunges into thick smoke and heat, and works in the choking fumes with the fortitude of a salamander. When the kiln is working best the smoke and fumes are worst, and to keep the kilns so necessitates the constant attention of the burner. These fumes are considered detrimental to health under ordinary circumstances, but the compensating life in the woods seems to make the charcoal burner a hardy specimen of his race.—Utica Globe.

The Care of Children.

When it is a possible thing, have a separate bed for every child, even though there are two beds in a room. This is by no means an expensive matter. Good legs can be turned or made at home and supplied with casters. Fasten these onto woven-wire springs, and over them fasten a good mattress of curled hair or moss. Make a cover of heavy unbleached muslin to protect the mattress, and then make it up as you would any bed. A pretty outer cover or spread made of art denim, linen or other suitable material; made with a flounce reaching to the floor, will convert this bed into an attractive divan if the room is needed during the day. A nice bath is very refreshing just before bedtime, and is usually productive of quiet sleep. It means considerable work for the busy mother of several children, but it generally pays in the end.

Two Sufficient Reasons.

The senior partner did not make his appearance at the office until about 2 o'clock, and then the junior partner was not there. "Where is Mr. Tenterhook?" he asked of the bookkeeper. "He left the office a while ago, sir," replied the man of daybook and ledger, "and he said he wouldn't be back today." "I hope nothing is the matter with him," the senior partner added. "I'm afraid he isn't very well, for he complained of a pain in his stomach yesterday." "Well," the bookkeeper explained, "he said something about having eaten some fish at lunch that didn't agree with him, and he added that there was a football game this afternoon that he wanted to see, anyhow."—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

True to Her Colors.

Now, the Eminent Reformer and the Emancipated Woman were about to be wedded. In fact, the ceremony was being performed. "With this ring," said the Eminent Reformer, "I thee wed." Here there was a breathless hush over the audience as the Emancipated Woman made a gesture of dissent, and exclaimed: "And this, after your campaign against ring rule? Never!" Saying which she swept out of the church. The audience was divided in its surprise over the injection of politics into matrimony and the sight of an Emancipated Woman sweeping.—Baltimore American.

The Palace of the Poor.

In London the Adelphia Arches were famed for a most wonderful collection of human waifs and strays, and Paris, it appears, has something analagous at Bagnolet, where there is a marvelous shelter called by a French journalist "The Subterranean Palace of the Poor." It has been produced by extensive excavations under a hill whose soil yields material for making plaster. Large fires are kept going to burn this natural production and produce the plaster. Around these glowing fires congregate homeless men, women and children, undisturbed, if they behave, by the Paris police.

For years the undermining of this hill of cozy comfort has been going on, and pillars have been left standing at regular intervals, to prevent the top falling in, which, in the glowing firelight resemble, to some extent, the fairy halls of the Arabian Nights.

The scene is wierd in the extreme, as the firelight plays upon groups of ragged wretches who bask in the generous warmth, until another winter morning dawns and excavation work commences when they must go out into the chilly air and scramble for any stray crumbs which may fall from the rich man's table in wealthy Paris.—Paris Messenger.

Physicians Much Interested.

Northport, Mich., Dec. 9.—The medical men are just now eagerly discussing a most remarkable cure of a severe case of Kidney Disease in this county. Mr. Byron O. Leslie of Northport has for years been a victim of kidney derangements, with all the consequent pain and annoyance. He was gradually growing worse, and as the disease advanced he became very despondent, often wondering if he would have to endure this suffering all his lifetime.

But at last he found a remedy that cured him in Dodd's Kidney Pills. He was much pleased, but did not say much about it, lest the good effect he experienced would not last. Now, however, after nine months of continued good health he has concluded that he is permanently cured, and his announcement of this has caused a profound sensation among the physicians and the people who knew of his apparently hopeless condition.

Indiscriminate Drug-Taking.

It has become no uncommon thing at a dinner party to see neurotic young men dropping their lithia tablet into a glass of champagne to counteract what they imagine to be its acidity, lacking, as they do, both the gastric vigor to deal with wine and the moral vigor to abstain from it. It would be a matter of wholesome instruction to many of these drug-consumers if they could be made aware of the general fear of taking medicine which prevails among the members of the medical profession itself, to whom, in the majority of cases, a "dose" of anything not absolutely inert is not swallowed without many searchings of the heart. We have heard of a gallant officer who told his physician that he had been taking a quack remedy, and asked what he thought of him. To this the physician replied: "I should have thought you entitled to the Victoria Cross."—Hospital.

ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.

VOLUME XXI. ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1901. NUMBER 22.

SCHLEY IS GUILTY

MAJORITY OF THE COURT CONDEMNS HIM ON ELEVEN POINTS.

VINDICATED BY ADMIRAL DEWEY

SAYS SCHLEY WAS IN ABSOLUTE COMMAND AT BATTLE OF SANTIAGO.

CREDIT FOR VICTORY IS HIS MAJORITY SAYS HIS CONDUCT WAS VACILLATING AND DILATORY.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The most prolonged, interesting and important naval tribunal ever held in this country came to a close yesterday, having in open and secret session lasted three months short of one week, when Secretary Long was handed the findings of the court of inquiry which inquired into the conduct of Rear Admiral Schley during the Santiago campaign. For seven weeks the court heard testimony, and for fully a month it deliberated upon that mass of evidence, finally reaching the conclusions announced yesterday. The result was a complete surprise, and it is probable that no prophesy has approached the truth. Instead of one report there were two.

Admirals Benham and Ramsey concur in the first, which is signed by Admiral Dewey also as a matter of form. Admiral Dewey makes a separate report, although he agrees with the findings of facts subscribed to by the others. The majority report on eleven points, while Admiral Dewey sustains him in most particulars. The majority opinion finds, in brief, that Admiral Schley should have proceeded with the utmost dispatch to Cienfuegos and maintained a close blockade; that he should have endeavored to obtain information of the Spanish squadron there; that he should have proceeded to Santiago with dispatch; that he should not have made the retrograde movement; that he should have obeyed the department's orders; that he should have endeavored to capture the Spanish vessels in Santiago; that he did not do his utmost to destroy the Colon; that he caused the squadron to lose distance in the loop of the Brooklyn; that he thereby caused the Texas to back; that he did injustice to Hodgson; that his conduct in the campaign was characterized by vacillation, dilatoriness and lack of enterprise; that his official reports on the coal supply were misleading and inaccurate; that his conduct during the battle was self-possessed and that he encouraged in his own person his subordinate officers and men.

Vindicated by Dewey.

Admiral Dewey, in his report, says that the passage to Cienfuegos was made with all dispatch; that in view of his coal supply the blockade of Cienfuegos was effective; that he allowed the Adula to enter Cienfuegos to get information; that his passage to Santiago was with as much dispatch as possible, keeping the squadron together; that the blockade of Santiago was effective, and, finally, that he was the senior officer off Santiago, in absolute command, and entitled to the credit due for the glorious victory which resulted in the total destruction of the Spanish ships.

It is said at the navy department that there will be no further proceedings in this celebrated case, on the department's initiative. Secretary Long and Judge Advocate Lemly positively decline to discuss the findings in any phase. The secretary received the reports at 5 o'clock last evening and he has not yet acted on them. It is probable that he will simply with the word "Approved" to the whole record. The court itself recommends no further proceedings owing to the lapse of time.

A representative of the Associated Press conveyed the first information of the findings of the court to Admiral Schley. He was seated in the public reception room of his hotel chatting with friends and several newspaper men, and evinced no sign of nervousness over the outcome. When the conclusions of Admiral Dewey were read to him Admiral Schley showed his pleasure, and it was evident from his manner that he regarded the statement from Admiral Dewey as a vindication of his cause. He declined to make any statement concerning the court's findings, and, excusing himself from the little company which had gathered about him, went to his apartments where Mrs. Schley had been anxiously awaiting to hear the court's decision. Later the official copy was brought to the hotel by a messenger from the navy department.

RAYNER KEENLY DISAPPOINTED.

Will Advise Schley to Fight It to a Finish.

Baltimore, Dec. 15.—Isidor Rayner showed keen disappointment when the findings of the court of inquiry were communicated to him last night. He announced that he would go to Washington as soon as his engagements will permit, probably Monday or Tuesday, and he will counsel Admiral Schley to fight the case to a finish by every appeal that is possible. In an interview he said:

"I would prefer not to say anything in connection with the opinion. I think the country will almost unanimously accept Admiral Dewey's judgement. The testimony was so overwhelming upon almost every one of the specifications in favor of Admiral Schley that I must confess I am utterly at a loss to understand upon what facts or upon the evidence of what witness the other two members of the court reached their conclusions. I am absolutely satisfied that the opinion of the two judges is at total variance with the opinion of the country and that this will not by any means terminate the controversy. I shall advise the admiral to fight it to a finish, to open it by every appeal that is possible, congressional or otherwise, and I believe that the sentiment of the whole country will uphold him in his resolve not to let the judgment stand."

HOW SCHLEY TAKES IT.

So Long as Honor Is Vindicated He Is Pleased.

Washington, Dec. 15. — Beyond the comment that his honor had been vindicated and he was satisfied with the decision of the court, Admiral Schley refused to talk when told of the finding of the court of inquiry by a reporter. Although he did not venture any remarks his face showed some disappointment as a majority of the findings of the court were read to him. His face brightened up and a smile of satisfaction was evident when the members of the court commended his courage and general conduct during the battle. He displayed even greater satisfaction when the additional report of Admiral Dewey, commending his entire course, was read.

SCHLEY POLITELY DECLINES.

Flattering Offers to Take the Lecture Platform Turned Down.

Washington, Dec. 15. — Admiral Schley's mail has been steadily growing lately, since it became known that the report of the court of inquiry was approaching completion. He has received a number of offers to go on the lecture platform. One proposition was a fixed price of $500 a night for lectures to last forty nights. Admiral Schley politely declined all offers.

CONGRESS.

House Agrees to Vote on Philippine Bill Wednesday.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The house, after less than an hour's session, adjourned until Tuesday. The bill to temporarily provide revenue for the Philippine islands was reported by Mr. Payne and by unanimous consent an order for the consideration of this bill on Tuesday and Wednesday next was adopted, general debate to close at 4 o'clock Wednesday when the bill will be placed upon its passage. The official announcement of the death of the late Representative Brosius of Pennsylvania, which occurred last summer, was made by Mr. Cassell, his successor.

HAY TO BE ORATOR.

Will Be Invited to Deliver Eulogy on McKinley.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The joint committee of the two houses of congress appointed to make the necessary arrangements for a memorial service in honor of the late President McKinley, held a meeting yesterday and decided to invite Secretary of State John Hay to be the orator whenever the proposed services shall be held. Senator Fairbanks then moved that a committee be appointed to call upon Secretary Hay Monday at 10 o'clock and invite him to make the address. The motion prevailed and the committee was named, as follows: Senators Foraker, Fairbanks, Jones (Ark.) and Kean, and Representatives Grosvenor, Cousins, William Alden Smith, Fleming and Shafroth. The time for the proposed service will be fixed later.

MRS. BONINE NOT GUILTY.

Prosecution Fails to Make Out a Case Against Her.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Lola Ida Henry Bonine, charged with the murder of James Seymour Ayres, Jr., in the Kenmore hotel in this city on the night of May 13, last evening returned a verdict of not guilty and the defendant was set at liberty. Such conclusion of the trial was generally expected, the popular impression here being that from the evidence submitted the prosecution had failed to prove its case against Mrs. Bonine. The jury was out less than five hours, returning a few minutes after 4 o'clock in the afternoon and reporting their verdict shortly before 9 o'clock last evening.

BANK LOOTED.

Concern in Kentucky Is Robbed of Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars.

Louisville, Dec. 15. — J. L. Franke, president of the Treadwater Mining company, which operates at Sturgis, Ky., has received word that the Bank of Sturgis was robbed of $35,000 between midnight and dawn. Nothing was known about the robbery until the bank was opened for business in the morning. At the time of the theft the bank held the money which was to have been used in paying off the employes of the Treadwater Mining company.

New Albany, Dec. 15. — The white caps in Crawford county, near English, are terrorizing the citizens. William Cunningham, a former justice of the peace, Jesse Tyre and Miss Alice Haycock, all of Sterling township, have been taken from their beds by a mob of masked men and whipped on their backs with hickory switches. The better citizens of the community are indignant.

Blind Pig Men Fined.

Hudson, Wis., Dec. 15. — Herman Welterling and Frank Comrade, two of the five Hammond men who were arrested there recently by the temperance league on the charge of running blind pigs, yesterday pleaded guilty before Judge Arnquist. They were each fined $50 and costs. The other three will have their hearing Monday before Judge Disney.

EAST IS FLOODED

WORST FLOOD IN MANY YEARS PREVAILS THROUGHOUT THE EAST.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS DAMAGE

HEAVY RAIN AND MELTING SNOW CAUSE MANY SWOLLEN STREAMS.

RAILROAD TRAFFIC IS SUSPENDED

HAVOC IN THE COAL REGIONS WILL COST MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

New York, Dec. 16.—The entire eastern section of the country is under water and one of the worst floods in years prevails.

The floods extend from Pennsylvania and Western New York south into the Virginia and Maryland, and to the eastward through Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and the lower part of New England.

Damage to the extent of millions of dollars has been done, but thus far few lives have been lost.

Warm weather and rain, followed by high winds, resulted in fearful damage. On Saturday the snows in the northern sections of New York thawed rapidly, causing the rivers and creeks to rise and the valleys were inundated. Heavy rain followed during the night, accompanied by winds of great velocity. Trains were blocked for many hours, landslides were frequent, and in the lowlands and valleys hundreds of dwellings were flooded, while the damage to farm lands and buildings is very great.

In and around New York city the wind reached a velocity of forty-eight miles an hour, but beyond minor incidents no great damage is reported so far to property on land or shipping.

Many Towns Inundated.

Many towns in the interior of the state are inundated. At Ithaca the damage is estimated at $200,000. The flood was the most disastrous experienced since 1857. The nearby creeks became raging torrents by midnight. A dwelling house was swept away and no trace of it can be found. The power and lighting plant was washed out and two trolley cars swallowed up in the flood. All street car traffic is suspended and the city is in darkness.

Syracuse, Waverly, Binghamton, Oneida, Troy, Auburn, Rome and other towns report great damage. Traffic of all kinds is practically suspended.

Considerable damage has been done throughout Northern New York by the extremely high wind, which prevailed for twenty-four hours, reaching the velocity of a tornado. The warm weather Saturday sent the snow out of the Adirondacks like magic and many houses on lower levels are flooded.

In New England the floods are not as great as they are in New York, but much damage has been done.

Pennsylvania Is Flooded.

Reports from Pittsburg, Allentown, Susquehanna, Easton and other points in Pennsylvania report one of the most destructive floods for nearly forty years.

Traction company power-houses are flooded, no trolley cars have been run at many points since 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and many towns are in darkness.

Trestles on a number of roads have been washed away and railroad traffic is suspended.

The storm was accompanied by a high wind which at many points wrecked buildings. Many towns report losses of from $50,000 to $200,000.

Pittsburg's three rivers at 9 o'clock last night passed the danger line and are still rising, with reports from the headwaters of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers stating that both streams were still rising. The weather bureau reports that the cold wave will prevent the streams from reaching thirty feet, but that considerable damage will result from the unexpected rise and inability of shippers and rivermen to tie craft securely before the crest of the rise arrived. In the Allegheny river at 9 o'clock the water indicator showed 25 feet 7 inches and

The River Rising.

In the Monongahela the reading on the gauge was 26 7 inches, while at Davis Island dam 21 feet 16 inches and rising 7 inches an hour was reported. At Brownsville 28 feet and rising is reported, while at all points up the Allegheny the stream is rising.

The havoc in the coal regions is enormous and the loss to railroad and mining companies will amount to millions of dollars. In the Schuylkill valley forty-eight mines were flooded, and in the Lehigh and Lackawanna regions the destruction is equally great. Hundreds of mules were drowned in the collieries and it will be weeks before many of the mines can resume operations.

In some sections the water reached the second stories of dwellings, and the town of Westmore, near Wilkesbarre, is submerged. Many residents have left their homes in boats. Similar conditions exist along the Juniata river, farmers being compelled by the steadily rising water to abandon their homes.

The flood was rendered more disastrous by the melting of the snow on the mountain sides. The storm broke with great severity Saturday after the rain had been falling incessantly for several days.

FROM THE FIRST LADY.

Handkerchief at a Rush City Church Fair Sells for Six Dollars.

Rush City, Minn., Dec. 16.—The ladies of the Episcopal church held a successful fair here. There was a midway street of booths. A handkerchief, contributed by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt sold at $6.

Frozen to Death.

Cincinnati, Dec. 16.—"Doc" Orr, a well-known character on the Kentucky side of the river, was found frozen to death yesterday at his home at Fort Thomas.

MORE INQUIRY NOT PROBABLE.

Congressional Action in Schley Case Not Favored.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Opinion in the senate is divided as to the probability of a congressional investigation of the Schley controversy, but is, upon the whole, against the probability of such a course. A majority of the Republican senators appear to be averse to the reopening of the question, and those of this view include friends of Admiral Schley. Senator Hoar expressed himself as content to abide by the opinion of Admiral Dewey, because of his superior facilities for reaching a correct conclusion, and Senator Mason took a similar position, adding that the opinion of the admiral of the navy would be accepted as the verdict of the country, regardless of what conclusion other members of the court might have reached. Senator Hale thought there would be and should be no further investigation. He is chairman of the committee on naval affairs, and he said he would use whatever influence he might possess against further inquiry, as detrimental to the best interests of the navy. Senator Cullom declared that further inquiry would be tomfoolery and that no more light on the subject could be secured.

Democratic senators generally seem disposed to wait upon the expression of opinion by the friends of Admiral Schley. Senator Martin said that while he did not feel called upon to present a declaration, he thought that congress should adopt a joint resolution stating its confidence in the admiral.

WILL FOLLOW RAYNER'S ADVICE.

Admiral Schley Notifies His Counsel That He Is Ready to Take Further Action.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 16.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley has notified Attorney General Isidor Rayner that he is ready to take any action with reference to his case that Mr. Rayner may advise. Mr. Rayner expects to meet the admiral in Washington to-day or Tuesday. When asked whether he favored a congressional investigation, Mr. Rayner said:

"I doubt whether a proceeding of this sort is the proper one. It generally assumes a political aspect. At this time I am of the opinion that the matter should be prosecuted in the courts. There are plenty of ways in which this can be done and this week we will begin to consult and determine upon our course of action."

Among the telegrams Mr. Rayner has received since the publication of the findings of the court of inquiry was one from a gentleman in another state, who asked that his identity be kept secret, with an offer of $10,000 for the necessary expenses attending the further prosecution of the case. The offer was declined.

FLOOD CAUSES WRECK.

Train Goes Through a Bridge and Three Lives Are Lost.

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 16.—A freight train on the Philadelphia & Reading railway went through the bridge spanning Lycoming creek between this city and Newberry at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Three lives were lost.

The train was known as Fast Freight No. 53, and was running three hours late owing to the disarrangement of schedule in consequence of the storm. The bridge spanning the creek was a two-span structure, the first span of which gave way beneath the train. The engine and nine cars were engulfed in the icy waters. The creek was greatly swollen as a result of the heavy rains, and it is presumed the middle pier had been weakened. No efforts could be made to reach the bodies on account of the height of the waters. All the streams in this section were greatly swollen.

ROYAL PAIR RECONCILED.

Arrive at The Hague Amid Loyal Demonstrations Which Seem Impartial.

The Hague, Dec. 16.—Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry, her husband, arrived here Saturday. Flags were displayed throughout the city and the railroad station was decorated.

The inhabitants made a great, loyal demonstration, apparently impartially bestowed upon the queen and the prince consort; at least there was no open display of hostility against the prince.

The queen and Prince Henry drove through the crowded streets to the residence of the queen's mother, who welcomed them before the public, kissing Queen Wilhelmina warmly and shaking hands with Prince Henry.

Later the crowds around the palace sang the national anthem. The young queen responded by appearing on the balcony.

PREPARE FOR A CONFLICT.

Chile and Argentina Are Getting Ready.

Valparaiso, Dec. 16.—Extensive preparations for war are being made throughout Chile. Diplomatic correspondence with Chile continues and hope is expressed that the trouble will be amicably settled, but in the meantime Chile is preparing for eventualities.

Montana Is Snowbound.

Billings, Mont., Dec. 16.—Eastern Montana has been enveloped in one of the heaviest snowfalls ever known. The snow averages from two to six feet on the level and railroad travel will be interrupted for the next few days.

Killed in a Collision.

Freeport, Ill., Dec. 16.—A freight train, a light engine and a wrecking train came into collision on the Chicago Great Western road at Bolton, five miles from here. F. M. Riley of Dubuque, fireman of the wrecking train, was killed.

WOMAN LEADS A RIOT.

Poles Who Had Taken the Place of Striking Greeks and Armenians Are Roughly Handled.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 16.—A riot between Greeks, Armenians and Poles near the Kelley morocco factory here was led by a woman. One man was struck with a knife on the head, making a cut in which ten stitches were taken. Another was hit with a brick in the eye and will lose his sight, while others were cut and hurt. The fight was caused, indirectly, by the strike at the factory, Poles having taken the places of Greeks and Armenians.

EIGHT LIVES LOST

TRAINS CRASH TOGETHER WHILE THEY ARE RUNNING AT FULL SPEED.

TRAINMEN FAIL TO OBEY ORDERS

UNFORTUNATES ARE ROASTED TO DEATH AND THEIR BODIES CONSUMED.

THE INJURED SUFFER FROM COLD

SIX BODIES RECOVERED, BUT WERE CHARRED BEYOND RECOGNITION.

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 16.—Failure on the part of a conductor to obey orders is supposed to have been the cause of a head-end collision on the Illinois Central between Irene and Perryville early yesterday morning. The two trains were the east-bound passenger train No. 4 and a through freight from Chicago going west. As a result eight people are dead or missing and eleven injured.

The trains met in a slight bend in the track, both running at full speed.

The smoking, express and baggage cars were piled on the locomotives, penning in the occupants of the smoker. Only three of the half-dozen persons in that car escaped. The others were penned in, and if not instantly killed were roasted to death and their bodies, along with those of the engine crews, were entirely consumed.

All the efforts of the survivors to reach the victims were unavailing. The at every point. The temperature was 20 degrees below zero and an icy wind was blowing across the prairie, the point where the wreck occurred being a shallow cut, affording no protection. The injured were without hats and wraps and suffered terribly. By the united efforts of the survivors the way car was pushed back from the wreckage to escape the flames and the wounded were placed on the bunks inside.

Two hours elapsed before any relief was at hand. Then an engine arrived from the east and pulled the way car to Irene, three miles distant.

All the injured are doing well except H. G. Wellman of Chicago, who is in a critical condition.

Six bodies were recovered from the debris, but were charred beyond recognition. Coroner F. M. Marsh will conduct the inquests to-day.

Disobeyed Orders.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—J. W. Higgins, general superintendent of transportation of the Illinois Central railway, places the blame for the disastrous wreck at Perryville, Ill., on the conductor and engineer of the freight train. They are said by Mr. Higgins to have disobeyed orders, which were to stop at Irene, several miles east of Perryville.

ANOTHER FATAL WRECK.

Eight Lives Lost and Fourteen Injured in Montana.

Kalispell, Mont., Dec. 16.—A wreck occurred on the Great Northern railway near Essex, in the Rocky mountains, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The engine, mail car and smoker remained on the track, but all the others were derailed. Some cars were overturned and all were more or less wrecked. The accident was due to rails spreading. Among the killed was Otto Erickson, en route from Sweden to California. Seven others were killed, but their names have not been learned. They were three old women, a young girl and three men. Two other old ladies are hurt internally and neither is expected to survive. Fourteen others were more or less seriously hurt. The train was going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour when it broke in two, and the air brakes set immediately, preventing a more serious accident. The largest number of injured were in the day coach. All were asleep at the time of the accident. The day coach caught fire, but the flames were extinguished by the passengers.

WRECKED IN KILLING COLD.

Freight Trains' Crews Are Injured and Benumbed.

Jamestown, N. D., Dec. 16.—In a collision eight miles east of this city, Engineer John Boyle had his leg broken in two places, Engineer Sam Richards is thought to be internally injured, and several men of the crews were slightly injured and both engines were wrecked. The thermometer was 30 below at the time and it was with great difficulty that the injured men were kept from freezing.

BLIND PIG CRUSADE.

Grantsburg (Wis.) Voters Sign a Demand for Vigorous War.

Grantsburg, Wis., Dec. 16.—The village board of Grantsville has appropriated $150 to prosecute local blind pigs and a vigorous war is in progress. A demand signed by a host of voters in the village stirred the board to its action.

Farm Residence Burned.

Cumberland, Wis., Dec. 16.—Alfonse D'Egidio's farm residence, two miles south of this city, was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $1,000; insurance $250. The house was occupied by Mr. D'Egidio's son Michael, who was recently married and who lost all his new furniture in the blaze. The fire started from a defective stovepipe.

Aged Woman Burned to Death.

Ovid, Mich., Dec. 16.—The house of Thomas B. Southworth was destroyed by fire early yesterday and Mrs. Southworth was burned to death. She had risen to build the kitchen fire and, being seventy-five years old and nearly blind, it is supposed she set her clothes ablaze.

To Make Appleton Grow.

Appleton, Minn., Dec. 16.—A commercial club has been organized here with sixty of the business men as charter members. Its objects are to bring in improvements and attract trade to the village.

INSURGENTS ARE ROUTED.

Gen. Bell Conducting an Active Campaign in Batangas Province.

Manila, Dec. 16.—Gen. J. Franklin Bell has been exceedingly active in Batangas province, where he intends by every means available to stamp out the insurrection. There are daily conflicts between the insurgents and the men of Gen. Bell's command, in which the former are almost invariably routed. Lieut. Hennessy of the Eighth infantry, together with one American scout and six Filipinos, captured an insurgent major with 42 men, 22 rifles and 880 rounds of ammunition, without the loss of a man. The number of captured documents and papers now in the hands of Gen. Bell implicate prominent natives in Batangas province. Gen. Bell has notified the natives in Batangas province that he intends, Dec. 18, to concentrate them in the vicinity of towns. He will remove their live stock and baggage. After that date everything outside the limits will be confiscated.

The Sixth cavalry is tireless in its operations against the insurgents and has received the highest praise from the military authorities.

VERY FOND OF GEN. CHAFFEE.

Insurgent General Torres, Whose Sentence of Death Was Set Aside.

Manila, Dec. 16.—The insurgent Gen. Torres, who was found guilty by a military commission of ordering the assassination of American prisoners and sentenced to be hanged, but whose sentence was disapproved by Gen. Chaffee, broke down when he was released. He said it was just that his life be spared, because he was innocent of the crime imputed to him. He has expressed his highest regard and warmest feelings for Gen. Chaffee, and his appreciation that the supreme military power in the Philippines is in the hands of such a man. Torres says he is submissive to the existing conditions.

RECORDS BROKEN AT CHICAGO.

Coldest Weather for December in Thirty Years.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—Yesterday was the coldest day Chicago has experienced in the month of December since the weather bureau was established here thirty years ago. For three hours yesterday morning the mercury stood at 12 degrees below zero. Later, however, the skies cleared, and the wind, which had been blowing from the northwest, died down, causing a gradual rise of temperature, and last night the thermometer at the local weather bureau registered but 3 degrees below zero.

While there was considerable suffering among the poor, many of whom were unprepared for the sudden change, no deaths were reported that could be attributed to the cold.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Dodge Center Doctor's Nightgown Causes His Demise.

Dodge Center, Minn., Dec. 16.—Early Saturday morning Dr. J. A. Garver of this city went to the fireplace in his house to replenish the fire. He was attired in his night clothes, and in brushing against the fire the skirt of the gown ignited and quickly blazed up. Before aid could reach him he was terribly burned, and later died in great pain.

Dr. Graves and his wife have been residents of this county for forty years or more. His widow is in an enfeebled condition, and the fatal accident which befell her husband has proved a great shock to her.

HELD UP AND SHOT.

Saloon Man Reached for His Gun but Robber Had the Drop.

Omaha, Dec. 16.—Three masked robbers entered the saloon of Henry Hakenholz at Twenty-seventh and N streets in South Omaha and demanded that the proprietor hold up his hands. Hakenholz reached for his revolver, when one of the robbers shot him through the lungs, from the effect of which he will probably die. The men then rifled the cash register and fled. Hakenholz was removed to his home. No arrests have been made.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED.

Engine in an Elevator at Hargrave, Man., Explodes.

Hargrave, Man., Dec. 16.—Fire broke out in the elevator engine house owned by E. A. Holmes. The fire was caused by the gasoline engine exploding. Five men were in the engineroom when the explosion took place. The dead are: Stewart Wright of Kola district, R. D. Sykes, a farmer eight miles north of here. The three who escaped were badly burned. The most serious was E. A. Holmes. The engine house was destroyed and the engine was ruined.

TOWN ALMOST WIPED OUT.

Fifty-six Houses, Stores and Other Buildings Destroyed.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 16.—The fire which started Saturday night at Salem, seventy miles east of here on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, destroyed practically the entire business portion of the city. In all fifty-six houses, stores and other buildings were destroyed. The loss is estimated at over $200,000, with little insurance. The fire originated in a newspaper office, but the cause is unknown.

Smallpox Closes School.

Stevens Point, Wis., Dec. 16.—Owing to the prevalence of smallpox in the Fourth ward it has been deemed advisable to close both the public and parochial schools in that ward until after the disease has again been placed under control. There are now about twenty cases in the city. Most of them are in a very mild form. Of the hundred or more cases treated here within the past year there have been no fatalities.

Two Killed by a Freight Car.

Toledo, Dec. 16.—Charles A. Wilson, and August Basch were killed yesterday in the Lake Shore yards at Air Line Junction by being run down by a freight car. They were part of a gang of men who were engaged in repairing a section of track.

Three Men Frozen to Death.

Billings, Mont., Dec. 16.—J. A. Phillips, a well known sheepman, left here Friday for Flat Willow, forty-five miles from here, accompanied by two herders, and a report reached here yesterday that all three were frozen to death en route.

DEATH VERY NEAR

OCCUPANTS OF A FLAT BUILDING AROUSED FROM SLEEP BY FIRE.

NARROW ESCAPES FROM DEATH

WOMEN IN NIGHTCLOTHES AND BARE FEET TAKE TO THE FIRE-ESCAPES.

FAMILIES RENDERED HOMELESS

MANY ARE KEPT BY FORCE FROM LEAPING FROM THE WINDOWS.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—The four-story apartment building known as the Ottinger flats, at the corner of Indiana avenue and Thirty-fifth street, was burned at an early hour yesterday morning. The sixty tenants, most of whom were asleep, were aroused by the dense smoke and many narrow escapes from death were spectacular and exciting. So far as reported every one left the burning building by the fire escapes or from ladders hoisted to the upper windows by firemen, but much suffering was caused by exposure to the intense cold in scant attire.

When the first detachment of fire fighters arrived the majority of the tenants were panicstricken and rushed wildly through the halls and apartments in their efforts to leave the building. The attendant cold spell was responsible for the fire. Complaints from the tenants that the building was insufficiently heated caused the janitor, John West, to overheat the furnace in the basement, where the fire started. The janitor rushed to the upper floors and aided in arousing the occupants of the sixteen apartments. Very soon all chance of escape by the main stairway was Cut Off by the Flames.

Many persons were kept by force from leaping from the upper windows; others were overcome by the dense smoke, and a scene of indescribable confusion followed. Women in their night clothes and with bare feet climbed out on the fire escapes and descended to the street and were given refuge in neighboring residences and stores. Many daring rescues were made by the firemen, especially from the second floor, where the danger from smoke was increased by the close proximity of the flames.

Mrs. Mowery, wife of Dr. A. E. Mowery, was in their apartments on this floor, suffering from a severe attack of illness. Her husband carried her out in his arms through the halls to find escape by the stairs cut off. He returned to his rooms, and throwing open a window endeavored to attract attention through the heavy pall of smoke. Only a chance breath of air cleared the air sufficiently for him to be seen. It was due to this that their lives were saved. The loss to the proprietor of the building J. B. Ottinger, was about $150,000; to contents, about 20,000.

ST. PAUL MAN'S BIG VERDICT.

A. L. Truax Gets $15,225 From the Soo Road for the Loss of Hand.

Buffalo, Minn., Dec. 16.—In the case of A. L. Truax vs. the Soo railroad for damages for the loss of a hand, the plaintiff, A. L. Truax, has been given a verdict for $15,225.

The accident was caused by an alleged defect in the company's depot platform at Kimball Prairie, Minn.

The plaintiff claimed that this defect caused him to fall while attempting to transfer a mail bag, July 21 last.

This is the largest verdict ever given by a Wright county jury in a damage suit.

Truax is a government mail clerk and resides in St. Paul.

DEATH RATE HEAVY.

Many of the People in the Concentration Camps Succumb.

London, Dec. 16.—The delay in the publication of the October and November returns from the concentration camps was apparently due to the government's desire to accompany the announcement of the high death rate with some explanation. The blue book just issued shows 3,156 deaths of whites in October, of which number 2,663 were children, and 2,807 deaths of whites in November, of which 2,271 were children. This makes the total number of deaths for the last six months 13,941, or a death rate approximating 253 per year per 1,000.

RUSSIA TO BORROW IN AMERICA.

France Only to Furnish One-half of the New $200,000,000 Loan.

London, Dec. 16.—A special correspondent in Berlin says he hears that, owing to objections being made to France's furnishing the whole of the projected Russian loan of $200,000,000, financiers in the United States will shortly be sounded as to the possibility of placing $100,000,000 of the loan in that country.

DOCTOR SICK IN EPIDEMIC.

Wisconsin Community Has Smallpox and No Physician.

Grantsburg, Wis., Dec. 16.—A region of about six miles square in the northern part of Burnett county is infected with smallpox. Forty cases are reported, one death having occurred. Dr. Akers of Orange, the only physician within reach, is now sick with the disease.

DEMENTED PRIEST.

He Claims to Be Rev. John Cochran of Minneapolis.

Louisville, Dec. 16.—A man dressed as a Catholic priest and giving his name as Rev. John Cochran of Minneapolis, was arrested here on the charge of lunacy. Papers in his pockets included clerical railroad certificates made out in the name of Rev. J. Walsh.

According to a dispatch from Vienna United States Senator W. A. Clark of Montana has purchased Gottfried Preyer's collection of pictures for 50,000 pounds sterling.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 18, 1901.

On Saturday last the decision of the Court of Inquiry, which has been examining into Admiral Schley's conduct during the recent Spanish-American war, was made public to the world. Admiral George Dewey was president of the court, the other members being Rear Admirals Benham and Ramsey. The decision embraces two reports, a majority report condeming Admiral Schley by Messrs Ramsey & Benham, and a minority report by Dewey which not only vindicated Schley but said further that he was entitled to the "credit "for the glorious victory which resulted in the destruction of the Spanish ships." All agreed that during the memorable battle of Santiago his conduct was self possessed, "and he encouraged, in his own person, his subordinate officers and men to fight courageously." The "majority" report, prepared by a couple of comparative nonentities who so far as is generally known have never accomplished anything or shown themselves competent to accomplish anything except climb to their present positions by the easy stages of favoritism, should be, and will be considered by the American people as the minority report.

Dewey's judgement, backed by his well proven ability, will be to the people the majority report and Admiral Schley to day stands before the people of the United States with a reputation untarnished despite the envious efforts put forth by Admiral Samson and the Navy Department.

Eggs are eggs nowadays. There are times when bouquets are much to be preferred to eggs as a token of appreciation, but at the present writing a presentation of eggs would be an expensive compliment. In some of the larger cities they are selling as high as three cents each. During the recent cold spells the biddies got their toes frosted and are now nursing their chilblains instead of regulating the market. Even the capricious southern hen is doing better in stocking the market than the staid old biddies of the north. The Canadian hens are always prepared for the cold spells and could now supply the excessive demand but for the protective tariff levied to make up the difference between the cheap labor of the Canadian hen and the high priced efforts of the Plymouth Rocks.—Adrain Democrat.

Make No Pretenses.

Be natural. If you are not what you would like to seem, endeavor to come as nearly to your ideals as you can, but do not affect a manner of character that is not your own, that is not sincere. Affectation betrays weakness of character. It deceives no one. One may imagine he is making a great impression. People are too polite to let him know their thoughts, but they see through him. He makes himself less in their estimation. It is of no use to assume to know that of which one is ignorant.

There is a certain strength in honesty that carries weight and influence. Integrity will make itself felt. By making no pretenses one is on the right road to advance. There is no fool like the one who thinks he knows it all, or, worse, thinks he can make others think so. Pretenses are despised by all sensible persons. Be true, be genuine, and you retain your self respect and gain that of others.—Milwaukee Journal.

Monumental Brasses.

At the beginning of the thirteenth century it occurred to some one to preserve the likeness of his departed friend, as well as the symbols of his rank and station. So effigies were introduced upon the surface of the slabs and were carved flat, but ere fifty years had passed away the art of the sculptor produced magnificent monumental effigies. Knights and nobles lie clad in armor with their ladies by their sides, bishops and abbots bless the spectators with their uplifted right hands, judges lie in their official garb and merchants with the emblems of their trade. At their feet lie animals, usually having some heraldic connection with the deceased or symbolical of his work—e. g., a dragon is trodden down beneath the feet of a bishop, signifying the defeat of sin as the result of his ministry. The heads of effigies usually rest on cushions, which are sometimes supported by two angels.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Treachery of Tropical Nature.

"It is very like a fairy story," said Esther under her breath.

"Very," sold he. "And in fairy stories there are witches, enchanters and horrible things that come out of the forest, are not there? Well, so it is there in South America. There is a background of danger. One must keep one's eyes open. Here in England nature is safe and kind, eh? You can play with her as if she were an old tabby cat; but out there she is a striped tiger, beautiful and fierce and never to be trusted.

"There is everlasting strangling going on in the woods. Even the flowers are not kind and harmless. The orchids twist and perch and swing and bloom on branches they are hugging to death. You break a twig of something that looks like a vine, and its milk raises a blister on your hand; you touch what you think is a leaf, and it gallops off on a hundred legs! The animals pretend to be vegetables and the vegetables to be animals. Every living thing is trying to protect itself with all its little might and main and to get the better of its enemies, just as the people in towns do. Oh, the high woods of the Andes are not moral, they are not Christian, I assure you! Nature is opulent, and she is splendid, but she isn't good."—"The Alien," by F. F. Montresor.

Crushed the Objector.

Booker T. Washington told an amusing story of an old colored preacher who was endeavoring to explain to his congregation how it was that the children of Israel passed over the Red sea safety, while the Egyptians, who came after them, were drowned. The old man said:

"My brethren, it was this way: When the Israelites passed over, it was early in the morning, while it was cold, and the ice was strong enough so that they went over all right; but when the Egyptians came along it was in the middle of the day, and the sun had thawed the ice so that it gave way under them, and they were drowned."

At this a young man in the congregation, who had been away to school and had come home, rose and said: "I don't see how that explanation can be right, parson. The geography that I've been studying tells us that ice never forms under the equator, and the Red sea is nearly under the equator."

"There, now," said the old preacher. "That's all right. I'ze been 'spectin' some of you smart Alecks would be askin' jest some such fool question. The time I was talkin' about was before they had any jogafries or 'quators either."

Some English Ads.

A general servant advertised in a Bristol paper for a place the other day, but required "no inquiries, no caps or aprons, every evening out, good wages," and a journalist advertised himself as of "no particular ability" as a recommendation. A clerk recently sought a place "where great strength, personal appearance or ability are not required." "Good butter, sixpence a pound. Nobody can touch it." was ambiguous and may have been wrongly interpreted by the public, and a Gloucestershire paper which inserted the advertisement, "Our one and nine penny dinner at 6:30 p. m. Funerals promptly attended to." apologized next day for mixing up two separate and distinct announcements.

But it is a fact that a church paper appealed lately for "Old man, lame, deaf, epileptic. Will any Christian take him for a gardener?" and that in a leading Scotch journal an advertiser asked for "£65 to pay debts incurred through losses at betting."—London Standard.

Unexpected Erudition.

"An absentminded professor of languages dropped into a restaurant one day for a luncheon.

"What will you have, sir?" asked the waiter.

"Fried eggs," replied the professor.

"Over?" said the waiter, meaning, of course, to ask whether he wanted them cooked on both sides or only one.

"Ova?" echoed the professor, surprised at his apparent familiarity with Latin. "Certainly. That is what I ordered—Ova gallinæ."

This the waiter interpreted as meaning "extra well done," and that is the way they came to the table.—Youth's Companion.

A Story of Bunsen.

Sir Henry Roscoe in a privately printed book of lectures tells a story of Bunsen, remembered from the time when he and the German scientist were traveling together in England. They met a lady who mistook Bunsen for his cousin, the Chevalier Bunsen.

"Have you finished your book, 'God in History,' yet?" she asked him.

"No, madame," he replied. "I regret that my untimely death has prevented my doing so."

Discretion the Better Part.

Miss Gushington—But were you never frightened, captain, when you saw the enemy advancing?

Captain Kandor—No; I felt safe so long as I had a couple of life preservers with me.

Miss Gushington—Life preservers?

Captain Kandor—Yes; my legs.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Since the force exerted by the human heart every twenty-four hours is sufficient to lift 120 tons one foot high, when a man tells his sweetheart that "he loves her with all his heart," can it be that he means 10,000 pounds an hour?—New York Times.

A Suggestion.

The Angry Father—What do you expect me to do—send you all the money you ask for or calmly allow you to get into debt?

The Son—You might do both.—Life.

TIRED OF THE TRIP.

SO HE GOT OUT OF THE BALLOON BY THE JUMP ROUTE.

And Then When He Told the Englishmen He Met What He Had Done They Considerately Carried Him Off to an Insane Asylum.

"I went up in a balloon once, and I never want to make such a trip again," said Colonel A. Noel Blakeman. "My experience as an aeronaut was in London," he continued, "and it would never have occurred but for a friend I chanced to meet there. He was going to make an ascent, and he persuaded me to accompany him.

"The balloon was a feature of some big exhibition, and every day it was inflated and made an ascent, with four or five passengers, in charge of an experienced aeronaut. There were about five in the party the day I took the trip. We got into the basket, which was boxed in quite high, then let the rope go, and we shot up about 3,000 feet. It was interesting to look down on the world and hear the noises of London streets coming from so far below. The balloon sailed along smoothly, and we drifted for about eight miles.

"It was when we tried to descend that the trouble began. The method was to throw out anchors as the balloon settled toward the earth. The aeronaut said that when one of these anchors caught firmly he would haul the balloon down to the tree in which the anchor was expected to become fastened. This would be done by winding in the rope on a winch in the car. We would be expected to climb out of the balloon into the tree, he said, and he would then take hold of the valve rope, and, standing a safe distance away, open the valve, let the gas escape, and the big affair would collapse and sink. He informed us that we must get clear of the sinking folds, as they would come down fast, and if they caught and covered us we would be in an atmosphere of most poisonous gas.

"All this was very interesting, but we did not seem to be making very much progress toward the point where we would have to look out for the descending folds of the collapsing balloon. The anchors caught in a whole lot of trees, but they did not hold. One would get tangled in a tree, and then the balloon would sway far over, tilting the basket in which we were until it seemed that we would be spilled out. Then the anchor would break loose, and we would shoot up again.

"I became very tired of this and told the aeronaut that I thought it was time to bring the voyage to a conclusion. He told me if I did not like it I could jump out. At first I thought he was simply resentful of my remark, but he sold he meant what he sold.

"'When the car tilts over again, you climb out on the edge,' he said, 'and let go. It will probably be a plowed field underneath us, and you won't get hurt.'

"Well, I did as he suggested. When the anchor caught again I climbed out and hung to the edge of the car. When I saw that the car was as low as it was likely to get, I let go. I dropped about 12 feet, and, as he expected, a plowed field was below us.

"As soon as I dropped out the balloon, relieved of my weight, shot up in the air again and soared off. I walked to the nearest road and continued along it until I came to an inn.

"I asked the landlord how far it was to London, and he told me it was eight miles. I ordered a carriage to take me there, and while I was waiting the landlord asked me where I had come from.

"I took him to the door of the inn, and, pointing to the balloon, which was then sailing along about a quarter of a mile above the ground, I said, 'I jumped out of that.'

"The man looked at me in alarmed fashion, and after I had returned to the sitting room I noticed that several people peered through the window at me.

"Finally my four wheeler was ready, and I set off for London. After we had driven along for half an hour or so the coachman suddenly turned the horse in through a gate, and we drove into a big courtyard. I yelled to him and asked him what he meant, that I wanted to go straight to London, but he paid no attention and slowly circled the court. When he stopped on the other side, a man wearing glasses stuck his head in the carriage, scrutinizing me closely, pulled back, said something to the coachman, and we drove on to London.

"Finally we reached my lodgings, and when we did so the coachman jumped off the box, ran up the steps and as soon as his knock was answered asked if Mr. Blakeman lived there. The maid was just answering that I did when I reached the top of the steps and collared the fellow.

"'What was that place you drove me into on our way to London?' I asked him.

"'It was a bloomin' basylum, sir,' he replied. 'When you said you had jumped out o' that balloon, we thought you was crazy and maybe you was a escaped patient from the basylum.'"—Washington Post.

The German Police.

A stranger in Germany soon makes the acquaintance of the police, little as he may desire it. You have been in Germany a week, more or less, when the policeman calls. At first you cannot believe that he is really after you, and then your mind runs back guiltily over your past. He takes out his little book—one of a small library of little books which he carries in his blouse—and inquires your age, your nationality and how long you intend to stay.

You learn subsequently that a record of every person in the empire is carefully kept, with full details as to his occupation, material wealth and social standing. If you move into a new house, you must notify the police; if you move out, you must notify the police; if you hire a servant girl, you must purchase a yellow blank and report the fact, the girl also making a report. When she leaves, you must send in a green blank stating why she is dismissed, where she is going and so on.

If you fail in any of these multitudinous requirements of the government—and I have mentioned only a few of them—there is a fine to pay, each fine graduated to the enormity of the offense. There are offenses graded as low as 2 cents.—Independent.

John J. Soll, formerly editor of The SPECTATOR, and Miss Lydia Munson, of Clarkfield, were quietly married here at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Soll begin their married life with the best wishes of the entire community.

The December term of court for Polk county began a week ago. The calender is a long one, embracing 104 civil cases and 12 criminal cases. Of the civil cases 38 are continued from a former term of court, while the balance are new cases. The criminal cases are all prosecutions of the keepers of houses of ill fame, except the case of the state vs. John Dwyer, for misappropriation of funds while register of deeds of the county.

At the residence of the bride's parents, in River Falls town ships, Adolph Setterberg and Miss Gunild Opperud were married at 11 o'clock this morning, Rev Olson officiating. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to the attending guests. Both young people are well and favorably known in this vicinity and have a large circle of friends who wish them lasting happiness. The SPECTATOR joins heartily in the good wishes.

Dan Potterson was one of those who went to Crookston on Wednesday evening last. He had some business to transact and he stayed over for the dedication of the new Oddfellow hall in Crookston Thursday evening. He says he enjoyed that evening about as much as he ever did anything in his life. A class of eighteen new members were initiated and the entertainments for the occasion were of the highest order.

John Felton, section foreman at Fertile, has received a patent on his new invention to unload cars of grain, coal, etc. The invention is in shape of a common road scraper on low truck wheels, with handle bars like that of a plow. It can be raised or lowered by a lever. It does the work of several men with ease. Mr. Felton has received several flattering offers, one of $5,000, for his patent but is holding off for a better thing.

A story is going the rounds of the papers to the effect that on one Sunday last summer. An Iowa minister was preaching earnestly on the subject of "Heaven and how to get there." Two youthful ball teams were playing over at the fair grounds at the time and an occasional shout floated in through the window. The preacher had come to a close, and paused with the expressive exclamation, "And how shall we get there?" "Slide, slide, slide like the devil," came floating in through the window as he waited for the full effect of the question.

A Preacher-Editor.

Rev Allen Sterling, who has recently resigned from the pastorate of the M. E. church at Thief River Falls, has decided to locate at Beltrami, in Polk county, where he will attend to the spiritual welfare of the community and also run a new newspaper. Mr. Sterling has had lots of experience in all branches of newspaper work, and is well qualified to attend to all the business which may devolve upon him in both lines. The first number of his new paper will probably appear before New Year's.

John Nelson's Mules.

John Nelson has a new team of mules. The old team went to mule heaven some time ago, after about twenty years spent in usefulness and mischief. Everybody in St. Hilaire know those old mules. They would stroll around town and into any place where they found the door open. Then after scaring the inmates, they would laugh loud and hearty. That laugh was a horrible thing. Once a friend brought one mule into this office and we haven't liked mules since. Every time we think of what happened then we feel like cussing, but it's against our principles to swear at the dead. We hope, however, that the new ones will not run so much to voice as the old ones did, and also that they will be more respectful to people and places.

If you have a wife, husband, children or a friend present them with an Xmas present and make them happy. At the Drug Store you will find an elegant line to select from.

A Story of Matches.

One match factory in Ohio turns out a hundred million finished matches each 24 hours. Fifty million feet of lumber is used annually in the United States in the manufacture of matches, and several of the large factories are across the border of Canada. The industry in the United States alone gives employment to fifteen thousand people every one of whom is better off for drinking "Golden Grain Belt" beer if they are fortunate enough to have in a matchless beer in quality. Have a case in your home. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

SASKATCHEWAN, WESTERN CANADA IS CALLED THE "GARDEN OF EDEN."

By a Former Resident of Reed City, Michigan.

In a letter to the Reed City, Michigan, Clarion, Mr. Jas. G. Armstrong, of Meltford, Saskatchewan, says, writing on 27th May, 1901:

"This is a fine country for a poor man, as he can go out on the hay sloughs and cut all the hay he needs. He turns his cattle out on the prairie, and when he is not using his horses he turns them out also. There is such an abundance of food, they never wander away.

"A lady, who has lived here eight years told me that this was the original 'Garden of Eden'. I certainly would believe it, if we could only find the apple trees. But as it is, we have many varieties of fruit—strawberries, cranberries, saskatoons, huckleberries, red and black currants, dewberries, plums, red and black cherries, and red raspberries. All of these fruits grow wild. Then the flowers that dot the prairies, making them look like a real garden. We have eaten of the wild red currants, and they are equal if not superior to those grown in Michigan. We have sweet corn 7½ inches high. As the Western farmers are all done seeding, branding cattle and sheep shearing are now progressing. Wool is only five cents a pound, and many ranchers have on hand last year's clip. I enclose you a potato blossom, slice of new potato, which measured 6½ inches when cut. This is no fairy tale, as we are so much farther than Reed City. It is all facts. Come up and see. This has been truly called the 'garden of the west.' With fruits and flowers, lakes and streams, fish and fowl, beautiful rivers, tracts of timber and mountains, what more does a man want?"

Information concerning all parts of Western Canada will be cheerfully given by communicating with the agent of the government of Canada, whose advertisement appears elsewhere.

Paris Postal Stories.

Some Paris postal stories are going the rounds just now. One of them has reference to a letter posted in a little country place in France to the minister of public instruction, Paris. The sender did not put a stamp upon it, knowing that government letters are carried free.

The provincial lady official, however, evidently not knowing this, put a postage stamp on the letter and sent the postman to collect the 15 centimes from the sender, whose name, by some mysterious means, the secret of which is in possession of her sex, she managed to discover.

Another anecdote relates that a well known Parisian lawyer sent a letter to M. Millerand, and put a 15-centime stamp on it, evidently forgetting that a stamp was unnecessary. Now, the letter was overweight, and the postoffice people, evidently thinking only of the stamp, and not of the minister's privileges, claimed 30 centimes excess. This, of course, M. Millerand refused to pay, and the unlucky sender was forced to take it and pay the 30 centimes, making in all, 45 centimes, out of his own pocket; whereas, had he put no stamp at all on it, it would have been safely delivered.—Paris Messenger.

UNABLE TO STAND FOR MONTHS BECAUSE OF SPRAINED ANKLES.

Cured by St. Jacob's Oil.
(From the Cardiff Times.)

Among the thousands of voluntary endorsements of the great value of St. Jacob's Oil for sprains, stiffness and soreness, is that of Mrs. G. Thomas, 4 Alexandra Road, Gelli, Ystrad, near Pontypridd, South Wales, who says:

"It is with great pleasure that I add my willing testimony to the invaluable excellence of your celebrated St. Jacob's Oil, as experienced in my own case. I sprained both my ankles in walking down some steps so severely that I was unable to stand for several months. The pain I suffered was most severe and nothing that I used helped me until I applied St. Jacob's Oil, when they immediately became better daily, and in a short time I was able to go about, and soon after I was quite cured. I am now determined to advise all persons suffering from pains to use this wonderful remedy, which did so much for me."

Mrs. Thomas does not enlighten us as to what treatment she pursued during the months she was unable to stand, and during which time she was suffering so much, but we venture to suggest that had she called in any well known medical man he would have at once prescribed St. Jacob's Oil, for it has conquered pain upwards of fifty years, and doctors know there is nothing so good. The proprietors of St. Jacob's Oil have been awarded twelve gold medals by different international exhibitions as the premier pain-killing remedy of the world. The committees who made the awards were in each instance composed largely of the most eminent medical men obtainable. Mrs. Thomas evidently did not know the high opinion in which St. Jacob's Oil is held by almost every progressive medical man.

He Who Listened.

BY MARY KING EMORY.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

He sat by the roadside, his elbows on his knees, his face in his hands, gazing at the sunlit hills before him. The afternoon was hot, and he was tired and hungry. He had walked many miles since morning, and the dirty face beneath the torn hat-brim was streaked and smeared with perspiration. It was a careworn, hopeless face; a face upon which want and privation had left their marks, a face which childish pleasures had hurried by; but in the eyes there was an expression of defiance, mingled with uncertainty.

Before him the sandy road stretched southward; behind him rose the rugged hills, with their scanty covering of stunted oak and pine trees and a meagre sprinkling of scattered houses.

Moving uneasily, he glanced anxiously over his shoulder at the clay-daubed house in the clearing, halfway up the hill behind him; then his eyes wandered back to the hills again.

"I dunno what ter do," he muttered, at last. "It were bad afore Mammy went away, but et's worse since 'Liza Snow an' th' new baby come. Yestiddy her knocked me over, an' th' day afore Dad beat me, an' now I got th' chance I'm a-goin'."

His hand clinched and the shrill, childish voice had a defiant ring. The sun was sinking in the west, flooding the hills with gold, while from somewhere out of the pines came the tinkle of a cow bell. The boy shuddered.

"I done th' best I knowed fur youns, Mommy," he whispered; "but fur little Tildy Ann——"

His voice ended in a sob, and tears trickled unheeded down the dirty little face. The hills, the houses and the trees faded away. He saw again the room in the house on the hill behind him, with its few battered cooking utensils, its splint-bottomed chairs and worn deal table. Lying on a bed in the corner was a woman, her eyes bright with a feverish light, her wasted face turned toward the window, through which she watched the setting sun.

"Joe," she said at last, wearily turning her head. "I'm a-goin' Home ternight, an' I wants yer to promise afore I go thet yer'll take care o' little Tildy Ann. I done the best I could fur ye," she continued, brokenly; "though, Gord knows, 'twan't much. Yer dad won't care when I'm gone, and more'n like he'll take ter beatin' ye, when he ain't got me." She looked yearningly at the child beside her. "So I wants yer ter promise thet yer'll allus stan' atween him an' Tildy; then I ken rest easy."

And, kneeling there in the gathering darkness, he gave his promise to the dying woman. That night all was over, and the clay-daubed house perched on the rocky hillside was filled with the silence which comes only when life has flown. Early the next day he had helped his father and some of the neighbors bury her, in the grove beneath the hill, where the pines chanted a requiem and the withered oak leaves moaned through the long winter nights. For two years he had been faithful to his trust; for two years, and now——

"I dunno what ter do," he sobbed; "I dunno what ter do!" He had lost sight of the ugly clay-daubed house and the familiar hills that morning for the first time in his life. Long before sunrise he had crept from the house and followed the road as it wound around the hills like some great snake in the purple morning light toward the distant town. He walked until the rugged mountains rising above his home grew hazy and indistinct; until strange scenes and new faces met him at every turn. Once or twice he had been given a "lift" by some friendly mountaineer, to whom he boldly "'lowed he were a-goin' ter th' circus." But when he reached the town, with its unaccustomed sights and sounds, he felt alarmed and uncertain as to what to do. Hesitatingly he followed the hurrying crowd toward the circus tent; but as he neared it the strangeness of the scene, the music and the noise frightened him. Pushing his way through the crowd he looked anxiously about for some means of escape, when suddenly he determined to run around to the back of the tent, for there all seemed quiet.

Unnoticed and alone he crouched in the grass until, gaining courage with the passing moments, he crept nearer the tent. Looking timorously around, he cautiously raised a corner and proceeded to crawl under the canvas. Succeeding at last in getting through, he scrambled to his feet and hastily looked about him.

"Well, I'll be gol-durned."

The tent was filled with shabbily dressed women and rough-looking men, one of whom grabbed him as, surprised and frightened, he started to crawl back under the canvas.

"Well, I'll be gol-durned," the man said good-naturedly, "whar'd yer come from? Look er here, pals," he shouted, "here's a brat what's dared ter inter th' private apartments o' th' actars o' 'Th' Greatest Show on Earth.'" Lifting the boy to his shoulder, he carried him to the center of the tent, where the other occupants quickly gathered about them. Somehow the tired, unchildish face seemed to arouse the sympathy of the rough-looking men, for they showed him the animals and gave him food, until, happy and contented, he forgot his timidity and unhesitatingly answered their questions.

"So yer dont like Mis' Snow an' th' baby, an' yer dad beats yer?" the big man said, handing the boy another hunk of bread and meat. "Wall, how'd yer like ter come wid us?"

The boy looked at him in amazement.

"I 'lows I'd like ter," he said at last.

"Wal, yer can ef yer wants ter. Yer looks honest, an' we needs a boy ter rub down th' 'orses an' things. Yer'll get enough ter eat, an' nobody won't beat yer. An' maybe," persuasively, "yer can ride a 'orse an' wear fine clothes, like these gentl'men some day," waving his hand toward his companions.

The boy's eyes sparkled and the unchildish face flushed with excitement. Enough to eat, and no beatings! He caught his breath.

"I been a-lookin' fur youns."

"I 'lows I'd like to go fust rate," he said, "ef—ef I ken take Tildy."

The man looked at him in surprise.

"Who's she?" he asked, good-naturedly; "your dawg?"

The boy hung his head, abashed.

"No," he said at last, with dignity; "her ain't no dawg. Her's my sister."

The men looked at one another in silence, then at the child. The big man whistled softly.

"We can't take no gals," he said, kindly. "But ef yer goes wid us maybe yer'll come back some day wid heaps o' money, an' then yer can take her away. Come on, boys," he shouted; "et's time fur th' show ter begin. Good-by, sonny," he said, turning to the boy; "an', recollec', ef yer goes wid us yer'll have ter be on hand by 'leven ternight, fur then we moves."

The boy looked at him searchingly fur a moment, then nodded his head. "I'll be back afore 'leven," he said gravely.

Crawling under the canvas again, he ran across the fields to the road beyond, where he commenced the walk back over the mountains to tell Tildy good-by.

At first the weary miles seemed short to the boy, whose mind was filled with happy visions of the future. But now, as he sat by the roadside below his home, in the fast-gathering darkness, he felt miserable and uncertain as to what to do. He had just come from the grave beneath the hill, after covering it with vines and wayside flowers; but somehow the red clay mound seemed to reproach him for faltering in his trust. When he started up the path to the road again he had determined to go away without seeing Tildy. Yet he still waited, though the shadows were lengthening and the katydids were beginning to call. Thoughts of the child that he had "taken care of" for two years haunted him, while the remembrance of his promise kept ringing in his ears.

"I dunno what ter do!" he moaned, covering his face with his hands; "I dunno what ter do!"

The dark chieftain night crept up the hills, while vanquished day, followed by his banners of crimson and gold, slowly disappeared. A light shone from the cabin on the hill and harsh voices floated out on the quiet evening air. The boy heard footsteps coming down the path from the house and a timid, childish voice called, "Joe!"

The boy, sitting in the shadow of the oak trees, started.

"I been a-lookin' fur youns everywhar!" the child sobbed. "Whar is youns, Joe?"

The boy rose slowly, his mouth set, his eyes filled with a look of determination. Hitching his suspenders over his shoulders and pulling his hat farther over his face, he turned slowly toward the rocky path.

"All right, Tildy," he called cheerfully, "don't cry; I'm a-comin'!"

Disease Germs.

Many persons have erroneous notions as to the ease with which bacteria are destroyed by heat. In fact, the "thermal death point" for bacterial organisms varies widely. Some forms of water bacteria are killed by simply blood heat, while pathogenic bacteria develop best at that temperature. During their multiplying and vegetating phase of life bacteria are more easily destroyed by heat than they are after passing to the resting or spore stage. Some spores derived from the soil require boiling for 16 hours to insure their death. Moist heat in the form of steam is the most effectual disinfectant. No spore, however resistant, remains alive after one minute's exposure to steam at the 140 degree Centigrade. But no degree of cold has been found sufficient to destroy bacterial life.

Silk in England.

King James I. was very anxious to naturalize the silk worm in England and to establish a native manufacture of the product. To this end a great many mulberry trees were imported from North America and a fine plantation of them was made near St. James' palace on ground where Buckingham palace now stands. This plantation was known, as the Mulberry Gardens, and became a kind of recreation ground. Both Evelyn and Pepys record their visits here, and Dryden is said to have brought a lady friend here to enjoy the "mulberry tarts." Close by were the necessary houses and appliances for rearing the silkworms and the manufacture of the silk. But the king's experiment failed.

NOVEL-WRITING INDUSTRY.

Over 200 Published Recently; 5000 Declined by Publishers.

There were more than 200 new novels published in the United States during the fall. There have been perhaps 5,000 written that the publishers have declined. The phenomenal success of a few writers of fiction during the last few years—some masters of their craft and some mere stage carpenters who set up spectacular scenes—has had the effect of making novel writing appear to be an industry. Few persons used to make it a business; for, regarded as an industry, it did not pay for the labor it required. But now it is regarded by many as a way to fortune. Lonely women, disappointed teachers, impecunious preachers—these, but not these only, try their hands at it. You never know whom to suspect. Your physician, even your broker, men in public life, ladies in society—your own grandmother or your own granddaughter for all you know—all these have taken to the secret practice of the craft. For instance, one publishing house which does not publish many novels has within a given period received 800 volunteered book manuscripts, of which 650 were novels. Of these, four were accepted for publication. A few such facts as these indicate the extent of the delusion about the profits of the industry. "Father," said a boy of 14 the other day, "I want you to buy me a copy of the 'Century War-Book.' I'm going to write a novel of the civil war." There are other books that the world wants more than it wants novels—histories, biographies, social studies, adventures. These seldom yield sudden fortunes. But there have been men who have made very considerable incomes as historians and biographers. Their incomes have as often come to their children as to themselves; but almost every important historical work has brought a fair reward at last. As a gainful industry novel writing is not worth the labor it costs. As an art it is one of the noblest and most difficult and only those who regard it as a great art have any right to undertake it.—The World's Work.

GIANTS AMONG THE SEALS.

Habits of a Group of Amphibia of the South Pacific.

Professor C. Chun, a German scientist, has begun making a study of the sea elephants, the gigantic seals found in many portions of the south Pacific ocean. He has been assisted in his work by Robert Hall, a learned naturalist, and the two investigators have gleaned many new facts relative to their habits and life. These interesting seals are only found in the southern sea, and mainly in the vicinity of the Kerguelen Islands, where they go in August for the purpose of pairing. They remain there until February or March. During the winter they are very dull and apathetic, but as spring approaches they become more lively. Of human beings they are not in the least afraid. Mr. Hall says that he went several times through a herd of forty or fifty animals while they were dozing, and only a few were disturbed by him. These seals live in communities, and in a single bay may often be seen from five to ten colonies. Hitherto it has been supposed that there is never more than one male in a single herd, but there now seems to be abundant proof that each herd contains seals of only one sex. Thus, in one bay there will be five or six herds of males and in another five or six herds of females. Professor Chun, who has studied the seals thoroughly in their native haunts, says that for a long time after the animals return to the Kerguelen in the autumn they do not take any food, but remain torpid in beds which they form until they have shed their old hair and put on a new coat. During the winter he saw several seals killed, and not a particle of food was found in their stomachs. Mr. Hall, on the other hand, says that the seals during this period feed once a day, going down to the water to obtain a supply of fish. In any case, it is certain that these animals can live without food for a long time, since they have under their skin a layer of fat which is fifteen centimeters in thickness.—Chicago Chronicle.

As to the Next "Multi."

Marmaduke writes in the London Graphic: What will eventually be the limit of individual wealth Half a century back "ten thousand a year" was considered to be a vast fortune. Then "fifty thousand a year" was the phrase commonly used to describe the income of fabulously rich men or women. Later we took to speaking of "millionaires." In quite recent times the "multi-millionaire" with twenty millions had reached the limit of private wealth; then forty millions; now the limit has risen to a hundred millions and already the word "billionaire" has come into use in the United States. Will the multi-billionaire ever replace the multi-millionaire?

World's Greatest Pigeon Farm.

The largest pigeon farm or ranch in the world is situated on the outskirts of Los Angeles, in California. It has over 12,000 flying pigeons. These live in three large tiers of coops or houses, and in numerous smaller ones. The largest of the houses contains 3,000 coops inside, and 749 outside. The other two principal buildings are made up of 2,000 and 1,000 coops respectively. A remarkable fact in connection with this place is that the pigeons never leave the ranch, and it is very seldom that one ever gets beyond the large wire fence that surrounds the place. They are fed on assorted grain and screenings, at a cost of about £2 a day.

Don't Get Rich, Papa.

The children of a certain family, during its prosperity, were left in the nursery in charge of servants. When adversity came, the servants were discharged, and the parents lived with the little ones. One evening, after the father had returned home, after a day of anxiety and business worry, the little girl clambered on his knee, and, twining her arms around his neck, said:

"Papa, don't get rich again. You did not come into the nursery when you were rich, but now we can come around you and get on your knee and kiss you. Don't get rich again, papa."

New Cure for Rheumatism.

Hester, Mo., Dec. 16.—An unusual case which has recently come to light here is exciting the keenest interest among medical men. Mrs. Ellenor Guordhouse suffered for over forty years with Sciatic Rheumatism so severely and so constantly that her case has been regarded as chronic and absolutely incurable. At times the pain was almost unbearable and she could not rest day or night.

Some months ago she was induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy recently introduced in this neighborhood. The immediate results were magical, and she continued till she had taken eight boxes, and now she declares that she has not an ache or pain left. She believes that she is completely and permanently cured, and as she has not used the pills for some months and is to-day in the best of health, the doctors, who were at first skeptical, are amazed.

SMITH STEPS OUT

CHANGE OCCURS IN THE OFFICIAL FAMILY OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

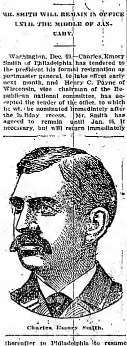
HENRY C. PAYNE WILL SUCCEED

POSTMASTER GENERAL ANXIOUS TO RESUME HIS EDITORIAL DUTIES.

NO OTHER CHANGES EXPECTED

MR. SMITH WILL REMAIN IN OFFICE UNTIL THE MIDDLE OF JANUARY.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Charles Emory Smith of Philadelphia has tendered to the president his formal resignation as postmaster general, to take effect early next month, and Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, has accepted the tender of the office, to which he will be nominated immediately after the holiday recess. Mr. Smith has agreed to remain until Jan. 15, if necessary, but will return immediately thereafter to Philadelphia to resume the editorship of the Philadelphia Press.



Charles Emory Smith.

This change in the cabinet was formally announced at yesterday's session of the cabinet. All the members of the cabinet expressed their profound regret and the president paid a very impressive tribute to the services and personality of the retiring member of his official family. He said that he had sought to persuade Mr. Smith to alter his determination and to remain in the cabinet, but without success, and he had finally accepted Mr. Smith's reasons as decisive.

Mr. Smith first announced to the president the latter part of last month that he had decided to return to his editorial duties. The president at that time urged him to remain. Mr. Smith, however, had been frequently reminded by his business associates of the duties devolving upon him and was anxious to return to them. He had several talks with President Roosevelt on the subject, and finally on Saturday afternoon last formally tendered to the president his resignation.

Henry C. Payne.

Mr. Smith delayed the formal tender until the president had chosen his successor. It is stated that no other changes in the cabinet are at present contemplated.

Postmaster General Smith in an interview spoke as follows: "My relations with the president have been of the most cordial character and have strengthened as we have worked together. We have been in thorough accord in all matters of policy. I have formed the highest estimate of his lofty and patriotic standard of administration, and it has been a great pleasure to co-operate with him.

NICE SANTA CLAUS.

Express Company Will Distribute $100,000 Among Employes.

New York, Dec. 19.—James C. Fargo, president of the American Express company, announces that each of the 10,000 employes of the corporation in the United States will receive a Christmas gift of $10. Last year the company gave each of its employes $5.

TO FIGHT FILIPINOS.

Five Hundred New Recruits Will Sail Jan. 1.

Chicago, Dec. 18. — Gen. Otis, commander of the department of the lakes, has ordered 500 soldiers recently recruited and sent to Columbus barracks, Ohio, for preliminary instruction in military tactics, to proceed to Manila to fill the depleted ranks of the regiments in the Philippines. The detachment will go to San Francisco in a special train of fifteen cars and will sail for Manila Jan. 1.

FROZEN STANDING UP.

Unknown Man Found Stiff in Death Leaning Against a Building.

Hibbing, Minn., Dec. 21. — As the night watchman at the Clark mine was attending to his duties he came upon a man leaning against the side of the power house. Giving him a gentle push and telling him to move on or he would freeze, the watchman was surprised to see the man fall and to discover that he was already frozen and dead. So far as can be learned no one here knows the man or had ever seen him before. A $10 bill was found in his pocket, but nothing by which he could be identified.

ESCAPE IN NIGHT CLOTHES.

Wisconsin Couple Suffer Terribly After Being Burned Out.

Grantsburg, Wis., Dec. 21.—At 4 a. m. Wednesday the home of Guy Griffin, in the extreme northern part of this county, forty miles northeast of here, was destroyed by fire. Griffin and his wife walked through snow and across a lake on the ice to their nearest neighbor, where they were received in a frozen and exhausted condition, both being in their night clothing and without shoes. Nothing was saved from the home, and even the animals in the corral near the house had a narrow escape.

INDIANS CONSUMPTIVE.

The Mille Lacs Reds All Have Tuberculosis.

Anoka, Dec. 21.—A lumberman who is a good authority states that the Indians on the Mille Lacs reservation are much more sickly than they were twenty years ago. He says they are dying rapidly, and in his opinion the prevalent disease is tuberculosis, brought on by the poor food they subsist on for months at a time, and unsanitary living. Practically every Indian, old or young, is suffering from a persistent, hacking cough.

COMPRESSED AIR CARS.

Minneapolis and Anoka Cars to Have Up-to-Date Equipment.

Anoka, Minn., Dec. 21.—The Minneapolis & Anoka Railway company, with trackage rights over the Twin City Rapid Transit company's tracks in Minneapolis, has closed a contract with the Rome Compressed Air Company of Rome, N. Y., for a complete compressing plant and eight air motor street cars. The line will probably be in operation next summer.

Moving Cautiously.

St. Paul, Minn.—It is semi-officially given out that the Minnesota Attorney General will not take any action concerning the so-called merger until after Christmas, and perhaps not until after New Years. He says no new legislation is needed and hence he wants to take time enough to investigate and ascertain what existing laws, if any, are in danger of being violated.

Favors Minnesota Plan.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 21.—Judge G. S. Robinson of Sioux City, member of the state board of control, yesterday read before the state conference of heads of state institutions, an important paper in which he took advanced ground in favor of a law in Iowa similar to the Minnesota law providing for a state agent to investigate cases of dependents shipped into the state and those where it is claimed dependent persons belong in this state.

Aged Woman Missing.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 21. — Diligent search is being made for Mrs. Augusta Schutz, who disappeared from her home on East King street a short time since. It was supposed she had gone to the home of her son-in-law, Albert Beck, at Utica, but this proves to be erroneous. As she was seventy-one years old, fears for her safety are entertained. It is thought she may have wandered into the country and have been frozen to death.

Meetings Forbidden.

Winnebago City, Minn., Dec. 21.—At a meeting of the board of health all places of amusement, also churches, Sunday schools, day schools, lodges and public gatherings of whatever nature were forbidden until further notice because of prevalence of smallpox in this place. There are about a dozen cases in town.

La Crosse's Big Thirst.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 21. — Rev. Guido Bossard of the First Presbyterian church has spent considerable time figuring out what the people of La Crosse spend in a year and what for, and charges up $600,000 a year to whisky and beer drinking and $200,000 to churches and the cause of education.

Died at Ninety-Four.

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 21.—Mrs. Christopherson, the second eldest woman in Fargo, died of old age. She was ninety-four years old and had lived in Fargo for nearly a quarter of a century. She had two daughters, Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Anderson, in Fargo, and a son in Faribault, Minn.

Will Rely on Existing Laws.

St. Paul, Minn.—While there does not seem to be much doubt that there will be an extra session of the Minnesota Legislature this winter for considering the tax laws, the talk of calling it for anti-merger legislation is subsiding since the Attorney General has announced that he finds that present laws only need to be enforced to give the public all required protection.

Farmer Becomes Bankrupt.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 21.—George Alberts of Hayfield, Dodge county, a farmer, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here. He places his liabilities at $5,288.55, and assets at $1,168, of which $675 is claimed to be exempt.

Big Commission Awarded.

Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 21. — In the case of P. J. Minier and W. J. Thornby against Frank A. Waters, suit for commission on a mining sale, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, awarding them $9,000 with interest.

Hibbing, Minn., Dec. 21. — Edward Nelson met instant death at Dent's lumber camp a few miles north of Hibbing. A tree which the men had just cut had fallen and lodged in an old dry stub. As they stood considering what to do the stub broke and the tree fell, striking Nelson on the head.

A CHRISTMAS WAIT.

By Emma Alice-Browne.

Break in the dreary East, and bring the Light!
Rise, holy Christmas morning! Break and bring
The blossom of our hope—the stainless King—
For weary is the night!
Strange darkness wraps the haggard mountain rim;
And worn with failure, spent with grief and loss,
From the pathetic shadow of His Cross
We yearn and cry to Him.

Sad pilgrims, burdened with unshriven sin,
Oppressed, and cowering 'neath the chastening rod,
We humbly seek the path His feet have trod,
And strive to enter in.

His anger is so slow—His love so great—
Tho' we have wandered in forbidden ways,
Spurned and denied Him, all our fruitless days,
He calls us long and late.

We are so poor! Of all the squandered years
We bring no tithes of oil, or corn, or wine,
Nor any offering to His spotless shrine,
Save penitential tears.

We are so friendless, in our abject need
We can but cry to Him in bitter stress;
Yet He will not despise our nakedness,
Nor break the bruised reed.

Hard was the lot for His contentment spread;
Rough was His garb, and rude His lenten fare;
In all the earth He had not anywhere
To lay his weary head!

His patience is so long, His wrath so slow,
Tho' mocked and scoffed, insulted and denied,
Beaten with many stripes, and crucified,
He will not bid us go.

By all the anguish of His laden breast—
The bloody sweat—the sleepless agony—
The pangs and penance of Gethsemane—
He giveth the weary rest.

Break in the dreary East, oh, morning! Rise,
With healing in thy holy wings, and bring
Fruition of our hope—the promised King,
And blameless Sacrifice!

A sudden pulse of waking life we hear
Throb in the bush of hollow glade and dell;
The hills take up their olden canticle:
"Behold! The Dawn is near!"

And far against the soft auroral glow,
Peak over peak the kindling summits burn;
The vales, rejoicing, seem to lift and yearn
Thro' curling mists below.

And far along the radiant heights of morn
A sudden burst of choral triumph swells,
The sweet Te Deum of an hundred bells—
And lo! "Messiah's born!"

And all the burden of our grief and sin
Is lifted from our souls forevermore,
As humbly knocking at the Master's door
He bids us enter in.

The Dominie's Story

The Dominie used to complain sometimes about the character of the stories the rest of us told. He said they were too economical in their use of the element of truth. And truth was so cheap, and also so interesting, he would say. We were always ready to admit that it was interesting, but were not so free to acknowledge its cheapness. Like other exotics it seemed to us expensive. Fiction, being so much more easily produced, appeared to be the true mental provender in the Corn Cob Club, a social institution where we decided questions of great pith and moment by the aid of the civilizing and ennobling influence of tobacco incinerated in cob-pipes. The Dominie had quit smoking when he entered the ministry, but he always said the cobs smelt good, so we had hopes of his reclamation; besides, the air was usually so thick that he absorbed enough to bring him up, in a large measure, to the high philosophic plane occupied by the rest of us.

It happened on Christmas Eve that somebody told a story appropriate enough to the season so far as the subject went, but palpably impossible considered as a happening. At least the Dominie said it was, and threatened to tell a Christmas story himself; and being counseled by the Professor, who was classical in his language, to "blaze away," the good man complied as follows:

There used to be a young man named Stanwix who was rector of a church at a little town in New Jersey called Appleburg. Very amiable young man, not long in the ministry, and unmarried. Nice-looking chap, too, and a bright fellow, but he had his trials at Appleburg. Mainly it was the women—they thought he ought to marry, and of course they were right. But thinking so wasn't enough for those dear Appleburg ladies; with the true feminine desire to help they resolved to see that he did marry. But here again they showed a universal feminine trait by refusing to combine and work together. They all labored hard enough, but independently, and each with a view to inducing the minister to marry a different woman.

It had been going on thus for some months when Christmas approached. Now of course there isn't much you can give any man for Christmas—slippers and pipes and shot-guns and slippers. And in the case of a parson it's still worse—you've got to drop off the pipes and shotguns, leaving only slippers—and slippers. Of course there are book-marks and easy chairs, but the first are trivial and the latter expensive; besides, if he is unmarried and you are of the opposite sex, and in the same state, you will see that you ought to give him something made with your own fair hands, and you can't make an easy chair. So slippers it had to be for the Rev. M. Stanwix, especially after his landlady had been sounded on the subject and reported that the poor man didn't have a slipper to his name.

"WHY DON'T YOU GET MARRIED?"

Well, the result was, of course, that the whole hundred and thirty-six marriageable ladies at Appleburg went to work on slippers; and a few of the flock who already had husbands also began slippers, out of the goodness of their hearts, probably, or maybe thinking that they might be widows some day and might as well have a pair to their credit. The slaughter of plush and embroidery materials was something cyclonic, and the local shoemaker had to sit up nights pegging on soles. Even unfortunate little Jane Wilkinson went at a pair hammer and tongs, though everybody said she hadn't a ghost of a show. In the first place Jane was too young—her older sister Katharine was conceded to have a right to enter for the contest, but it was universally held that Jane had no right to compete at all. Besides being too young—she was really nineteen or twenty—she was also plain. She might have a certain girlish prettiness, but not the beauty which the wife of so handsome a shepherd as the Rev. Mr. Stanwix should have. Furthermore, Jane was in no other way adapted for the position—she had been a good deal of a tomboy, and was yet, for that matter; she was frivolous and careless, and was always putting her foot in it. The first time the pastor had called at the Wilkinson house, and while Katharine was entertaining him in the parlor in the most approved and circumspect manner, Jane had blundered in, and inside of five minutes asked him why he didn't get married—all the girls said he ought to. Jane had explained to everybody that she meant it as a joke, but it has generally been pronounced ill-timed and in bad taste.

But poor Jane kept working away on her slippers regardless of the talk. Everybody said that Jane's slippers wouldn't fit, or that they would both be for one foot, or that she would get the heels sewed on the toe end, or something. Jane finally put on the finishing touches and then packed them in a pasteboard box and tied it with pink ribbon.

Then she got her other Christmas presents ready. She had a lot of handkerchiefs for an aunt, and a shopping bag for a married sister, and a little knit shawl for her grandmother, and a pair of skates for a boy cousin, and various other things for divers other persons, including a fine meerschaum pipe and a pound of his favorite smoking tobacco for her brother who was at college, and who wouldn't be home till New Year's. Each thing she carefully put up in a box or bundle and laid it away.

The day before Christmas was a never-to-be-forgotten time for the Rev. Mr. Stanwix. Slippers just came down on him like an Egyptian plague.

Along about four o'clock Stanwix got crowded out of his room—slippers piled half way to the ceiling—and had to put a chair out in the hall and sit there with an atlas of the world in his lap writing his Christmas sermon on it. Mighty tough sermon it was, too, and got tougher as the slippers continued to arrive. Fact is, he was getting pretty mad; and every new pair sent his temperature up five degrees. Consequently, at ten o'clock he was just boiling. Of course he couldn't swear, but the way he tramped up and down that hall and ground his teeth really amounted to the same thing. The arriving slippers now began to fall off. For ten minutes nothing came, and he was just starting down to ask the landlady if she couldn't put a cot in the hall so he could go to bed, when in came another box. It was from Jane—just her luck, of course, to be late and strike him when he was all worked up to the bursting point. But let us draw a veil over the scene right here and leave the poor man alone as he opens Jane's box.

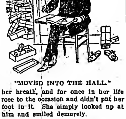
It was not more than half-past nine the next morning when the Rev. Mr. Stanwix mounted the Wilkinson steps and tugged at the door bell. He asked for Jane. It seemed rather queer, but they ushered him into the parlor and sent Jane in. Well, to make a long story short, it wasn't ten minutes until he had the thing all fixed up. He had his chair drawn close up beside her end of the sofa.

"Jane," he was saying, "I've loved you ever since the first day I saw you, but I never knew it until I opened your box."

"Then you liked them, did you? I'm so glad," murmured Jane.

"I should say I did! Why, it's one of the finest meerschaums I ever saw, and that tobacco used to be my favorite brand at college. But, Jane, how did you know I used to smoke, and was dying to begin again?"

Jane had stopped breathing at the word meerschaum. Now she caught her breath, and for once in her life rose to the occasion and didn't put her foot in it. She simply looked up at him and smiled demurely.



"MOVED INTO THE HALL."

"Oh, I guessed it," she said.

"It was the best guess you ever made. I should have died last night amidst that awful landslide of slippers if I hadn't smoked about half of that tobacco. I mean to keep on smoking now—that is, if you don't object, dear?"

Jane scored again.

"I rather like the smell of good tobacco," she said.—Saturday Evening Post.

Only President Without an "A."

President Roosevelt is the first occupant of the White House in whose name the letter "a" does not appear. Not only has that letter appeared in the names of all previous Presidents, but also in the names of nearly every one of the 61 Americans who have received votes for President in the electoral college down to William J. Bryan. There are only eight exceptions to this rule.

SAMPSON'S HOWL

PROTESTS AGAINST MINORITY REPORT FILED BY ADMIRAL DEWEY.

WHO WAS IN CHIEF COMMAND?

PRESENTS LENGTHY ARGUMENT THAT SCHLEY ENJOYED NOT THIS HONOR.

HE, SAMPSON, WAS THE TRUE "IT"

POINTS OUT THAT THIS QUESTION WAS NOT BEFORE THE COURT.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The objection of Admiral W. T. Sampson to that portion of Admiral Dewey's report of the Schley court of inquiry in which he says Admiral Schley was in command at the battle off Santiago and entitled to the credit of the victory was filed with Secretary Long yesterday. The document was brought to the navy department by E. S. Theall, of counsel for Admiral Sampson, and handed to the secretary.

The department is requested to strike out or specifically disapprove that portion of Admiral Dewey's opinion filed in connection with the proceeding of the Schley court of inquiry in which he states his views to be that Commodore Schley was in absolute command at the naval battle off Santiago.

First—Commodore Schley was not in command at that battle.

Second—The president of the United States and the navy department had decided that Admiral Sampson was in command at that battle and Commodore Schley second in command.

Third—The question as to who commanded at Santiago was not referred to the court for consideration and evidence upon the point was excluded.

Each of these specifications is taken up in detail and exhaustive arguments are presented to support all of the contentions upon which they found Admiral Sampson's claims to the honor of having commanded in the battle of Santiago.

Capt. Lemly, judge advocate general, yesterday handed to Secretary Long his answer to the bill of exceptions filed by Admiral Schley against the findings of the majority of the court. All the points made by Schley are combatted by the judge advocate, who recommends that the findings of the court be approved.

GAGE WILL RETIRE.

To Step Out as Soon as the President Can Secure a Successor.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The New York announcement of Secretary Gage's resignation is quite generally credited in Washington. His address Thursday night is regarded as a sort of valedictory to official duties. It is Secretary Gage's intention to relinquish the treasury portfolio as soon as President Roosevelt can find a suitable successor and he has so informed the president. Mr. Gage would like to be relieved before spring. The president has done all he could to dissuade Secretary Gage from retiring and probably will continue to use his efforts in that direction. Secretary Gage's intention to retire was made known to the president some time ago.

BANK ROBBERY CHARGED.

Former Merchant Arrested for Robbing the Springdale Bank.

Fayetteville, Ark., Dec. 21. — N. B. Carlisle, formerly a merchant and later a livery stable man of this city, was arrested last night charged with robbing the Springdale bank Thursday of $7,000. He is held in the sum of $3,000 bonds for examining trial Monday. The robbery was a bold one and was executed by only one man. About $3,000 of the money has been recovered. An overcoat, supposed to belong to Carlisle, was found yesterday, and in the pockets were a pistol and package containing $1,000 in bills.

JACKSONS FOUND GUILTY.

Theocrats Are Sentenced to Penal Servitude.

London, Dec. 21. — Theodore and Laura Jackson, the latter best known in the United States by the name Ann Odelia Diss De Barr, were found guilty by a jury in the Old Bailey yesterday on charges of immoral practices and fraud. The judge at once imposed sentence of fifteen and seven years' penal servitude upon Jackson and his reputed wife, respectively. The prisoners listened to the passing of sentence in evident astonishment, but maintained silence.

One Hazer Expelled.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—As a result of hazing which was the outgrowth of rivalry between the occupants of College and North halls at Lake Forest university, Gus Johnson, a senior student from Decatur, Ill., was expelled from the university and five others were suspended, two until Sept. 1, 1902, without permission to ask to return.

Gardner Defeats Carter.

San Francisco, Dec. 21. — George Gardner and Kid Carter met last night in what was announced as a contest for the middleweight championship of the world. Gardner clearly established his right to the title by knocking out Carter in the eighth round.

To Stamp Out Smallpox.

Winnebago City, Minn., Dec. 21.—At a meeting of the board of health all places of amusement, churches, Sunday schools, day schools, lodges and public gatherings were closed until further notice because of smallpox.

Found Partly Burned Bodies.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Dec. 21. — The bodies of two shepherds, partly burned, were found yesterday at Cabra Springs, near Canon Blanco, Santa Fe county. It is believed the men were murdered and their flocks stolen.

THEATRICAL MANAGER IN LUCK.

Discovers That a Child Actress Is His Daughter, for Whom He Had Long Searched.

Milwaukee, Dec. 21.—Frank Dodge, a well known theatrical manager with "A Gambler's Daughter," has recognised in Baby Vavene, a child actress well known in Milwaukee, his daughter for whom he has sought in vain for nearly six years. After Vavene's birth his wife secured a divorce, but she died five years ago. After her death Vavene came to Milwaukee, where she has been under the care of relatives. Dodge visited the Academy of Music last night and recognized his daughter there. He will pay for her education, though she will remain in the care of relatives.

OVER SIXTY MILES AN HOUR.

Engineer of a Fast Mail Train Opens the Throttle and Makes Up for Lost Time.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 21.—One of the fastest railroad records ever made in Wisconsin stands to the credit of the Milwaukee road fast mail which left St. Paul Thursday. On account of a small wreck near La Crosse the train was given the right of way south, and made the seventy-eight miles between La Crosse and Portage in seventy-four minutes. The engineer was told when he reached La Crosse that he would have the right of way, and on leaving that city he opened the throttle wide. Shortly before reaching Portage his train made the speed of nearly eighty miles an hour. This rate of speed was maintained for about ten miles.

BATTLE WITH WOLVES.

Cook in a Lumber Camp Has a Running Fight With a Dozen Wolves.

Marinette, Wis., Dec. 21. — Claude Fruckleton, cook for the Sawyer-Goodman company, was attacked by a pack of wolves at Floodwood, Mich., last night. For two miles he kept up a running fight with a dozen of the brutes, which did not cease to attack him until his cries on nearing camp brought some of the other men at the camp with guns, who drove the wolves back. Fruckleton had been out to a party, and was returning when the wolves found his scent. He started to run for camp, but had not gone far when the brutes overtook him. He kept at the yelping pack with a club and killed one before aid came.

LAWYER "SASSES" THE COURT.

Judge Throws Him in the Bastile for Contempt and He Appeals.

Cando, N. D., Dec. 21.—At the trial of the case of Irene C. King against Mary D. Hanson, John M. Cochrane of Grand Forks, representing the defendant, found objection to the presiding judge, J. F. Cowan, stating the same in his characteristic, forceful way. The court fined Mr. Cochrane $100 for contempt and caused him to be taken to jail upon the latter's refusal to pay the fine. Mr. Cochrane remained in jail from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m., when bail was offered by D. F. McLaughlin. The case was appealed to the supreme court, and the outcome is eliciting much interest.

FOR PENNY POSTAGE.

Next Postmaster General Promises to Work for Reduction.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 21.—In speaking of the postoffice department of the government, of which he is to be the head, beginning in January, Henry C. Payne yesterday intimated that he was an advocate of penny postage. He said that he intended to work diligently to bring about a reduction in postage. First the service would have to be made self-supporting, then the reduction of rates would be an easy matter.

LIQUOR FOR JURORS.

New Trial Granted Because of Charge of Illegal Indulgence.

Duluth, Dec. 21.—News reached Duluth last night that Bill Randolph, recently convicted of manslaughter in the first degree at Grand Rapids for killing one-armed Frank Sullivan, has been granted a new trial. Newly discovered evidence and the charge that liquor was used in the jury room during the consideration of the case, are the grounds given.

Receiver Appointed.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 21. — Judge Carland of the United States court yesterday appointed F. H. Held for Burglary.

Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 21.—Fred Covert, charged with complicity in the robbery of S. T. Voorhees' store at Galena, has been bound over to the grand jury under $3,000 bonds. SMITH STEPS OUT

CHANGE OCCURS IN THE OFFICIAL FAMILY OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

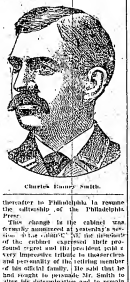
HENRY C. PAYNE WILL SUCCEED

POSTMASTER GENERAL ANXIOUS TO RESUME HIS EDITORIAL DUTIES.

NO OTHER CHANGES EXPECTED

MR. SMITH WILL REMAIN IN OFFICE UNTIL THE MIDDLE OF JANUARY.

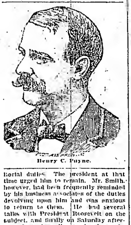
Washington, Dec. 19.—Charles Emory Smith of Philadelphia has tendered to the president his formal resignation as postmaster general, to take effect early next month, and Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, has accepted the tender of the office, to which he will be nominated immediately after the holiday recess. Mr. Smith has agreed to remain until Jan. 15, if necessary, but will return immediately thereafter to Philadelphia to resume the editorship of the Philadelphia Press.



Charles Emory Smith.

This change in the cabinet was formally announced at yesterday's session of the cabinet. All the members of the cabinet expressed their profound regret and the president paid a very impressive tribute to the services and personality of the retiring member of his official family. He said that he had sought to persuade Mr. Smith to alter his determination and to remain in the cabinet, but without success, and he had finally accepted Mr. Smith's reasons as decisive.

Mr. Smith first announced to the president the latter part of last month that he had decided to return to his editorial duties. The president at that time urged him to remain. Mr. Smith, however, had been frequently reminded by his business associates of the duties devolving upon him and was anxious to return to them. He had several talks with President Roosevelt on the subject, and finally on Saturday afternoon last formally tendered to the president his resignation.



Henry C. Payne.

Mr. Smith delayed the formal tender until the president had chosen his successor. It is stated that no other changes in the cabinet are at present contemplated.

Postmaster General Smith in an interview spoke as follows: "My relations with the president have been of the most cordial character and have strengthened as we have worked together. We have been in thorough accord in all matters of policy. I have formed the highest estimate of his lofty and patriotic standard of administration, and it has been a great pleasure to co-operate with him."

New York, Dec. 19.—James C. Fargo, president of the American Express company, announces that each of the 10,000 employes of the corporation in the United States will receive a Christmas gift of $10. Last year the company gave each of its employes $5.

TO FIGHT FILIPINOS.

Five Hundred New Recruits Will Sail Jan. 1.

Chicago, Dec. 18. — Gen. Otis, commander of the department of the lakes, has ordered 500 soldiers recently recruited and sent to Columbus barracks, Ohio, for preliminary instruction in military tactics, to proceed to Manila to fill the depleted ranks of the regiments in the Philippines. The detachment will go to San Francisco in a special train of fifteen cars and will sail for Manila Jan. 1.

FROZEN STANDING UP.

Unknown Man Found Stiff in Death Leaning Against a Building.

Hibbing, Minn., Dec. 21. — As the night-watchman at the Clark mine was attending to his duties he came upon a man leaning against the side of the power house. Giving him a gentle push and telling him to move on or he would freeze, the watchman was surprised to see the man fall and to discover that he was already frozen and dead. So far as can be learned no one here knows the man or had ever seen him before. A $10 bill was found in his pocket, but nothing by which he could be identified.

ESCAPE IN NIGHT CLOTHES.

Wisconsin Couple Suffer Terribly After Being Burned Out.

Grantsburg, Wis., Dec. 21.—At 4 a. m. Wednesday the home of Guy Griffin, in the extreme northern part of this county, forty miles northeast of here, was destroyed by fire. Griffin and his wife walked through snow and across a lake on the ice to their nearest neighbor, where they were received in a frozen and exhausted condition, both being in their night clothing and without shoes. Nothing was saved from the home, and even the animals in the corral near the house had a narrow escape.

INDIANS CONSUMPTIVE.

The Mille Lacs Dels All Have Tuberculosis.

Anoka, Dec. 21.—A lumberman who is a good authority states that the Indians on the Mille Lacs reservation are much more sickly than they were twenty years ago. He says they are dying rapidly, and in his opinion the prevalent disease is tuberculosis, brought on by the poor food they subsist on for months at a time, and unsanitary living. Practically every Indian, old or young, is suffering from a persistent, hacking cough.

COMPRESSED AIR CARS.

Minneapolis and Anoka Cars to Have Up-to-Date Equipment.

Anoka, Minn., Dec. 21.—The Minneapolis & Anoka Railway company, with trackage rights over the Twin City Rapid Transit company's tracks in Minneapolis, has closed a contract with the Home Compressed Air Company of Rome, N. Y., for a complete compressing plant and eight air motor street cars. The line will probably be in operation next summer.

Moving Cautiously.

St. Paul, Minn.—It is semi-officially given out that the Minnesota Attorney General will not take any action concerning the so-called merger until after Christmas, and perhaps not until after New Years. He says no new legislation is needed and hence he wants to take time enough to investigate and ascertain what existing laws, if any, are in danger of being violated.

Favors Minnesota Plan.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 21.—Judge G. S. Robinson of Sioux City, member of the state board of control, yesterday read before the state conference of heads of state institutions, an important paper in which he took advanced ground in favor of a law in Iowa similar to the Minnesota law providing for a state agent to investigate cases of dependents shipped into the state and those where it is claimed dependent persons belong in this state.

Aged Woman Missing.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 21. — Diligent search is being made for Mrs. Augusta Schutz, who disappeared from her home on East King street a short time since. It was supposed she had gone to the home of her son-in-law, Albert Beck, at Utica, but this proves to be erroneous. As she was seventy-one years old, fears for her safety are entertained. It is thought she may have wandered into the country and have been frozen to death.

Meetings Forbidden.

Winnebago City, Minn., Dec. 21.—At a meeting of the board of health all places of amusement, also churches, Sunday schools, day schools, lodges and public gatherings of whatever nature were forbidden until further notice because of prevalence of smallpox in this place. There are about a dozen cases in town.

La Crosse's Big Thirst.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 21. — Rev. Guido Bossard of the First Presbyterian church has spent considerable time figuring out what the people of La Crosse spend in a year and what for, and charges up $500,000 a year to whisky and beer drinking and $200,000 to churches and the cause of education.

Died at Ninety-Four.

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 21.—Mrs. Christopherson, the second oldest woman in Fargo, died of old age. She was ninety-four years old and had lived in Fargo for nearly a quarter of a century. She had two daughters, Mrs. Stolt and Mrs. Anderson, in Fargo, and a son in Faribault, Minn.

Will Rely on Existing Laws.

St. Paul, Minn.—While there does not seem to be much doubt that there will be an extra session of the Minnesota Legislature this winter for considering the tax laws, the talk of calling it for anti-merger legislation is subsiding since the Attorney General has announced that he finds that present laws only need to be enforced to give the public all required protection.

Farmer Becomes Bankrupt.

Winona, Minn., Dec. 21.—George Alberts of Hayfield, Dodge county, a farmer, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here. He places his liabilities at $5,255.56, and assets at $1,168, of which $625 is claimed to be exempt.

Big Commission Awarded.

Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 21. — In the case of P. J. Minter and W. J. Thornby against Frank A. Waters, suit for commission on a mining sale, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, awarding them $9,000 with interest.

Hibbing, Minn., Dec. 21. — Edward Nelson met instant death at Dent's lumber camp a few miles north of Hibbing. A tree which the men had just cut had fallen and lodged in an old dry stub. As they stood considering what to do the stub broke and the tree fell, striking Nelson on the head.

A CHRISTMAS WAIT.

By Emma Alice Browne.

Break in the dreary East, and bring the Light!
Rise, holy Christmas morning! Break and bring
The blossom of our hope—the stainless King—
For weary is the night!
Strange darkness wraps the haggard mountain rim;
And worn with failure, spent with grief and loss,
From the pathetic shadow of His Cross
We yearn and cry to Him.

Sad pilgrims, burdened with unshriven sin,
Oppressed, and cowering 'neath the chastening rod,
We humbly seek the path His feet have trod,
And strive to enter in.

His anger is so slow—His love so great—
Tho' we have wandered in forbidden ways,
Spurned and denied Him, all our fruitless days,
He calls us long and late.

We are so poor! Of all the squandered years
We bring no tithes of oil, or corn, or wine,
Nor any offering to His spotless shrine,
Save penitential tears.

We are so friendless, in our abject need
We can but cry to Him in bitter stress;
Yet He will not despise our nakedness,
Nor break the bruised reed.

Hard was the lot for His contentment spread;
Rough was His garb, and rude His lenten fare;
In all the earth He had not anywhere
To lay his weary head!

His patience is so long, His wrath so slow,
Tho' mocked and scoffed, insulted and denied,
Beaten with many stripes, and crucified,
He will not bid us go.

By all the anguish of His laden breast—
The bloody sweat—the sleepless agony—
The pangs and pennance of Gethsemane—
He giveth the weary rest.

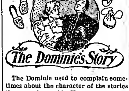
Break in the dreary East, oh, morning! Rise,
With healing in thy holy wings, and bring
Fruition of our hope—the promised King,
And blameless Sacrifice!

A sudden pulse of waking life we hear
Throb in the hush of hollow glade and dell;
The bells take up their olden canticle:
"Behold! The Dawn is near!"

And far against the soft auroral glow,
Peak over peak the kindling summits burn;
The vales, rejoicing, seem to lift and yearn
Thro' curling mists below.

And far along the radiant heights of morn
A sudden burst of choral triumph swells,
The sweet Te Deum of an hundred bells—
And lo! "Messiah's born!"

And all the burden of our grief and sin
Is lifted from our souls forevermore,
As humbly knocking at the Master's door
He bids us enter in.



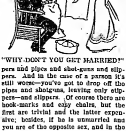
The Dominie's Story

The Dominie used to complain sometimes about the character of the stories the rest of us told. He said they were too economical in their use of the element of truth. And truth was so cheap, and also so interesting, he would say. We were always ready to admit that it was interesting, but were not so free to acknowledge its cheapness. Like other exotics it seemed to us expensive. Fiction, being so much more easily produced, appeared to be the true mental provender in the Corn Cob Club, a social institution where we decided questions of great pith and moment by the aid of the civilizing and ennobling influence of tobacco incinerated in cob-pipes. The Dominie had quit smoking when he entered the ministry, but he always said the cobs smelt good, so we had hopes of his reclamation; besides, the air was usually so thick that he absorbed enough to bring him up, in a large measure, to the high philosophic plane occupied by the rest of us.

It happened on Christmas Eve that somebody told a story appropriate enough to the season so far as the subject went, but palpably impossible considered as a happening. At least the Dominie said it was, and threatened to tell a Christmas story himself; and being counseled by the Professor, who was classical in his language, to "bisze away," the good man complied as follows:

There used to be a young man named Stanwix who was rector of a church at a little town in New Jersey called Appleburg. Very amiable young man, not long in the ministry, and unmarried. Nice-looking chap, too, and a bright fellow, but he had his trials at Appleburg. Mainly it was the women—they thought he ought to marry, and of course they were right. But thinking so wasn't enough for those dear Appleburg ladies; with the true feminine desire to help they resolved to see that he did marry. But here again they showed a universal feminine trait by refusing to combine and work together. They all labored hard enough, but independently, and each with a view to inducing the minister to marry a different woman.

It had been going on thus for some months when Christmas approached. Now of course there isn't much you can give any man for Christmas—slippers and pipes and shot-guns and slippers. And in the case of a parson it's still worse—you've got to drop off the pipes and shotguns, leaving only slippers—and slippers. Of course there are book-marks and easy chairs, but the first are trivial and the latter expensive; besides, if he is unmarried and you are of the opposite sex, and in the same state, you will see that you ought to give him something made with your own fair hands, and you can't make an easy chair. So slippers it had to be for the Rev. M. Stanwix, especially after his landlady had been sounded on the subject and reported that the poor man didn't have a slipper to his name.



"WHY DON'T YOU GET MARRIED?"

Well, the result was, of course, that the whole hundred and thirty-six marriageable ladies at Appleburg went to work on slippers; and a few of the flock who already had husbands also began slippers, out of the goodness of their hearts, probably, or maybe thinking that they might be widows some day and might as well have a pair to their credit. The slaughter of plush and embroidery materials was something cyclonic, and the local shoemaker had to sit up nights pegging on soles. Even unfortunate little Jane Wilkinson went at a pair hammer and tongs, though everybody said she hadn't a ghost of a show. In the first place Jane was too young—her older sister Katharine was conceded to have a right to enter for the contest, but it was universally held that Jane had no right to compete at all. Besides being too young—she was really nineteen or twenty—she was also plain. She might have a certain girlish prettiness, but not the beauty which the wife of so handsome a shepherd as the Rev. Mr. Stanwix should have. Furthermore, Jane was in no other way adapted for the position—she had been a good deal of a tomboy, and was yet, for that matter; she was frivolous and careless, and was always putting her foot in it. The first time the pastor had called at the Wilkinson house, and while Katherine was entertaining him in the parlor in the most approved and circumspect manner, Jane had blundered in, and inside of five minutes asked him why he didn't get married—all the girls said he ought to. Jane had explained to everybody that she meant it as a joke, but it had generally been pronounced ill-timed and in bad taste.

But poor Jane kept working away on her slippers regardless of the talk. Everybody said that Jane's slippers wouldn't fit, or that they would both be for one foot, or that she would get the heels sewed on the toe end, or something. Jane finally put on the finishing touches and then packed them in a pasteboard box and tied it with pink ribbon.

Then she got her other Christmas presents ready. She had a lot of handkerchiefs for an aunt, and a shopping bag for a married sister, and a little knit shawl for her grandmother, and a pair of skates for a boy cousin, and various other things for divers other persons, including a fine meerschaum pipe and a pound of his favorite smoking tobacco for her brother who was at college, and who wouldn't be home till New Year's. Each thing she carefully put up in a box or bundle and laid it away.

The day before Christmas was a never-to-be-forgotten time for the Rev. Mr. Stanwix. Slippers just came down on him like an Egyptian plague. Along about four o'clock Stanwix got crowded out of his room—slippers piled half way to the ceiling—and had to put a chair out in the hall and sit there with an atlas of the world in his lap writing his Christmas sermon on it. Mighty tough sermon it was, too, and got tougher as the slippers continued to arrive. Fact is, he was getting pretty mad; and every new pair sent his temperature up five degrees. Consequently, at ten o'clock he was just boiling. Of course he couldn't swear, but the way he tramped up and down that hall and ground his teeth really amounted to the same thing. The arriving slippers now began to fall off. For ten minutes nothing came, and he was just starting down to ask the landlady if she couldn't put a cot in the hall so he could go to bed, when in came another box. It was from Jane—just her luck, of course, to be late and strike him when he was all worked up to the bursting point. But let us draw a veil over the scene right here and leave the poor man alone as he opens Jane's box.

It was not more than half-past nine the next morning when the Rev. Mr. Stanwix mounted the Wilkinson steps and tugged at the door bell. He asked for Jane. It seemed rather queer, but they ushered him into the parlor and sent Jane in. Well, to make a long story short, it wasn't ten minutes until he had the thing all fixed up. He had his chair drawn close up beside her end of the sofa.

"Jane," he was saying, "I've loved you ever since the first day I saw you, but I never knew it until I opened your box."

"Then you liked them, did you? I'm so glad," murmured Jane.

"I should say I did! Why, it's one of the finest meerschaums I ever saw, and that tobacco used to be my favorite brand at college. But, Jane, how did you know I used to smoke, and was dying to begin again?"

Jane had stopped breathing at the word meerschaum. Now she caught her breath, and for once in her life rose to the occasion and didn't put her foot in it. She simply looked up at him and smiled demurely.

"MOVED INTO THE HALL."

"Oh, I guessed it," she said.

"It was the best guess you ever made. I should have died last night amidst that awful landslide of slippers if I hadn't smoked about half of that tobacco. I mean to keep on smoking now—that is if you don't object, dear?"

Jane scored again.

"I rather like the smell of good tobacco," she said.—Saturday Evening Post.

Only President Without an "A."

President Roosevelt is the first occupant of the White House in whose name the letter "a" does not appear. Not only has that letter appeared in the names of all previous Presidents, but also in the names of nearly every one of the 61 Americans who have received votes for President in the electoral college down to William J. Bryan. There are only eight exceptions to this rule.

SAMPSON'S HOWL

PROTESTS AGAINST MINORITY REPORT FILED BY ADMIRAL DEWEY.

WHO WAS IN CHIEF COMMAND?

PRESENTS LENGTHY ARGUMENT THAT SCHLEY ENJOYED NOT THIS HONOR.

HE, SAMPSON, WAS THE TRUE "IT"

POINTS OUT THAT THIS QUESTION WAS NOT BEFORE THE COURT.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The objection of Admiral W. T. Sampson to that portion of Admiral Dewey's report of the Schley court of inquiry in which he says Admiral Schley was in command at the battle off Santiago and entitled to the credit of the victory was filed with Secretary Long yesterday. The document was brought to the navy department by E. S. Theall, of counsel for Admiral Sampson, and handed to the secretary.

The department is requested to strike out or specifically disapprove that portion of Admiral Dewey's opinion filed in connection with the proceeding of the Schley court of inquiry in which he states his views to be that Commodore Schley was in absolute command at the naval battle off Santiago.

First—Commodore Schley was not in command at that battle.

Second—The president of the United States and the navy department had decided that Admiral Sampson was in command at that battle and Commodore Schley second in command.

Third—The question as to who commanded at Santiago was not referred to the court for consideration and evidence upon the point was excluded.

Each of these specifications is taken up in detail and exhaustive arguments are presented to support all of the contentions upon which they found Admiral Sampson's claims to the honor of having commanded in the battle of Santiago.

Capt. Lemly, judge advocate general, yesterday handed to Secretary Long his answer to the bill of exceptions filed by Admiral Schley against the findings of the majority of the court. All the points made by Schley are combatted by the judge advocate, who recommends that the findings of the court be approved.

GAGE WILL RETIRE.

To Step Out as Soon as the President Can Secure a Successor.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The New York announcement of Secretary Gage's resignation is quite generally credited in Washington. His address Thursday night is regarded as a sort of valedictory to official duties. It is Secretary Gage's intention to relinquish the treasury portfolio as soon as President Roosevelt can find a suitable successor and he has so informed the president. Mr. Gage would like to be relieved before spring. The president has done all he could to dissuade Secretary Gage from retiring and probably will continue to use his efforts in that direction. Secretary Gage's intention to retire was made known to the president some time ago.

An overcoat, supposed to belong to Carlisle, was found yesterday, and in the pockets were a pistol and package containing $1,000 in bills.

The judge at once imposed sentence of fifteen and seven years' penal servitude upon Jackson and his reputed wife, respectively. The prisoners listened to the passing of sentence in evident astonishment, but maintained silence.

THEATRICAL MANAGER IN LUCK.

Discovers That a Child Actress Is His Daughter, for Whom He Had Long Searched.

Milwaukee, Dec. 21.—Frank Dodge, a well known theatrical manager with "A Gambler's Daughter," has recognized in Baby Vavene, a child actress well known in Milwaukee, his daughter for whom he has sought in vain for nearly six years. After Vavene's birth his wife secured a divorce, but she died five years ago. After her death Vavene came to Milwaukee, where she has been under the care of relatives. Dodge visited the Academy of Music last night and recognized his daughter there. He will pay for her education, though she will remain in the care of relatives.

OVER SIXTY MILES AN HOUR.

Engineer of a Fast Mail Train Opens the Throttle and Makes Up for Lost Time.

La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 21.—One of the fastest railroad records ever made in Wisconsin stands to the credit of the Milwaukee road fast mail which left St. Paul Thursday. On account of a small wreck near La Crosse the train was given the right of way south, and made the seventy-eight miles between La Crosse and Portage in seventy-four minutes. The engineer was told when he reached La Crosse that he would have the right of way, and on leaving that city he opened the throttle wide. Shortly before reaching Portage his train made the speed of nearly eighty miles an hour. This rate of speed was maintained for about ten miles.

BATTLE WITH WOLVES.

Cook in a Lumber Camp Has a Running Fight With a Dozen Wolves.

Marinette, Wis., Dec. 21. — Claude Frackleton, cook for the Sawyer-Goodman company, was attacked by a pack of wolves at Floodwood, Mich., last night. For two miles he kept up a running fight with a dozen of the brutes, which did not cease to attack him until his cries on nearing camp brought some of the other men at the camp with guns, who drove the wolves back. Frackleton had been out to a party, and was returning when the wolves found his scent. He started to run for camp, but had not gone far when the brutes overtook him. He kept at the yelping pack with a club and killed one before aid came.

Cando, N. D., Dec. 21.—At the trial of the case of Irene C. King against Mary B. Hanson, John M. Cochrane of Grand Forks, representing the defendant, found objection to the presiding judge, J. F. Cowan, stating the same in his characteristic, forceful way. The court fined Mr. Cochrane $100 for contempt and caused him to be taken to jail upon the latter's refusal to pay the fine. Mr. Cochrane remained in jail from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. when bail was offered by D. F. McLaughlin. The case was appealed to the supreme court, and the outcome is eliciting much interest.

Next Postmaster General Promises to Work for Reduction.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 21.—In speaking of the postoffice department of the government, of which he is to be the head, beginning in January, Henry C. Payne yesterday intimated that he was an advocate of penny postage. He said that he intended to work diligently to bring about a reduction in postage. First the service would have to be made self-supporting, then the reduction of rates would be an easy matter.

New Trial Granted Because of Charge of Illegal Indulgence.

Duluth, Dec. 21.—News reached Duluth last night that Bill Randolph, recently convicted of manslaughter in the first degree at Grand Rapids for killing one-armed Frank Sullivan, has been granted a new trial. Newly discovered evidence and the charge that liquor was used in the jury room during the consideration of the case, are the grounds given.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 25, 1901.

Lieut. Gen. Miles has dared to openly express an opinion in favor of Admiral Dewey's report on the conduct of Admiral Schley during the Spanish-American war. Of course, Gen. Miles was promptly called down by the Secretary of War. Well, Admiral Schley need not worry much while his actions are endorsed by public opinion and such men as Miles and Dewey. It may be possible that Sampson and his pet historian, McClay, may run the Navy department, but they can never run the people.

Down at Moorhead a few days ago a man named Flaberg made a sad mistake and is now baldheaded. He thought he was sampling some fine hair tonic in liquid form, and gave his head a thorough bath in the fluid. The "fluid" proved to be muriatic acid and the result was that Floberg lost all the hair he had and some of the hide too. Now he needs a hair tonic, but he will be a little more particular as to the brand next time.

The Bear Was at Home.

A woman travelling abroad narrates the following experience: She had occasion to go to the British embassy at a certain spot, which shall be nameless, to see the embassador, who, however, proved to be away with his wife at a neighboring health resort. The visitor asked for the first secretary, who, unfortunately, was on leave in England. The woman said that the second secretary would do as well, but he happened to be in attendance upon his wife, who was in a hospital.

Was the third secretary there? No. He was on leave too. The bottle washer might be in, perchance? No. He was shooting in England. The second bottle washer? He, unfortunately, was an invalid and rarely came to the embassy. The military attache? He was on leave. The archivist? He was fishing in Scotland.

The visitor had heard of two junior secretaries, whose custom it was to transact their duties in company with a pet bear. Did they happen to be in? Unfortunately, they were away playing polo. And the bear? Yes, the bear was at home. The visitor, however, did not feel equal to interviewing the bear single handed and left.—London Truth.

Conscience Money.

"Conscience money" in Great Britain now amounts to thousands of pounds annually. The first sum noticed was on March 30, 1789, when £360 was carried to the public account in consequence of a note received by the chancellor. The writer with troubled soul implored him, "as an honest man, to consider the money the property of the nation and to be so just as to apply it to the use of the state in such a manner that the nation may not suffer by its having been detained and thus to ease the conscience of an honest man."

Buying and Selling.

"You advertised," said the gullible one, "that you had discovered the key to success."

"True," admitted the fakir.

"Well, it didn't help me a little bit."

"The reason for that," answered the fakir pleasantly, "is that you have been buying the key instead of selling it. It has brought me success."—Chicago Post.

Winning a Brute's Respect.

In an article on the training of wild animals in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly Frank C. Bostock, the famous showman, said: "If I were to lay down a basic principle, I would say, just as my father did to me the first time he ever gave me a whip and a lion, 'First of all, warm up to him.' That does not mean to pet him or talk silly nonsense of the affectionate sort, but to treat him with a frank, common sense and a kindly hand and care.

"Once a very fierce old tiger which we had in London had nearly killed my brother, and her keepers were afraid of her. It happened that she ran a bit of bone into her paw and had a very sorry time of it. I undertook to remove it and by the use of lashings and a little patience succeeded. It took four men to help me. When we were about half way through the operation, she got the idea of what we were trying to do for her, and a more docile patient surgeon never had, though the pain was great, I am sure. The next day I put a poultice on that foot with one keeper standing outside the cage with a prodding iron as a precaution, and ever after that till the day of her death I could enter her cage at any time without her giving any sign but that of pleasure."

He Knew His Friend.

An old German was on his deathbed. In his earlier years he had led a wild life, but since the death of Schneider, one of his boon companions, he had reformed and given up his bad habits. This Schneider in his day had been a mighty drinker, famous for his capacity and carouses.

The priest was ministering to the dying man, consoling him with visions of the paradise he would soon enter, telling him that he would meet there his old friends and what a joy it would be to see them all again.

The dying man asked feebly, "Will Schneider be there, your reverence?"

Thinking to give him pleasure, the priest replied, "Yes; Schneider will be there."

"Ach!" said the other. "Dot is very bad. All dose dringings and eadings and fighdings all over again, all dot beer und whisky!"

"But there will be no drinking in heaven," said the priest.

"But you said Schneider would be dere."

"So he will," was the priest's reply.

"Und dere won't be no dringings, you dink? Ach! You don't know Schneider!"—Lippincott's.

Long Courtships in Norway.

Norwegian weddings are almost always celebrated at the close of a short Scandinavian summer, a season which the industrious Norsemen find too short in which to work and from which they would never dream of taking the days that are necessary for the long drawn out festivities of the Norse wedding. So the maidens who are wooed all the year round are usually wedded at the beginning of winter. Norwegian woolings are very frank and very long a-doing. On summer Sundays the lanes, the highways and byways are ateem with lovers. Each couple saunters slowly along, not in the least shy, his arm about her shoulders, her arm about his waist. Nor do they untwine their arms if they pause a little to chat with friends, not even if they stop to speak with casual acquaintances. Ten or a dozen years often elapse between the first day of courtship and the day of marriage, while a seven years' betrothal is considered of very moderate length.—Woman's Home Companion.

Fable of the Babbling Brook.

Once upon a time a fish in search of adventure came to the broad mouth of a brook which emptied itself into a great river. He turned into the smaller stream, ascended its current and listened to its constant babbling as he went leisurely along.

As he proceeded he noticed that the brook became very much narrower and shallower. Yet it kept up its babbling just the same. Finally he reached its head and found it to be very insignificant.

"Brook," said the fish, "never in my life before have I seen such a large mouth and heard so much babbling with so little head behind it."

Moral.—The head cannot be judged by the mouth.—New York Herald.

Slang in 1832.

In 1832 Coleridge in his Table Talk spoke of the word talented as follows: "I regret to see that vile and barbarous vocable 'talented' stealing out of the newspapers into the leading reviews and most respectable publications of today. Why not 'shillinged,' 'farthinged,' 'tenpenced,' etc.? The formation of a participle passive from a noun is a license which nothing but a very peculiar felicity can excuse. If mere convenience is to justify such attempts upon the idiom, you cannot stop until the language becomes, in the proper sense of the word, corrupt. Most of these pieces of slang come from America."

Where Voices Are Raised.

Russia is the natural home of the basso profundo; Spain is the country of tenors and has been from the time of Imperial Rome, when the Gaditanian (Cadiz) singers brought high prices in the slave market; France produces mezzo sopranos in profusion; England, contraltos; America, sopranos; Naples, pure screamers, and no one as yet knows why.—Musical Record and Review.

Back in Slavery.

"Br'er Williams done got 'vorced f'um he wife!"

"You don't say!"

"Hit's de truth. De jury give 'im his freedom yesthiddy."

"En whar is he now?"

"Gone on his honeymoon!"—Atlanta Constitution.

ERRORS OF HISTORY

FICTIONS THAT FOR CENTURIES HAVE POSED AS FACTS.

Why the Colossus of Rhodes Could Not Have Spanned the Harbor—The Force of Leonidas at Thermopylæ. The William Tell Myth.

There have been woven into history many interesting stories that time and investigation have proved myths, but in spite of the efforts of the iconoclasts these mistakes of history still pass current with many people.

Probably one of the most affecting scenes connected with the making of literature is that described in the oft repeated story of the blind poet Milton dictating "Paradise Lost" to his daughters. Dr. Johnson, however, has been quoted as denying it. He said, furthermore, that Milton never even permitted his daughters to learn to read and write.

A favorite "piece" with western and southern schoolboys on recitation and exhibition days was a set of verses telling of the heroic stand of Leonidas and his brave "300" at Thermopylæ. The Abbe Barthelemy, who asserted that he had inquired minutely into the subject, wrote that, according to Diodorus, Leonidas had 7,000 men under him and that Pausanias gave the number of Leonidas' army as 12,000.

Did Cæsar say to the pilot:

"Why do you fear? You have Cæsar on board."

Many trustworthy historians declare that Cæsar never used the words quoted.

The inside of cigar box covers are sometimes ornamented with a picture of the Colossus of Rhodes, with ships in full sail passing between the outstretched legs of the gigantic statue. These pictures reflect the popular and what for centuries was the historical idea of the Colossus, which was accounted one of the seven wonders of the world. It may be interesting to know that all drawings of the statue are purely imaginary and, what is more, are modern, not ancient, efforts. The Colossus was erected in 305 B. C. The most trustworthy of ancient accounts of it is contained in a manuscript dating about 150 B. C., in which the height of the statue is given as 105 feet. The entrance to the harbor of Rhodes is 350 feet across, so that it was manifestly impossible that the legs of the Colossus should span the entrance to the port or that ships should sail beneath it.

As a matter of fact the Colossus was not built across the harbor, but on an open space of ground near it; but, for all that, it was a wonderful statue.

People whose sympathies are easily aroused have wept over the wrongs of Belisarius, the conqueror of the Vandals, who, many were taught, "begged his bread at the city gates" after having commanded victorious armies and been of much service to the state. The good old general was unquestionably an unfortunate and much abused man, but there is no proof that he begged his living at the city gates or elsewhere. Yet Van Dyke engraved him and David, the great Frenchman, painted him, and tragedies and romances were written around him in the belief that he did sit at the city gates a forlorn and disconsolate object with palm outstretched for alms.

The facts are, a conspiracy against the Emperor Justinian being discovered; two of Belisarius' officers confessed under torture that the old general was in the plot. He was condemned without further hearing, his property sequestrated, and he suffered imprisonment for six months. His innocence being established, Belisarius was released, and he died about a year later. But that he ever was reduced to the extremity of begging is declared to be absolutely untrue.

The schoolbook tale of William Tell shooting an apple from his son's head is also without foundation in fact. Tell's name doesn't even appear in the chronicles of Zurich, and the most ancient writing in which the story is mentioned bears date some 200 years after the event it pretends to describe. The story is a variation of an old Scandinavian saga. A similar bit of "history" is related of William of Cloudsley in England in the twelfth century.

It is denied also that Emperor Charles V. of Spain on his abdication adopted the habit of a monk and occupied himself in the manufacture of clocks. It is declared that he never ceased to be emperor de facto, and he never surrendered control of affairs of state.

Coming down to later times, the people of three different countries claimed three different men as inventors of the steam engine. In America there is a popular belief to this day that Robert Fulton built the first successful engine and steamboat. In England the Marquis of Worcester, who published an account of a steam engine in 1663, has received credit for the invention. In France Solomon de Caus (1615) was regarded as the genius who had given to the world a new motive power. Each of them may have conceived and worked out the idea of a steam engine without the slightest knowledge of what had been done in that direction before their day, but none of them might rightly lay claim to being the first in the field.

On April 17, 1543, Don Blasco de Garay launched a boat of 200 tons burden at Barcelona in the presence of the Emperor Charles V. The boat was propelled by steam and made ten miles an hour. She was called La Sanctissima Trinidada. The emperor gave to Don Blasco a handsome present, but did not regard the invention as practicable, and nothing came of it. From this it would seem that Fulton was centuries behind the times.—New York Mail and Express.

Anæsthetics in China.

A Chinese manuscript in the Paris library proves that anæsthetics for surgical purposes were used in China 1,700 years ago. It states that when a surgeon conducted a serious operation he gave a decoction to the patient, who after a few moments became as insensible as if he were dead. Then, as the case required, the surgeon performed the operation—incision or amputation—and removed the cause of the malady. Then he brought together and secured the tissues and applied liniments. "After a certain number of days the patient recovered without having experienced the slightest pain during the operation."

A Lost Chance.

"He that will not when he may" is likely to repent his indecision for many a long day afterward. A lady who had spent a weary hour in "beating down" the salesman at a Turkish shop in Paris returned the next day prepared to purchase. "I believe you said 20 francs," she began, taking out her purse.

"Ninety, madame!" answered the smiling Turk.

"But you came down to twenty!"

"Ah, that was yesterday, madame! Everything goes up again in the night!"

The "New Woman" and Divorce.

"As I have said before, I regard woman's rights women and the leaders in the new school of female progress as the worst enemies of the female sex," writes His Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons in The Ladies' Home Journal for January. "They teach that which robs woman of all that is amiable and gentle tender and attractive, and which gives her nothing in return but masculine boldness and brazen effrontery. While professing to emancipate her from domestic servitude, they are making her the slave of her own caprices and passions. She never feels at home except when abroad. When she is at home, home is irksome to her. She chafes and frets under the restraint and responsibility of domestic life. Her heart is abroad. It is exulting in imagination, in some social triumph, or reveling in some scene of gayety and dissipation. Her husband comes to his home to find it empty, or occupied by one whose heart is void of affection for him. Then arise disputes, quarrels, recriminations, estrangements, and the last act in the drama is often divorce. I speak the sober truth when I affirm that for the wrecks of families in our country woman has a large share of the responsibility."

A New Service Without Parallel.

There is ample justification for the claim made by The Chicago Record-Herald that its readers enjoy every day in the week, Sundays included, a news service that is without parallel in range and completeness. The reason is obvious—the combination of the varied and extensive facilities of the two great dailies, The Chicago Record and The Chicago Times Herald. In addition to the independent news facilities of both papers, The Record-Herald receives the complete news service of The New York Herald, The New York Tribune and the Associated Press; and when it is considered that its news columns are supplemented by all the special features so popular in The Chicago Record and The Chicago Times-Herald, it will be seen that The Record-Herald holds a unique place among the great newspapers of the United States.

THE HOLY NIGHT

One star burned low within the dark'ned east,
And from a stable door an answering light
Crept faintly forth, where through full hours of night
A woman watched. The sounds of day had ceased,
And save the gentle tread of restless beast
There dwelt a hush profound. The mother's sight—
So holden by her Babe took no affright
When shadows of the beams, that caught the least
Of light, seemed shapened to a lengthening cross;
She only saw a crown made by a fleece
Of golden hair. Naught presaged pain or loss—
To her, the pivot of the swinging sphere
Lay sheltered in her arms so warm and near;
A mother's heart proclaimed Him "Prince of Peace!"

The Tramp's Christmas

He was such an unkempt, sad looking creature when he presented himself at the back door that Christmas morning asking for something to eat that Mary was more than half inclined to disobey the rule of the Tracy household, which stood good at all seasons of the year as well as at Yuletide, and refuse his request. Before she could do so, however, Mrs. Tracy herself came into the kitchen, and, with scant show of hospitality, Mary allowed the tramp to enter.

She had always secretly grumbled because Mrs. Tracy would allow no one to be turned away hungry, and today there was no excuse, for the family had just finished breakfast and there was plenty of food left to give the man a substantial meal.

"Goin' to come and rob the house to-night, like's not," was Mary's inward comment as she put the coffee pot on the stove, and she watched the man narrowly to see if he were making a mental plan of the house, but her suspected burglar did not once look up from the floor as he sat nervously twirling his hat.

"He's young and able to work," Mary soliloquized, as she bustled to and fro putting eatables on one end of the kitchen table. "Might be tolerable good lookin', too, if he was shaved and dressed up—and—washed."

"There!" she snapped, setting a cup of coffee down on the table with as much force as she could without spilling its contents. "Your vitual's set."

The man, scarcely raising his eyes, dropped his hat and hitched his chair near the table.

Just as he eagerly clutched the cup of fragrant coffee, a door opened, a pair of merry blue eyes peered into the kitchen and a shrill little voice piped out, "Hello, man, merry Christmas!"

The "man" started, shifted uneasily in his chair, but made no reply. Undaunted by his chilling reception, the door was burst open, and a golden-haired little boy burst into the room. With the unquestioning confidence of childhood, he walked up to the stranger and said gravely, "I said merry Christmas."

"Run into the other room, Donald," Mary put in hastily.

The man shot a half-defiant glance at her, but did not look at the child.

"I don't want to," the little fellow replied. "He's company, and mamma said I could 'tain him. I bringed the new Mother Goose book dat I got from Santa Claus to show ho," and, pushing a chair close to the table, from it he mounted the end of the table opposite the man, and sat there like a sweet, rosy cherub observing some dark spirit.

The tramp, who seemed almost famished, paused just long enough to look wonderingly at his strange little companion, and then gave his full attention to the meal.

"Don't you want to talk?" Donald demanded.

"I'm not fit—that is, 'er, I don't know how to talk to such a little kid," the man answered.

"All right, I guess you want to eat," the child observed, graciously. "I guess I'll read to you," opening the book he was holding in his arms. "You know Mother Goose, don't you?"

The man shook his head, but something like a smile flitted across his sullen features.

"Well, I'll show you the pictures and read you 'bout 'em. This one," and Donald slid along the table as near to the man as the dishes would allow, "this one is about 'Blue Boy.' I'll read 'bout him," and, in a chanting, high-pitched voice, he repeated the rhyme of "Little Boy Blue."

"Did you ever sleep under a haymow?" he asked, suddenly, at the conclusion of his recitation.

The man frowned slightly at the childish query, bit his lip and nodded his head.

"Was it nice?" went on his interrogator. "Did your mamma let you?"

The man's lower lip was pressed cruelly by his teeth at this question, but a surly shake of his head was his only reply.

"Oh, was you naughty and runned away?" the boy asked, slowly.

Had Mary been an observing girl, she would have seen, under the scrubby beard and grime on the haggard face, a dull red flush spread to the roots of his shaggy, neglected hair.

"Didn't your mamma come to look for you?" continued the little tormentor.

"She didn't know where I was," the tramp answered, in a strange, muffled voice.

"Then you hided from her!" exclaimed the child, with blue eyes wide open.

The man was looking out of the window now, forgetful of his good breakfast.

"I was naughty once and runned away," Donald prattled on, "and when my mamma found me she was just awful glad, but she cried, too—wasn't that funny? And she said mothers was always glad when they got their boys back, even when they was big and runned awful far off, 'strayed into the paths'—I forget just what that poet was, but she said I must always come back to her—an'—an'—I don't 'member any more, but I guess if you'd go back to your mamma she'd forget the naughty and be glad. Do you think she'd cry?"

The man cast one fierce look over his shabby person. "Cry!" he exclaimed, bitterly. "Oh——" he drew his breath hard between his teeth as the sight of the baby face choked back the oath that nearly escaped him.

"Isn't you goin' to eat any more?" chirped the little fellow, with awakened hospitality, noticing that his guest, sitting with his head on his hand, seemed to have lost his appetite. The child's voice roused him from his thoughts, and, seeing that Mary had paused in her work and was watching him curiously, he asked humbly, "Can I have some coffee?"

Meanwhile Donald was turning the pages of his book. "Here's a funny picture," he announced, pointing with his fat little finger, "but it's 'bout a dreadful naughty boy. I'll read 'bout him," and, in a very solemn and impressive tone, he repeated the tale of "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son."

"It's dreadful bad to steal, you know," he commented, gravely. "My mamma says so, and, of course, she knows—mammas know most everything, don't they? Once—what do you think?—I stole! I didn't steal a pig like Tom, but I stole some little cakes, and my mamma talked to me a long time, and she told me so many things so I'd grow to be a good man. Did your mamma want you to be a good man, too?"

"A DOOR OPENED."

The man choked on a hasty cup of coffee, but made no reply. Donald did not seem to expect one, but chatted on. "I was 'fraid my mamma did not love me any more when I stole those cakes, 'cause she looked so sorry, but," with a happy little laugh, "seemed like she loved me more'n ever after. But I don't want to see her look sorry like that again. Did you ever make your mamma look sorry—out of her eyes, you know?"

A smothered groan from the stranger and, with a child's intuition of "something wrong," Donald sought to cheer and console, and said, reassuringly, "Well, you just go an' tell her you're sorry an' see if she don't be glad and love you. I most know she will."

The man had ceased eating and sat motionless with his head bowed on his breast until Mary approached and curtly asked if he were "done eatin'."

"Yes," he answered absently, and, looking wistfully at the child, he reached for his hat.

"Is you goin' to see your mamma?" questioned Donald, eagerly.

"Yes, my little man," came the answer, in a clear, ringing voice that made Mary jump and drop a basin. "That's just where I am going! But first, tell me your name."

"I'm little Donald Robert Tracy, and my papa's big Donald Robert!"

"Good-by, little preacher. You're the best one I've ever heard," and just brushing the golden head with his lips, the tramp passed out of the door and went down the street, not with the slouching, hang-dog air with which he had approached the house, but with head erect and shoulders squared, he swung along with long, easy strides.

"Of all the ungrateful wretches!" exclaimed Mary, angrily, to Mrs. Tracy, who had slipped in through the half-open door. "He never even said 'thank you.'" Her mistress did not seem to hear, but, with shining eyes, gathered her little son up in her arms, and, as she pressed him closely to her, she whispered brokenly, "And a little child shall lead them."

* * * * *

A year passed, and little Donald's "'taining" the tramp was forgotten

"YOU KNOW MOTHER GOOSE, DON'T YOU?"

by all save Mrs. Tracy. She often wondered what fruit the good seed sown by the innocent child last Christmas morning had borne. That he had been God's chosen instrument for working out some great end, her gentle heart never doubted.

It was, therefore, a great pleasure and satisfaction to her to receive a long letter from the "man." It was written from his home in a far eastern city, and told, in a simple, straightforward manner, the story of his downfall and how, moved by Donald's childish prattle, he had worked his way back home, resolved to begin life anew; how kind friends had helped him and encouraged him, and how he was doing well at his old trade of bookbinding.

"I was going from bad to worse," the letter ran, "and nothing is easier for a young fellow to do, and the road down to being a 'common tramp' is a short one when one gets started. When I came to your house that Christmas morning I was bitter, hard and desperate. No one living could have touched my heart as did that little blue-eyed boy. His little sermon, with its text taken from 'Mother Goose,' snatched the poor brand from the burning. Tell the little chap that I found my mamma, and she was glad as he said."

Accompanying the letter was a package of Christmas gifts, addressed to Donald. Among other things it contained a book—a copy of "Mother Goose" exactly like the one from which he had "read" to the man to "'tain him," exquisitely bound in white vellum. On the cover in gold letters was Donald's name, and below it, "From his grateful Blue Boy, Christmas—189—."

Christmas a Century Ago.

A hundred years ago about five million Americans, free and slave, enjoyed a humble Christmas without as much as a cooking stove in all the United States. This month, nearly seventy-seven millions will observe the same holiday with almost everything that the palate can desire, and with every means, from hot coals to electricity, for cooking it. The American of a hundred years ago undoubtedly had a better stomach and a larger appetite than the American of today; but all the same, we are all glad we are living in the year 1900.

In no point of contrast is the growth of this country so wonderfully shown as in the census figures. In 1800 there were, in the eight Northern States and in Maine, Indiana and Ohio, which were not states at that time, 2,601,521 whites, 47,154 free blacks and 35,946 slaves; in the eight Southern States and Mississippi and the District of Columbia there were 1,702,980 whites, 61,241 free blacks and 857,095 slaves; making a total of 5,305,937.

Christmas In Holland.

In Holland on Christmas Eve, the children, while indulging in various games, keep casting anxious glances at the door, as if expecting a visitor. At length their play is hushed by a loud knock at the door and St. Nicholas, clad in his episcopal robes, enters. He evinces a wonderful knowledge of the failings and virtues of each child, scolding and praising each according to the merits of their family behavior. Finally, however, he bestows his blessings on them all and promising to give each a present on the next morning, he disappears. Before retiring to rest that night each member of the family places one of his or her shoes on the table in the parlor. The door is then locked, but the next morning proves the truth of Santa Claus' promise, for to each shoe is found a present for its owner.

Poverty with contentment is better than wealth without happiness.

YACHTING ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

What Eastern Swells Might Learn If They Would Come Out West for a Visit.

Easterners who think they know all about yachts are very much mistaken. Their education has scarcely begun. If they wish to graduate into the university after their high school course in the yacht business, let them go to Missouri and navigate the Mississippi, the Meramec and the Gasconade. A mere amateur can operate a yacht around the library tables of the New York and Philadelphia Yacht clubs; but it takes an active crew of experts, including the proprietor and the invited guests, to trace the mainsail of a gasoline engine when it declines to obey the order "hard aport" in making a loop on the Meramec. And when the yacht sticks on a sandbar, or has to be hauled over a gravel bed by all hands, with their shoes off and their trousers rolled up above their knees, it furnishes an education in the vicissitude of things which Eastern yachtsmen can only get by capsizing—and an education of that sort is of no use except to the infrequent survivors. And, moreover after going some thirty miles up stream and finding that the river has fallen so low that the yacht can not possibly get back to the Mississippi before the fall rise, everyone on board has the opportunity of their lives to study nature while they are making the voyage over the hills hunting a farmer's wagon to carry them seventeen miles to the next railway station. To be truly nautical, yachtsmen must go to Missouri and learn to wade after having been tempted out of the muddy Mississippi by the crystal beauty of its affluents.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Blacksmith's Story.

Goodland, Kans., Dec. 23.—N. E. Albertson, a local blacksmith, had almost decided to give up his shop altogether on account of Rheumatism, which had crippled him so that at times he could not use his hammer.

His shoulders and arms were so sore that he couldn't sleep at night. He had suffered for years, but was gradually getting worse, till at last he had about made up his mind to give up. But just then he heard of some wonderful cures of Rheumatism by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and thought he would try for a cure once more.

They cured him completely, and he has not a trace of Rheumatism left. The shop will not be given up, and Mr. Albertson may be seen there any day hard at work as if nothing had ever ailed him.

The Old Dame School.

It is amusing in these school board days to come upon reminiscences of the old dame's schools. In my mother's little country parish the kindly old dame who taught the village children to read did not trouble herself much about the long words, says a writer in Good Words. When a word came that neither she nor her pupils could quite master, she would say: "Call it Nebuchadnezzar and pass on." But needlework was well taught in those days. One of the most beautiful workers I knew told me how, at the dame's school, to which she went as a child, she was set to hem round the crown of a baby's cap. (Busy mothers may, indeed, be thankful that these small articles of apparel are now obsolete.) To do this perfectly is no easy matter. Time after time the narrow hem, which refused to come even, was cut off, till at last the little circle was about the size of a penny; but the result of that teaching was admirable.

Poison in Silk Stockings.

In producing certain delicate colors in silk, chloride of tin is used as a mordant; and it is said that unless great care is taken, a large proportion of it remains in the completed fabric. In the case of stockings, or any garments next the skin, the perspiration may dissolve the tin, and it is then absorbed by the skin. A case is reported from Vienna of a woman who suffered from attacks of paralysis in the lower extremities, a sense of coldness and a peculiar jerkiness of the legs in walking. She noticed that whenever the symptomes were the worst her feet were colored yellow, and it was found that the staining was caused by light-yellow silk stockings which she wore. They were analyzed and considerable quantities of tin found. The obvious moral of this, says the Hospital, is that ladies should not wear pretty silks next their skin in hot weather, unless they can be sure they are not mordanted with tin salts. Colors which are "fast" in relation to ordinary washing are frequently readily soluble in perspiration.—Philadelphia Press.

ABOUT MONUMENTAL BRASSES.

Practice of Having Effigies Made Originated About the Beginning of the Thirteenth Century.

At the beginning of the thirteenth century it occurred to some one to preserve the likeness of his departed friend as well as the symbols of his rank and station. So effigies were introduced upon the surface of the slabs, and were carved flat; but ere fifty years had passed away the art of the sculptor produced magnificent monumental effigies. Knights and nobles he clad in armor, and abbots bless the spectators with their uplifted right hands; judges lie in their official garb; and merchants with emblems of their trade. At their feet lie animals, usually having some heraldic connection with the deceased, or symbolical of his work; e. g., a dragon is trodden down beneath the feet of a bishop, signifying the defeat of sin as the result of his ministry. The heads of effigies usually rest on cushions, which are sometimes supported by two angels.—Gentleman's Magazine.

The Cabinet Not Quite Easy.

While the relations between the president and members of his cabinet do not appear to be the least bit strained, it is not difficult to appreciate the fact that the same conditions do not exist in the cabinet room now which prevailed during the McKinley administration. There is no lack of friendly feeling or party loyalty, but there seems to be an indefinable something in the actions of the members of the cabinet which indicates an uneasiness, an unrest or an overcautiousness, which was not so perceptible six months ago. Under [illegible] members of the cabinet would enter the White House on cabinet days laughing and chatting together in the most free-and-easy manner. Now they approach the cabinet table solemn and deliberate, suggesting a group of previously-merry school boys trying to make a dignified impression on a new master.—Correspondence Charleston News and Courier.

A Little More Coal in England.

Coal, "good, household coal," seems to have been found in Kent, at last. A "core" brought up from the boring in Shakespeare Cliff showed large fragments of "good, bright bituminous household coal," and on another boring a second seam has been discovered. The experts are said to be delighted, and to believe that they have struck the deposit which runs down through Wales, under the channel, across France and into Westphalia. The pecuniary interests involved in such finds are so large that we always distrust first accounts, but in this instance the details given read true, and, of course, if they are true, and if the expense of working under the sea proves manageable, the event is of national importance. Coal on the spot is the grand need of the South, and every addition to our supply postpones the day when manufacturers must either put out their fires or rely exclusively upon electricity obtained from the river gorges, or, possibly, from the use of the tides, as a source of power.—Spectator.

FATHER TIME SETS OUT A NEW TREE

OLD AND NEW.

I cannot joy with those who hail
The new-born year;
I rather grieve with those who give
The dead Old Year
A tender tear.

The New—what know I of the New?
I knew the Old!
God's benison upon his corse,
On which the mold
Lies stiff and cold.

Here in the shadow let me stand
And count them o'er,
The blessings that he brought to me.
A precious store—
I asked no more.

He brought me health—a priceless boon
To me and mine;
He brought me plenty for my needs,
And crowned my shrine
With love divine.

Ah! when I think—suffused with tears
I feel my eyes—
Of all the dear delights he brought;
Yet stark he lies
'Neath Winter skies.

Therefore I cannot hail with joy
The new-born year;
I rather grieve, with those who give
The dead Old Year
A tender tear.

After Ten Years

The Story of Two New Year's Eves

WALTER CARSON leaned back in the easy chair, drawn up before his sitting room fire at his Buke street chambers in London. The clock had struck 10, and the sonorous boom from Big Ben came floating over the Green park as a sort of benediction on the rapidly dying year. The roar of the great city without was not lacking in its element of melody, and the noise of merry revelers in Piccadilly completed a strange yet fascinating tout ensemble. Passing down the street came three young men singing that old Southern song, "I'se gwine back to Dixey." The words and the melody startled Carson from the reverie into which he had fallen. Sitting upright in his chair, he said, aloud:

"What memories that song recalls! How my loneliness grows upon me! What a fool I was ever to have indulged in the thing called love! But there. I've tasted the poison and must abide by the result. What's that result? Pleasing? Why cannot I be of the gay throng outside? Here in this mighty crowded city I am as lonely as a man lost in a desert." He rose and, going to the other side of the room, opened a cabinet and took from it a bundle of letters, some dozen. They were faded and bore traces of much handling. After reading, he replaced them, and, walking to the photograph of a child on the wall, indulged in soliloquy.

"I know you not, my sweet child, but your mother was always, and always must be everything to me. How hard and cruel seems the world! Your mother and I parted ten long years ago this night, to meet again in two years time! What happened to prevent us? I wrote many times, but no reply ever reached me. Three years after we separated a letter came from her, and in it I read: 'Now that I am married, perhaps you will write.' Life seemed a blank, and I came to London, a wayfarer, caring not what became of me. I turned to literature, d have been what people call suc sful. But what is success without a power to experience that which akes it other than a metallic grati cation? Eighteen months went by before I next heard from your mother, and then your photo only reached me, since when all has been silence! Your mother married a good man, and I pray for her and for you, too, baby, that you may grow up in her footsteps!"

The circumstances under which his letters to the girl went astray were to him mysterious, but, as a matter of fact, easily explained. The girl was the daughter of a country lawyer, and he had made her acquaintance when she was staying in a boarding house in Bloomsbury, in which he was also a lodger. Her reason for being in town was that she might improve a somewhat neglected education, and she was taking singing lessons at a school of music in the neighborhood.

An aunt took away this unwanted daughter from among the large family at home, to be a companion across the Atlantic, and, suspecting her of flightiness, opened her letters in the capacity of guardian. The first of Carson's epistles—he was a cautious man and did not commit himself to paper until he could not resist doing so—arrived when the aunt believed she was arranging a highly desirable engagement for her niece, and on the principle of doing wrong that good may come, she kept back the notes of this obviously poor suitor.

Carson often felt desolate, but never so utterly as then, and as he paced the floor the laughter of the happy crowd seemed to mock him. He rang the bell and ordered some tea. The demure little maid looked at him, and, going down stairs, said:

"Poor Mr. Carson, he looks so strange and miserable!"

Returning, she found him sitting in his chair gazing with half-closed eyes into the fire. Placing the tea on a small wicker table by his side, she attracted his attention by the question. "Anything else, sir?"

"No," was the reply; "but, see, this is New Year's Eve. You've been a good servant to me, at least. Buy yourself something," handing her a sovereign.

The amount of the gift bereft the girl of the power of speech, and with a curtesy, eloquent in itself of gratitude, she left.

Carson, sipping his tea, again soliloquized. "It's now within an hour and a quarter of the New Year. What will that year bring into my life? It cannot bring the light of love and companionship. The same round of weeks and months, and so it will be to the end. Ten years ago, in Old Kentucky, we said 'Good-by.' It was a 'good-by' forever."

Apostrophizing the absent woman, he continued: "Leila; Leila, to my grave I take with me the love I bear you. Why did we live to be parted so ruthlessly? What strange fate has so guided our destinies?"

He turned to the story of Evangeline and read of the sufferings of that heroic character. The reading soothed him and he fell asleep.

The clocks were striking the twelfth stroke of midnight when he awoke. He barely opened his eyes, then closed them again, and listened to the joyous salutations of people meeting in the streets. He was not selfish, neither was he bad natured. No man who every truly loved can be altogether either. As he listened he said:

"I wish for all a bright New Year, and Leila, my absent Leila, whom I shall never see again, may your life know no sorrow, may yours never be the aching heart, and may you be blessed in your children growing up around you. My Leila——"

He did not finish the sentence, but the tears came trickling down his cheeks as he realized his barren life. Then he became conscious that some one had come into the room and been a witness of his weakness and his secret—secret because society said Walter Carson carried his heart on his sleeve and was incapable of deep affection. So sitting up and turning round he was startled to see seated on a chair a tall lady, clad in deep mourning and veiled so heavily that he was unable to distinguish her face.

"Madam," he inquired, too taken aback even to get up, "I should like to know why I am thus honored?"

"I came in with the New Year. Not an omen of ill-luck, I hope," replied a musical voice: "but I first want to know if Walter Carson is not an assumed name?"

"Why do you ask such a question?"

"For the best of good reasons, and as you will not tell me, perhaps you will allow me to say that I think your real name is Herbert Wilton," proceeded the mysterious stranger.

"I KNOW YOU NOT, SWEET CHILD."

Carson was utterly unprepared for this, and his surprise was painfully manifest. Appearing not to notice it, the lady went on:

"You are unhappy, I know, Mr. Wilton. I shall not call you Mr. Carson. I am certain of it, because I was watching you for ten minutes before you opened your eyes. Can I be of any help to you?"

"I don't understand you, madam," answered Carson. "I have no trouble, at least none that you could assist me in."

"Has it any connection with an old love affair?" very slowly asked the veiled visitor.

"I must decline to discuss my private matters with an utter stranger," replied Carson, jumping up.

"Am I an utter stranger, Herbert?" responded the stranger, also rising, and as she did so throwing back her veil.

"Leila!" gasped Carson, looking incredulously into her face.

"Yes, Leila," was the answer whispered, while her arms stole round his neck, "come back to you with the New Year, never to leave your side until it so pleases God."

Then they sat down and she told him how, three years before, after being left a widow, she determined to find out what had become of the sweetheart of her younger days. How, by a chapter of happy accidents, she learned that he was in London. How, on knowing this, she hurried over land and sea, and just at the birth of the New Year entered his room. She saw the tears fall from his eyes, heard her name mentioned, and his blessing go out to her. All doubts were then at an end.

"My children will be here by the next boat, and you must be to them a father. Now I must go, as I'm weary with the excitement of the day."

Carson drove her to her hotel, and to him the New Year bells never seemed to have rung such merry peals. They rang into his life a New Year in every sense. A few days later there was a quiet marriage, and on the following New Year's Eve, as Carson and his wife listened to the hour of midnight strike, they thought, with hearts full of love and gratitude, of the joyous meeting twelve months before.

"I CAME IN WITH THE NEW YEAR."

Hopes of the Future.

With the coming of the New Year all our hopes of future good for ourselves and for humanity at large receive a new impulse and an accession of power. If we are alive to the wide extension of knowledge, the conquest of the material world, the imminence of new and important discoveries and changes which shall make the possibilities of life more interesting and beautiful, we cannot but rejoice that we are born into this wonderful epoch. Tennyson's poem, written in the flush of young manhood, voiced the scientific fact in eloquence that can never be forgotten, but the thoughts of men are widened by the process of the suns. It is truly to the thoughts of men that we owe all the triumphs of civilization, the triumphs of religion, art, industry and science, as in the last resort all that is and all that we hope for resides in the thoughts of men and in the feelings and emotions which give birth to these thoughts, and between which there is such a constant interaction.

Balancing Our Books.

When the year is ended and the final summing up of accounts is finished, it is comforting to look back and to be able to say, in all sincerity, that we have done the best we could for ourselves and for those about us. It is more than comforting to see that we have gained something, that our efforts have been crowned with success, and that we are by this advancement enabled to score a victory, even though it may be trifling, over adverse circumstances. It encourages us to redouble our efforts to make a better showing for the years to come, to so order our affairs that this season's gain will be but the beginning of better things, and that the great and grand fabric of our future may rise, ever increasing, ever more and more beautiful, and end in a noble, manly, womanly, Christian, symmetrical character that will make its possessor known and honored of all men.

To the Young.

While the opening of the New Year is a significant season for persons of all ages, it is especially so to the young and those in early maturity. There is so much ahead of the youngsters; so much for them to look forward to, to hope for, achieve; so much that will help them to make their lives worth living, and to make the world the better for their having lived in it.

Welcome the new year. Welcome its work, its cares, its responsibilities, its trials, crosses, losses, sorrows and bereavements. Welcome its work, because it is only by work that we achieve successes and make ourselves strong for the toils and tasks that are to come. Welcome its cares, for they are the world's educators, developers and teachers, and they lead us into those ways of prudence, thoughtfulness and moderation which are the forerunners of prosperity and plenty.

HER FATE KNOWN

NELLIE CROPSEY'S BODY IS FOUND IN THE PASQUOTANK RIVER.

WEEKS OF MYSTERY ARE ENDED

WAS HIT ON THE LEFT TEMPLE AND THROWN INTO THE RIVER.

GIRL'S LOVER IS SUSPECTED

MAINTAINS STOLID INDIFFERENCE AND INSISTS ON HIS INNOCENCE.

Elizabeth City, N. C., Dec. 28.—Five weeks of mystery and speculation as to the fate of Miss Nellie Cropsey terminated yesterday at 10 o'clock when the body of the missing girl was found floating in the river opposite her father's home. The body was discovered by J. D. Stillman, a fisherman. Upon discovering the floating object was the body of a young girl he immediately notified the coroner. When found the body was floating face downward. All the wearing apparel was intact with the exception of the rubbers which Nell wore on the night of her disappearance. With the exception of some slight discoloration of the face the body was in a state of good preservation and little decomposed.

Coroner Fearing summoned a jury of prominent men and called in three of the best physicians of the city to make a thorough and exhaustive autopsy to learn if there was any signs of violence on the body. The jury late last night brought in a verdict that Miss Cropsey came to her death by being stricken a blow on the left temple and being drowned in the Pasquotank river.

James Wilcox, the suspected lover, who, in pursuance of advice from his father and lawyer, had left town and was stopping at a country house in Pasquatank county, was sent for and brought to Elizabeth City at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was no apparent change in his expression, and when questioned about the case answered in monosyllables and wore the look of stolid indifference he has assumed all along. He maintains not only innocence but ignorance of the causes which led to Miss Cropsey's death.

No action will be taken relative to the appointment of a permanent fiscal agent until after officials have advised with Gov. Taft, who is expected in Washington in a few weeks. By an agreement among the president and the cabinet it was decided to leave the selection of a fiscal agent to relieve America's portion of the Chinese indemnity to Secretaries Hay, Gage and Root.

WILSON REMAINS.

Emphatic Denial of the Latest Cabinet Rumor.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The most positive denials are given of the story published yesterday that E. D. Coburn, secretary of the state board of agriculture of Kansas, is to succeed Secretary Wilson. When the fact that Gov. Shaw had accepted the tender of the treasury portfolio was made public the announcement was made that Secretary Wilson would remain in the cabinet, and yesterday the same statement was reiterated at the White House in the most emphatic manner. The president is anxious that Secretary Wilson should remain, and Secretary Wilson himself has informed the president that he will be glad to do so.

LIFE'S CHORD IS SEVERED.

Senator Sewell's Death Occurs After an Illness of Two Years.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 28—United States Senator William J. Sewell died at his home here at 9:30 a. m. yesterday. He suffered from diabetis, complicated with stomach and heart trouble. Senator Sewell's illness had extended over a period of two years, but his condition was not considered serious until about a year ago. His constant attention to the duties devolving upon him in his official capacity resulted, in 1899, in a collapse. A trip to Europe was beneficial, and he soon recovered sufficiently to resume his duties. Toward the end of the last session of congress he developed a complication of diseases and, acting on the advice of his physicians, again visited various health resorts in Europe. Upon his return, his condition showing no improvement, Senator Sewell went to Asheville, N. C., where he remained two months. He returned to his home about four weeks ago, and for a few days a slight improvement in his condition was noted. During the past two weeks he has failed steadily and he sank into unconsciousness before he died. Senator Sewell was born in Ireland in 1835.

The bride was charmingly dressed. The bride being a Catholic, there will be two religious ceremonies. The first will take place at Notre Dame and the second at the Episcopal church at 11 o'clock in the morning and at noon today, respectively, when ten bluejackets from the United States cruiser Albany will form a guard of honor.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 28.—An Ontario & Western coal train ran away on the heavy eighty-foot grade going down the mountain on the Scranton division east of Poyntelle, Wayne county, yesterday. Near Preston Park, in passing a switch frog it jumped the track and plunged down a hill for nearly one hundred feet. The engine and forty gondola cars, all loaded, were piled in a mass. Four trainmen were killed. The track was covered with sleet and snow and the air brakes were ineffective. The train dashed down the mountain at terrible speed, passing Winwood at an estimated rate of eighty miles an hour.

They were finally rescued. None of them was seriously harmed by his experience.

If he had given his workmen more wages in the past he would never have so much money to give away now, and his former employes would be in a better condition." This is the tribute paid to Mr. Carnegie by Ben Tillett, president of the London Dockers' union, who is in this country at present as fraternal delegate to the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Tillett spoke at Hull house last night to an audience composed principally of trade unionists.

Leaves the Court Room and Attacks Members of His Family.

Grundy Center, Iowa, Dec. 27.—Mr. Putney, a young man about twenty-five years old, went violently insane during the progress of a trial of Stuck vs. Grundy Center, in the district court, he being a juror trying the case. He went home from court, and after breaking dishes, windows, etc., attacked his wife and children, and then [illegible] the road to where his mother lived and choked her. Her life was saved only by her other son who appeared on the scene. Putney fought the officers, and it took several men to subdue him.

MADE HIS LIFE WEARY.

Lieut. Sherman Could Not Stand Regular Army Life.

[illegible] Dec. 2[illegible] Sherman, lately appointed to the regular army, stationed at Fort Sheridan, has resigned and come home under mysterious circumstances. He refuses to give the reason, but his friends insist that West Pointers in authority at the fort made life weary for him, as he was appointed from civilian life. Sherman served in the Philippines and Cuba, and, after some months home, was reappointed. He was at Fort Sheridan only a short while.

RICE COUNTY DAIRYMEN.

Association Organized at a Meeting at Northfield.

Northfield, Minn., Dec. 27—The dairymen of Rice county held a meeting in the city hall for the purpose of discussing the advisability of effecting a permanent organization to discuss the needs of the dairy and how to make dairying more profitable. Prof. Hayes of the State Agricultural college addressed the meeting and a motion was made to form an association. Mr. Heffelman was elected president, and Mr. Schilling, secretary-treasurer. The next meeting will be held on Jan. 21.

COULD NOT WAIT FOR DEATH.

Isanti County Octogenarian Hangs Himself to a Spike.

Cambridge, Minn., Dec. 27.—John W. Rodfors, aged eighty-two, for thirty years a resident of this county, committed suicide by hanging himself to a spike in his shanty about two rods from his son's home in the town of Cambridge. He lived alone and no cause is assigned for his act. He tied three scarfs together and made a noose. When found his feet were but three inches from the floor.

Both Found Guilty.

Helena, Mont., Dec. 27.—The jury in the United States court in the case of Robert E. Lee and Samuel L. Gorvin, charged with stealing seven hundred cattle from the Indians on the Crow reservation, returned a verdict late yesterday afternoon, finding both defendants guilty after a trial lasting two weeks. Motion for a new trial was made.

Undergoes Many Operations.

Spearfish, S. D., Dec. 27.—Thomas N. Matthews, a wealthy cattleman, has been taken to New York, where specialists will operate upon him in the hope of giving relief from sciatic rheumatism. He has suffered with the ailment for several years, and is in a serious condition. He has undergone four or five surgical operations without relief.

He Ought to Know.

Lead, S. D., Dec. 27. — Dean N. M. Redmond, rector of St. Patrick's church, says he has received no official information relative to the report that he had been recommended by Archbishop Keane for appointment to the see of Cheyenne, to succeed Bishop Lenihan, deceased.

Both Legs Torn Off.

Winnebago City, Minn., Dec. 27. — Charlie Leeta, chief engineer at the pumping station and power house here, was caught in the fly-wheel of the compressor pump and both his legs were torn off at the knees.

Malting Plant Almost Ready.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Dec. 27.—Work is progressing nicely on the new $100,000 malting plant now in process of construction here. The boilers are in place and it is expected the plant will be in operation shortly after New Years.

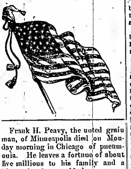
WEDNESDAY, JAN 1, 1902.



Frank H. Peavy, the noted grain man, of Minneapolis died on Monday morning in Chicago of pneumonia. He leaves a fortune of about five millions to his family and a biography that would show many a young man how much perseverance and steadiness can accomplish in a few years.

Some one calls the fact to mind that no portrait of a man has ever appeared on a United States coin or the picture of a woman on the postage stamps. An observing editor remarks on these facts that they constitute the reason why we lick the stamps and squeeze the coin.

The St. Vincent New Era talks about the weather at Christmas time as follows: The "oldest inhabitant" don't remember more milder and delightful weather than we are now getting at any previous Christmas.

Under the heading "What unbalanced his mind" the Minneapolis News Letter says: Admiral Sampson must have been afraid he would have to give back some of the prize money on Dewey's report.

The state capitol officers remembered Gov. Van Sant on Christmas day and presented him with a massive silver tea set as a token of their esteem.

THE SPECTATOR wishes all it's patrons a happy and prosperous New Year.

He Wouldn't Interfere.

An old Scotchman went to stay for a short time, as he said, with friends of his, a young couple with no family. After living with them for some two or three weeks the young couple began to get tired of their visitor, but did not like to tell him the state of their feelings toward him, so they arranged a little plan between them as to how they would get rid of him.

"Tomorrow," said the husband, "when I come home for dinner, I shall quarrel about the soup and say it is not good. In the midst of our quarrel we will appeal to our friend, and if he takes your part I will give him notice to leave the house, and if he takes my part you do just the same."

Next day at dinner the "quarrel" arose about the soup, and in the heat of the argument "uncle" was appealed to, but he coolly replied:

"Ye see, ma freens, for a' the time I intend tae be here—just a month or twa—I hae made up ma mind no tae interfere wi' ye'r hoose affairs."

A Story of Wendell Phillips.

At the close of the civil war and before he was well known Wendell Phillips, the distinguished abolitionist, went to Charleston and put up at a hotel. He had breakfast served in his room and was waited upon by a slave. Mr. Phillips seized the opportunity to represent to the negro in a pathetic way that he regarded him as a man and a brother and, more than that, that he himself was an abolitionist. The negro, however, seemed more anxious about his breakfast than he was about his position in the social scale or the condition of his soul, and finally Mr. Phillips became discouraged and told him to go away, saying that he could not bear to be waited on by a slave.

"You must 'scuse me, massa," said the negro. "I is 'bliged to stay here 'cause I'm 'sponsible for de silverware."

Charity's Choice.

"Mummy," said a small girl—"mummy, dear, I do wish I might give some money for poor children's dinners."

"So you may, darling."

"But, mummy, I haven't any money."

"Well, darling, if you like to go without sugar I will give you the money instead, and then you will have some."

The small child considered solemnly for a moment, and then said, "Must it be sugar, mummy?"

"Why, no, darling. I don't mind much. What would you like to do without?"

"How would soap do, mummy, then?" exclaimed the small maiden in triumph.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A sea anemone taken from the Firth of Forth in 1828 lived and flourished in captivity until 1887.

Judge Cox and family are among the large Washington colony at Narragansett Pier.

A Quick Witted Doctor.

A certain French surgeon, of whom The Young Ladies' Journal tells, had so much more thought for his patient than for his own safety on one occasion that he resorted to an expedient which, although efficacious, might have resulted in his own death.

He had been commissioned to bleed the grand seignior and either through timidity or nervousness had met with an awkward accident. The point of the lancet broke off in the vein, and the blood would not flow.

That point must be got out somehow. Without stopping to consider the consequences to himself, the surgeon gave his highness a violent slap in the face. This produced the desired effect, for surprise and indignation on the part of his august patient put the blood into violent circulation. The vein bled freely, and the lancet point came out.

The bystanders were about to lay hands on the surgeon when he said, "First let me finish the operation and bandage the wound." This done, he threw himself at the feet of the sultan and explained his action.

The sultan not only pardoned him, but gave him a handsome reward for keeping his wits about him in a critical moment.

Curious Freak of Insane Persons.

A Belgian physician, speaking of simulation by the insane, says that in cases of insanity where the intellectual faculties are not too much disordered the insane may simulate another form of insanity than their own. The forms of insanity most often simulated are, in order of frequency, imbecility, dementia and mania. The other forms are not so frequently simulated. A lunatic generally simulates insanity to escape punishment, and an expert physician should not therefore in such cases be satisfied with a diagnosis of simulation. Such diagnosis does not exclude real insanity, and the physician should therefore endeavor to ascertain whether or not the simulator is himself a lunatic. With care, patience and a long continued observation it is possible to make a complete and correct diagnosis, and this is the more important as in these cases the serious question of responsibility arises.—London Family Doctor.

Why Tomsk Was Ignored.

A correspondent of an English paper tells why the great Transsiberian railway does not run through Tomsk, the capital. "How much will you give us if we bring the line past Tomsk?" asked the surveyors and engineers who mapped the route. "Nothing!" replied Tomsk. "We are the capital of Siberia, and you can't avoid coming here." "Oh, can't we?" replied the route finders. "If you don't produce so many thousand rubles, there will be insurmountable engineering difficulties that will prevent us coming within a long way of Tomsk." These engineering difficulties were discovered, and so the Transsiberian railway sweeps along fifty miles to the south of Tomsk, and a branch line had to be made.

Hopeless.

An English clergyman was addressing a congregation of fishermen, and in order to appeal the more to his hearers he introduced a number of nautical similes. He pictured a captain navigating his craft through a dangerous passage, surrounded with rocks and currents, and he described the voyage in detail. At last he reached his climax, when it seemed inevitable that the ship should be lost. "And what shall we do now?" he made his captain cry.

"Bless your soul, guvnor," replied a voice at the back, "that captain o' yours can't do nothin'! He's sailin' his ship stern foremost!"

White Lace Veils.

To clean a white lace veil boil it gently in a solution of white soap for fifteen minutes; then put it into a basin of warm water and soap and keep squeezing it softly until clean. Follow this by rinsing free of soap and putting it into a basin of cold water containing a drop or two of liquid blue. Next make some very clear gum arabic water or thin rice water and pass the veil through it. Then stretch it out evenly and pin it, making the edge as straight as possible and pinning each scallop separately to a linen cloth, and allow it to dry. When dry, cover it with a piece of thin muslin and iron it on the wrong side.

Cure For "the Blues."

A prominent physician has offered a cheap and simple cure for that form of mental depression known as "the blues." It is to smile. The more you smile the better. It relaxes the nerves, promotes digestion, switches the mind to agreeable thoughts and has a happy effect upon those about you. The remedy is a cheap one, and while in some instances it may be hard to take there is no fear of an overdose.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Washerwoman—Sure, an' he's all used up, mum.

Mistress—Why, what ails him?

Washerwoman—Indade, thin, mum, last night he had sich bad dreams that he couldn't slape a wink all night, mum.—Harlem Life.

That Sinking Feeling.

WINE AND WATER.

A Simple Little Trick of Once Effective and Mysterious.

Here is a trick that is always effective, and, while it is very simple indeed, still it is bound to appear just a wee bit mysterious, and many, especially your little brothers and sisters, will be unable to explain it.

Take two ordinary claret glasses and fill one to the brim with claret and the other equally full with clear water.

Cover the top of the glass containing water with an ordinary visiting card so that there are no places around the edge uncovered by the card. Turn the glass upside down and place it on the top of the glass containing claret and adjust the glasses so that their edges meet exactly all the way around.

Now move the card slightly to one side so that there will be a little space at one side of the glasses inside uncovered by a card. At once a thin stream of claret will begin to rise through this space, not mixing with the water at all, but its edges clear and sharply defined. The water, too, will begin to descend into the glass containing the claret, a pure, glistening white stream against the ruddy red.

The stream of claret, too, rising through the sparkling white of the water presents a beautiful effect, and in a moment the claret will begin to spread about the top of the upper glass like the unfolding of a red rose and the water will spread in the bottom of the lower glass. The two fluids will not mix, but will present a delightful contrast of red and white with sharply defined edges.

In a very short time the claret and water will have changed places, the claret being in the upper glass and the water in the lower. This is due to the difference in weight of the liquids; water, being the heavier, forces itself into the lower glass, and a portion of the claret is moved up to take the place of the descending water.—New York Herald.

CURE FOR CATARRH.

A Remedy Which an Old Virginian Says Is Infallible.

An old Virginia horse breeder who is visiting in New York claims to have an infallible cure for catarrh. "It seems to me," he said "that 90 per cent of the people of New York city suffer more or less from catarrh. If they will do as I suggest, they can cure themselves in short order.

"A friend of mine who used to live in Yonkers had such a severe case of catarrh that he was compelled to give up his business and go to Colorado. The doctors told him that the high altitude of that state would benefit him. He remained in Colorado nearly a year and then found himself as badly off as when he left Yonkers. After he had made up his mind that nothing could cure him and that he might as well die at home as among strangers he met an old tinker, who gave him the remedy, which cured him in three months.

"Dissolve a little powdered alum in a pint of elder vinegar. Use the solution as a gargle three or four times a day. It won't do any harm if you swallow some of it. Two or three times a day, but particularly just before going to bed, dip a chicken feather in vaseline and stick the feather up the nostrils. I suppose any contrivance bought at a drug store for the purpose will do just as well as a chicken feather, but the old tinker insisted that there was some medicinal virtue in the feather.

"The gargle clears the throat and the lower portions of the air passages from the nostrils. The vaseline heals the diseased condition of the affected parts. In a week the sufferer will feel better, and if he will keep up the treatment he can be assured that he will be cured."—New York Mail and Express.

Sixkiller's Arm a Deadly Weapon.

"Another man has been killed by a blow of the fist, which suggests the thought that at times the naked fist of a man, given proper impetus by a well developed biceps, is an exceedingly dangerous and destructive instrument," said a man who for many years lived at Vinita, in the Cherokee Nation.

"It recalls a bit of history local to the Indian Territory," he continued. "Not far from the Arkansas line there lived a half breed who went by the name of John Sixkiller. He was a bad man, but not bad in the ordinary southwestern way—that is to say, he was not a 'gun fighter,' although he enjoyed a general mixup immensely, and until the Cherokee council intervened he indulged in many such affrays.

"After three men whom he had 'laid out' had died of their injuries the council (tribal legislature) met and passed an act declaring that 'John Sixkiller's right arm is a deadly weapon' and that 'he is forbidden to use it against an adversary except to protect himself from death or great bodily injury.'"

Pussy's Sponge and Hairbrush.

Cats large and small make the most careful toilet of any class of animals, excepting some of the opossums. Lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, india-rubber-like ball of the fore foot and the inner toe, and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a face sponge and brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body.

After the Wedding.

The Countess—You've no idea how embarrassed the count was when he proposed to me.

The Dear Friend—I heard it took considerable of your father's money to pay his debts.—Judge.

Met More Than Half Way.

Dashaway—Well, old man, did you make up with your best girl?

Clerverton—Yes, but I thought I never would succeed in convincing her that I was wrong.—Brooklyn Life.

Got His Money.

When King Edward VII. was an undergraduate at Oxford, he was a great huntsman, and few men could beat him across country. On one occasion his royal highness and some other riders galloped into a farmyard by way of a short cut. The farmer, a sturdy yeoman, closed the gates and told the huntsmen they must pay £1 apiece for trespass.

One of the gentlemen smiled indulgently at the rustic and said, "But, my good man, this is the Prince of Wales."

The good man was in nowise abashed and retorted: "Prince or no prince, I'll have my money." And he got it.

When Time Hangs Heavily.

Time is never wasted until it "hangs heavily on our hands," when you are neither working nor enjoying yourself. There may be times when it suits one's mood to "loaf and invite one's soul," but they are rare nowadays. If you don't believe it, consider how the average citizen spends his vacation. Most people work harder and economize their vacation time more grudgingly in getting the most out of it than they do in any other part of the year. They hate to lose a minute of enjoyment.

Of course there are times—every day—when time seems absolutely wasted, and these are the times when men's tempers are on edge and things go crosswise. Chief among this list of wasted and monotonous intervals is the time spent in waiting for a car, in traveling on it after you get it, in waiting for meals, in fuming over dilatory appointments or by reaching there too soon. Other instances are where the bore buttonholes you and losists with excessive eloquence in stringing a three line item into a two column tale. —Pittsburg Dispatch.

Huge Spiders Wove Them.

Every one who owns a little strip of garden knows what it is to clear away spider webs, a matter of small difficulty and lightly performed, but a popular naturalist who lately returned from the great woods of Central America came across spiders' webs of such strength and huge dimensions that they were positive obstacles in his path. Needless to say, the tenants of these webs were of a monstrous size.

"I measured one of these fabrics," he says. "It had a diameter of more than six feet, without including the long brace threads that run out like forestays to the extremity of the surrounding branches. I then took a number of wild lemons and flung them against the center with all my might. The web stopped every one. It is no wonder that when a bird becomes entangled in the meshes the huge spider is able to make a breakfast off him."

A New English Author.

The traveler who happens to be weather bound at Perogia may find some amusement in the library of one of the leading hotels. Among the contents of the shelves there is a considerable sprinkling of English books; but, to the visitor's surprise, a large proportion of these are by a mysterious author, "Bart," of whose name he is probably ignorant. But when he finds that Bart has written "Ivanhoe" and "The Last Days of Pompeii" the key to the mystery is discovered. The local binder has taken the author's title for his name, and Sir Walter Scott and Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton are credited with but one personality between them.

Dam the Outlet of Red Lake.

The Commercial Club of Thief River Falls has started a vigorous movement to secure a government dam at the outlet of Red Lake and their bustling secretary, W. C. Smiley, is causing a big commotion at nearly every town in the Red River Valley, tributary to the Red River of the North and Red Lake river.

The club issued a circular letter pointing out the advantages of having a dam constructed at the outlet of Red Lake and showing just how such a dam would benefit the entire country drained by the above mentioned rivers and their feeders. Mr. Smiley follows up the circular in person and is making a most worthy effort to interest the people in the idea to the end that sufficient pressure may be brought to bear upon our representatives in Congress to have the matter brought before that body at it's coming meeting.

Looking at the matter from a purely local standpoint we would say that it would be highly beneficial to this vicinity to have such a dam constructed. It is a well known fact that the immediate banks of the Red Lake river nearly everywhere from its source to its outlet, are higher than the country outside of the banks. This is one of the principal reasons why so much ditching has been necessary to get rid of the surface water. This drainage process is now being pushed rapidly, and, as a consequence there is vastly more water being carried off by the river every year than was carried off before the ditches were constructed. When this fact alone is considered it will be seen at a glance that a dam is really necessary to hold back the flowage from the Lake and allow the river to take care of the great surplus of water which is poured into it by the drainage ditches. And then when this has been done the opening of the dam would supply a good flow of water during the dry season, making the river always serviceable for navigation or power.

A mass meeting to consider this project was held at Crookston on Saturday night and resultions passed endorsing the proposition very emphatically.

We would recommend that the movement be pressed by the people to a speedy and successful conclusion, and feel sure that it will prove a great and permanent benefit.

Power of an Inch of Rain.

"The shower we had last night," said a talkative man.

"Yes," answered the thoughtful man. "How much rain fell?"

"The weather report says just an inch."

"Do you know what that means?" asked the other, as he took a pencil from his pocket and began to figure.

"It means clearing the air, laying the dust and furnishing needed moisture for vegetation and for us, I suppose."

"But have you ever thought what it means in power?" continued the thoughtful man. "You said an inch of rain. Now, see these figures. New York city contains 308 square miles of surface, and one inch of water over that would measure 715,455,600 cubic feet, which at 63 pounds—which is the weight of a cubic foot of water—makes 45,070,372,800 pounds, or 22,539,680 tons. Can you realize it?

"Now, what comes down has gone up, and this water fell about 5,600 feet. Old Sol had quite a pull to get that moisture up there, for a mechanical engineer will tell you that that represents the expenditure of nearly 2,500,000,000,000 foot pounds of energy. It's said that we can't hitch machinery to that power without having to take it secondhand through coal."—New York Herald.

Visiting Cards in Sweden.

An old Swedish custom is for people to indicate their business upon their visiting cards. One will receive the card of Lawyer Jones or Banker Smith or Notary Johnson or Music Professor Brown or Grosserer (which means wholesale merchant) Ferguson or Geologist Thompson, and if a man ever held an office it is customary to indicate that fact upon his card. A burgomaster is always a burgomaster, a consul is always a consul and an alderman always an alderman. The prefixes "Hon." and "Mr." are seldom used, and the title, whether commercial or professional, is observed in conversation in the same way.

It is customary also for ladies to print their maiden names upon their visiting cards in smaller type under their married names, particularly if they have a pride of family and want people to know their ancestry.

On the Free List.

"No, no, doctor," said the gatekeeper; "we can't afford that. You send too many deadheads through as it is."—New York Times.

Bradstreet's Reports show that 80 per cent of the business firms that failed did not advertise.

THE BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

A most important article, giving Messrs. Oxnard's and Cutting's views on the Beet Sugar Industry in this country, appeared on the editorial page of the New York Evening Post of December 12th, 1901, and as every household in the land is interested in sugar the article will be of universal interest.

"The Evening Post bids the heartiest welcome to every American industry that can stand on its own bottom and make its way without leaning on the poor rates. Among these self-supporting industries, we are glad to know, is the production of beet sugar. At all events, it was such two years ago. We publish elsewhere a letter written in 1899, and signed by Mr. Oxnard and Mr. Cutting, the chiefs of this industry on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, showing that this was the happy condition of the trade at that time. If parties masquerading as beet sugar producers are besieging the President and Congress at this moment, and pretending that they will be ruined if Cuban sugar is admitted for six months at half the present rates of duty, their false pretences ought to be exposed.

"The letter of Messrs. Oxnard and Cutting was probably written for the purpose of inducing the farmers of the Mississippi valley to go more largely into the cultivation of beets for the sugar factories. This was a laudable motive for telling the truth and showing the large profits which awaited both the beet-grower and the manufacturer if the industry were perseveringly and intelligently prosecuted. To this end it was pointed out that farmers could clear $65 per acre by cultivating beets, and might even make $100. But in order to assure the cultivator that he would not be exposed to reverses by possible changes in the tariff, they proceeded to show that the industry stood in no need of protection.

"The beet sugar industry, these gentlemen say, "stands on as firm a basis as any business in the country." They point out the fact—a very important one—that their product comes out as a finished article, refined and granulated. It is not, like cane-sugar grown in the West India islands, a black and offensive paste, which must be carried in wagons to the seaboard and thence by ships to the United States, where, after another handling, it is put through a costly refinery, and then shipped by rail to the consumer, who may possibly be in Nebraska alongside a beet sugar factory which turns out the refined and granulated article at one fell swoop. Indeed, the advantages of the producer of beet sugar for supplying the domestic consumption are very great. We have no doubt that Messrs. Oxnard and Cutting are within bounds when they say that 'sugar can be produced here cheaper than it can be in Europe.' The reasons for this are that—

"'The sugar industry is, after all, merely an agricultural one. We can undersell Europe in all other crops, and sugar is no exception.'

"It follows as naturally as the making of flour from wheat. If we can produce wheat cheaper than Europe, then naturally we can produce flour cheaper, as we do.

"But the writers of the letter do not depend upon a priori reasoning to prove that they can make sugar at a profit without tariff protection. They point to the fact that under the McKinley tariff of 1890, when sugar was free of duty, the price of the article was 4 cents per pound. Yet a net profit of $3 per ton was made by the beet-sugar factories under those conditions, not counting any bounty on the home production of sugar. They boast that they made this profit while working under absolute free trade, and they have a right to be proud of this result of their skill and industry. Many beet-sugar factories had been started in bygone years, back in the sixties and seventies of the nineteenth century, and had failed because the projectors did not understand the business. Since then great progress has been made, both here and abroad, in the cultivation and manipulation of the beet. What was impossible thirty years ago is now entirely feasible. The industry is already on a solid and enduring basis. There are factories in the United States, these gentlemen tell us in their letter, capable of using 350,000 tons of beets per annum at a profit of $3 per ton, and this would make a profit of $1,050,000 as the income to be earned under absolute free trade.

"It must be plain to readers of this letter, signed by the captains of the beet-sugar industry, that the people in Washington who are declaiming against the temporary measure which the President of the United States urges for the relief of the Cuban people, are either grossly ignorant of the subject, or are practising gross deception. The tenable ground for them is to say: 'Other people are having protection that they do not need, and therefore we ought to have more than we need.' This would be consistent with the letter of Messrs. Oxnard and Cutting, but nothing else is so."

Watah on the Nevis.

The Nevis is a small volcanic island in the Carribean Sea. There is a stone conduit leading down from an extinct crater, carrying a fine stream of watah—the red-hottest, stinkingest sulphur watah you ever saw—into an extinct hotel. Said hotel was built about 145 years ago and destroyed about 85 years ago, leaving on an agglomeration of stone ruins. I am offered this ruin—with watah—for $1,500. Dirt cheap! A rheumatic, who had spent $4,876 on physicians warranted to cure, went to the Nevis and was well in ten days. About all that remains of the hotel is the bath. Our paternal government should buy that hole and send its invalids there. The watah comes straight from hell. It smells, tastes and feels of hell. When you drink that watah you can't drink whisky. Hence.—New York Press.

Know Something About Horses.

The propensity for gambling is proverbial. Another illustration, with an amusing sequel occurred on Fifth avenue, when one of the horses of the ancient stage line actually became so devilish that the driver had to say "whoa" two or three times.

"Wonder what's the matter with that horse?" asked a man of his friend. "I'll bet he smells something to eat."

"I'll bet you a dollar," replied the friend.

Then they walked around the corner and read over a doorway this sign: "Corn and oats."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

J. J. HILL MAKES A STATEMENT

EXPLAINS THE PURPOSE OF FORMING NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY.

MERGER WILL BENEFIT NORTHWEST

EACH COMPANY WILL BE OPERATED SEPERATELY AS HERETOFORE.

WILL PREVENT UNION PACIFIC

GETTING CONTROL OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC AND DIVERTING TRADE SOUTH.

President James J Hill yesterday issued the following statement regarding the merger of the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Burlington railroads under the Northern Securities company, and explaining the purpose of forming the securities company:

I have been absent from Minnesota for more than two months and during that time there has arisen a wide discussion throughout the state of what has been generally called a consolidation or a merger of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railways, and in this discussion statements have been made which are so widely different from the facts that I feel called upon to make a conservative statement of just what has been done in the past and what will be done in the future.

When the Northern Pacific failed and the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. reorganized it, myself and friends were holders of a large amount of that company's securities. After the reorganization was completed we bought about $26,000,000 of Northern Pacific stock, both common and preferred. Some of this stock was afterward sold by individuals, but a large amount has been held from that time to the present.

About a year ago the Union Pacific company bought the Huntington and other interests in the Northern Pacific and at the same time made an effort to buy the control of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy.

With these lines in the hands of the Union Pacific interests both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern would be of the States of Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin, except by using other lines of railway, some of which were in the market for sale and might at any time pass under the control of or be combined with the Union Pacific interests.

Largely Shut Out

We then, with the Northern Pacific, made proposals to the directors of the Burlington to buy their entire property. When this transaction was about being closed the people who represented the Union Pacific company, and who had previously tried to buy the Burlington, asked to be allowed to share with us in the purchase of that company; this proposal we refused for the reason that it would defeat our object in buying the Burlington, and further it was against the law of several of the states in which the largest mileage of the Burlington was located.

At that time, against the opposition of the more southerly lines, both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern had put into affect a low colonization rate and were carrying daily thousands of people into the Northwest, many of whom were coming from Kansas and Nebraska, along the lines of the Union Pacific.

This movement was at its height in the month of April and after we had closed the purchase of the Burlington the Union Pacific people undertook the boldest effort that ever was made in this country and bought over sixty millions of the stock of the Northern Pacific in the markets of Europe and the United States. I was in New York at the time and after Messrs. Morgan & Co. were aware of the action of the Union Pacific people it was found that together we held about 20,000,000 of Northern Pacific common stock and, inasmuch as the common stock, by right of a contract made with the preferred stockholders when the company was reorganized and the stock issued, had the privilege of stock at par on the first day of January in any year until 1917, Messrs. Morgan & Co. then bought in London and New York about 16,000,000 of the common stock of the Northern Pacific; at the same time the Union Pacific interests, having already so large an investment, bid the stock up until there was the largest stock corner ever known; the common stock in three or four days went up to $1,000 per share.

I explained to my friends how that, with control of the Northern Pacific, the Union Pacific would control the entire Northwest and of the West from Mexico to the Canadian line, except for the Great Northern. So great was the effort to get this control that one of my friends in London, who owned 2,000,000 of Northern Pacific common, was offered and refused $14,000,000 for his stock. The result was that Messrs. Morgan & Co. and ourselves owned 42,000,000 out of 80,000,000 of the Northern Pacific common, with the privilege of paying off the 75,000,000 of Northern Pacific preferred. The Union Pacific people owned 37,000,000 of the common and about 42,000,000 of the preferred, which was a clear majority of all the stock of the Northern Pacific, and claimed the exclusive control of the Northern Pacific railway and through that ownership a control of one-half the Burlington.

When it was known that these preferred shares could and would be paid off, and before the annual election, mutual negotiations resulted in Mr. Morgan giving them a representative in the Northern Pacific board. At the same time I was elected a member of the Northern Pacific board. When I was advised of my election I notified them that I as a director of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern at the same time and I resigned after the first meeting of the board.

Several of the gentlemen who have long been interested in the Great Northern railway and its predecessor the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba company and who have always been among its largest shareholders, but not the holders of a majority of its stock, whose ages are from seventy to eighty-six years, have desired to combine their individual holdings in corporate form, and in that way secure permanent protection for their interests and a continuation of the policy and management which has done so much for the development of the Northwest and the enhancement of their own property in the Northwest and elsewhere. Out of this desire has grown the Northern Securities company.

It became necessary (in order to prevent the Northern Pacific from passing under the control of the Union Pacific interests and with it the joint control of the Burlington) to pay off the seventy-five millions of Northern Pacific preferred. The enormous amount of cash required for this purpose from a comparatively small number of men made it necessary for them in a large and permanent manner, through the medium of a corporation, and the Northern Securities company afforded them the means of accomplishing this object without the necessity of creating a separate company to finance the transaction for the Northern Pacific; while, at the same time, the credit of the Northern Securities company would be much stronger, as it would also hold a considerable amount of Great Northern and other securities.

The Northern Securities company is organized to deal in high-class securities, to hold the same for the benefit of its shareholders and to advance the interests of the corporations whose securities it owns. Its powers do not include the operation of railways, banking, mining nor the buying or selling of securities or properties for others on commission; it is purely an investment company and the object of its creation was simply to enable those who hold its stock to continue their respective interests in association together and to prevent such interests from being scattered by death or otherwise; to provide against such attacks as had been made upon the Northern Pacific by a rival and competing interest, whose main investment was hundreds of miles from the Northwest and whose only object in buying control of the Northern Pacific was to benefit their southern properties by restraining the growth of the country between Lake Superior and Puget Sound, and by turning away from the Northern lines the which must follow the placing on the Pacific ocean of the largest ships in the world.

The foregoing is a brief and absolutely correct statement of the whole subject and its truth can easily be verified by the State of Minnesota or any other state or person having sufficient interest to investigate the facts, which are all matters of record.

Now as to the effect of what has been done upon the public interests of the country, let me ask a few question which I want every candid and honest man to answer for himself:

Did the Union Pacific people with their railway lines extending from Omaha and New Orleans to California and Oregon, though the several states in the Middle West and South, purchase a majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific company for the purpose of aiding that company and increasing the growth and prosperity of the Northern country, or was it for the purpose of restricting such growth and aiding the development of their enormous interests hundreds of miles to the south?

Did they purchase the Northern Pacific, and with it an equal share in the Burlington, for the purpose of building up the Asiatic trade between the northern zone, lying between St. Paul and Minneapolis and the Pacific coast, or to and control the Oriental trade for their own railway lines through their own seaports and over their ownships?

In defeating their control of the Northern Pacific and Burlington and retaining it in the hands of those who had built it up and with it the entire Northwest, did we injure or benefit the people of the Northwest?

Did I, by inducing my friends to hold their Northern Pacific common stock and act jointly with Messrs. Morgan & Co. when this stock was selling at $500 and $1,000 a share, and thus prevent the Union Pacific from controlling the Northwest, injure or benefit every interest, agricultural, business and otherwise, of the entire country between Lake Superior and the Pacific coast?

Had we sold our $20,000,000 of Northern Pacific, even at $300 a share, amounting to $60,000,000, or $40,000,000 more than its present value and transferred to the Union Pacific control the entire country between Canada and Mexico, what law of Minnesota would we have violated? Could we not have legally put the money in our pockets and let the country learn what it was to be dominated by a parallel and competing railroad?

Why did Gov. Van Sant sit still from May until November while a majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific company was controlled by a parallel and competing railroad company, to which the law is clearly opposed, and wait until myself and friends have by our efforts and with our own money not as a rival parallel or competing railroad, but doing what we clearly have the right to do as individuals or working together, for greater permanency and security as a financial corporation?

Relieved the Northwest,

Has there ever been a case in the history of this country when men have dropped their money profit and stood firmly by the interests of the communities which had grown up with their own and largely by their own efforts and capital?

The public is interested in having a good railway service and at fair and reasonable rates. The past is gone and speaks for itself. I can speak for the future, and I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the increased volume of traffic, both through and local, will enable the companies to reduce their rates in proportion to the volume of such traffic, and that in the near future the public will have a chance to see for itself this feature of what I have said. The development of the country will increase with greater increase in population between Minnesota and the Pacific.

No merger or consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern is contemplated. Each company will be operated separately in the future as in the past.

I greatly dislike to discuss my business in the newspapers, but during my absence an attack has been made upon myself and friends which has been persistently supported by both political and rival interests. All I ask is fair play, and let time determine whether the public will be benefited or injured by what we have done and will continue to do.

IMPOSED ON HER.

Duluth Woman Made an Innocent Tool of Smugglers.

Duluth, Dec. 23. — Among the federal prisoners that recently escaped from the prison at Leavenworth was one W. F. Peaslee, and it is just learned that he is a prisoner of considerable interest to Northern Minnesota people, as well as Texas people, in which state he was convicted of smuggling and sentenced to one year and a half imprisonment.

Peaslee, up to a few years ago, was a locomotive engineer in the employ of the Northern Pacific, and lived with his family at Brainerd. They moved to Del Rio, Tex., where he and his wife became quite wealthy, smuggling Mexican drawnwork and selling it in the United States. Del Rio is close to the Mexican border, and Mr. Peaslee, who continued to follow the occupation of locomotive engineer, was engaged in running between that place and some point in Mexico, and into Texas under the seat of his cab. A well-known Duluth woman, Mrs. D. S. Forgy, was imposed upon by the Peaslees, whom she had known at Brainerd. Mrs. Peaslee, whose part of the smuggling operations was to dispose of the drawnwork, sent Mrs. Forgy a consignment of it with a request that she sell what she could of it and send the balance to an address which she gave of a person in Iowa. The request was made on the ground of old acquaintance, and Mrs. Forgy, who is connected with the millinery business in Duluth, was in a position where she could offer it without special effort.

Smuggled the Finery

Special Agent C. S. Crain of the treasury department came to Duluth and interviewed Port Collector L. M. Willcuts about a year ago in connection with the smuggling of Mexican drawnwork. He said that some of the stuff had been Traced to Duluth.

As soon as Mr. Willcuts heard the name of Mrs. Forgy mentioned as having received it he immediately said there must be some mistake. The subsequent investigation disclosed that Mrs. Peaslee had imposed on her old acquaintance. Mrs. Forgy was profoundly surprised, for the Peaslees had always borne a good reputation. Mrs. Forgy in a few days, unexpectedly, as before, received another consignment of the Mexican drawnwork from Mrs. Peaslee, which she turned over to Port Collector Willcuts with the correspondence. The Peaslees were immediately arrested, and both were convicted at Del Rio of smuggling.

Mrs. Peaslee was allowed to pay a fine in lieu of imprisonment on account of her children, but her husband was sent to the federal prison at Leavenworth. He had the good sense to return to the prison after going a short distance. Mrs. Forgy made two trips to Texas to testify for the government against the Peaslees, but until now nobody outside of a few of her intimate friends knew of her mission. While she very naturally felt much mortified to have unwittingly been made the agency of a smuggler, her friends consider it a good joke at her expense and nothing that she should take to heart.

EDWARD FOR ARBITRATOR.

Argentina is Desirous of Avoiding War.

London, Dec. 23.—The Argentina legation announces that it has received the following dispatch:

"Buenos Ayres, Dec. 21.—All the efforts of the Argentine government to arrive at an understanding in the diplomatic representations made by the Chilean government since the beginning of the year have proved fruitless, notwithstanding that every means was exhausted to secure a decorous solution for both governments. The Argentine government, in consequence, has decided to suspend negotiations thereto and refer the matter to his Britannic majesty's government and the arbitrator appointed in 1898. This decision does not mean any alteration in the existing state of peace with Chile.

—"Alcorta.

"Minister of Foreign Affairs."

The secretary of the legation explains that the entire dispute has been referred to Great Britain, but that Argentina's action does not entail a rupture of diplomatic relations with Chile.

A dispatch to the Central News from Rome states that the Corriera Della Sera has received a telegram from Buenos Ayres saying that Chile has rejected the Argentina note and that diplomatic relations between the two countries have been broken off.

NOW ENGLAND ASKS.

Chamberlain Requests Australia to Send a Thousand Men.

London, Dec. 23.—Telegrams received here from South Africa still refer to the probable decision of the Boers to surrender, but a dispatch to the Daily News from Volksrust to-day declares that the Boers are determined to continue the war and that their recent conferences have been with the object of planning a summer campaign.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Sydney announces that Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, has telegraphed to the Rt. Hon. E. Barton, the prime minister of the commonwealth of Australia, to the effect that the British government would be glad of 1,000 men for service in South Africa. This will be the first federal contingent to go to South Africa, Premier Barton having previously declined to offer men unless the government asked for them.

GERMANY IS MAD

WILL MAKE A NAVAL DEMONSTRATION AGAINST VENEZUELA.

CAUSES GREAT EXCITEMENT

WARSHIP ARRIVES AT LA GUAYRA AND HER MISSION IS SUSPECTED.

KAISER ASKS US HOW WE STAND

SATISFIED WITH THE ATTITUDE THIS GOVERNMENT WILL ASSUME.

La Guayra, Venez., Dec. 28—The German cruiser Vineta yesterday anchored off this port. The event caused great excitement, as it was taken for granted that the arrival of the vessel meant that Germany's threatened naval demonstration was on.

An interesting incident occurred early in the day. When the Venezuelan health officer went alongside the Vineta at 6 o'clock in the morning he was not allowed to board her. The Venezuelan officials immediately interpreted the action of the German officers to mean that the cruiser had visited La Guayra on warlike business in connection with the claims of German citizens. But at 8 o'clock a German officer called on the authorities and explained that the refusal to allow the health officer to board the Vineta was due to the fact that he went alongside the cruiser at too early an hour.

Naval Demonstration.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The gathering of German warships in the vicinity of Venezuela and the presence in the same locality of many American, British, French and other foreign warships, is directing attention to the imminence of the naval demonstration Germany is about to make against Venezuela. Thus far the German government has not made known the exact details of her proposed move, the official communications to the United States being confined to an inquiry as to the attitude of this government on the question of a demonstration in view of the purpose on the part of Germany not to acquire any permanent foothold in Venezuela. The answer of this government was entirely satisfactory to the German authorities who since have proceeded with the execution of their plans for coercing Venezuela. It is said to be probable that the first move by Germany will be the establishment of a blockade of Venezuelan ports so as to prevent the introduction of food products into Venezuela, and thus starve the besieged into submission. Venezuela, it is said, is entirely dependent on the outside world for its supply of corn, which is a staple among the Venezuelans. The Germans are expected to occupy one or more of the main ports of Venezuela, probably La Guayra and Maracaibo. In this connection most positive assurances have been given to the United States government that the occupation is to be temporary and only for such length of time as will permit the collection of the debt due to Germans, thus disposing of the report that there is any ulterior purpose to establish a German coaling station on Venezuelan soil.

HARTSOUGH CONVICTED.

Sheridan Liveryman Found Guilty of Manslaughter.

Sheridan, Wyo., Dec. 28.—Lew Hartsough, who shot and killed Frank McLaughlin last month, was convicted of manslaughter. Hartsough is a liveryman, while McLaughlin was a well known mining operator whose family lives at Paterson, N. J. The men had differences and Hartsough claimed his life was threatened.

Fierce Storm in California.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 28.—A windstorm of unusual force and destruction raged yesterday all over the Southern part of California. The storm is what is locally known as a "Santa Ana," and carried with it fine dust from the desert to the east that filled the air and obscured the vision at a distance of a hundred yards. Reports from surrounding towns report much damage wrought by the wind to oranges and some damage to small buildings.

First Conviction Under New Law.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 28.—The first conviction under the kidnapping and intimidation law passed last winter was secured yesterday when C. S. Hunt was given one year in the penitentiary. Hunt threatened a neighbor's family and demanded that $200 be buried in a vacant lot. A can of nails was buried instead and officers set to watch. Hunt's arrest and conviction followed.

Steamers' Cargo on Fire.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 28.—The steamer Shinaro Maru, which returned on Thursday evening to Port Townsend with her cargo on fire, arrived here yesterday, where her 107 passengers were landed and her hold filled with water. Capt. Cope thinks that most of the cargo can be saved.

Wessels Is Coming.

Amsterdam, Dec. 28.—As the result of conference between a clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Broekhuysen, and the Boer leaders here, it has been decided to send C. M. Wessels to the United States in January bearing a letter from Mr. Kruger to President Roosevelt.

Wife in Hospital—Husband in Jail.

Clinton, Iowa, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Bernard McGovern of Lincoln township, this county, lies in a serious condition in the hospital as a result of an assault made upon her by her husband while intoxicated. McGovern is in jail.

Frank Peavey Ill.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Frank H. Peavey of Minneapolis, who was reported to be ill with pneumonia, was much improved yesterday. His son George denied that his father had pneumonia. He said it was simply the grip.

GIRL SHOOTS HER FATHER.

Boston, Dec. 28.—Miss Florence Dobson, daughter of James R. Dobson, a West Somerville painter, shot her father in the back at midnight last night because he was kneeling on her mother's chest and choking her. The man is in the Somerville hospital, but the surgeons say that the wound is not necessarily fatal. Dobson came home late, filled with liquor, and started a rough house as soon as he entered it.

Sir John N. Patron, the painter, was found dead in his bed at Edinburgh. He was born in 1821.

Prostrate With Rheumatic Fever Six Times Within Twenty Years.

This was the case of Mr. Eli Wiltshire of Lansdown Terrace, Calne, Wis., who during this time suffered the most intense agony. He writes:

"I heartily indorse the testimonials which you publish of St. Jacob's Oil as a pain killer, for I have been a sufferer from rheumatism and kindred complaints at different times during the last twenty years. I have been laid prostrate with rheumatic fever six times during that period, therefore, I consider I know something about rheumatism. During all of these twenty years I have tried various advertised rheumatic remedies, oils, ointments and embrocations. None of them gave me much relief, but when I tried St. Jacob's Oil I found quite different results. It eased the pain almost immediately, and has done for me what all other remedies put together never began to do.

"I could give you several cases that have been cured, which have come under my notice, and through my recommendation, also, one of toothache, one of faceache, and one of sore throat.

"I have recommended St. Jacob's Oil and shall continue to do so by every means in my power, as I consider you deserving of every support."

Queer Religion.

From Asbury Grove, in Essex county, comes a piteous story, to the effect that the site of the summer camp meetings is haunted by troops of starved, miserable cats. These animals were pets of the families who occupied Asbury Grove in the summer. It is assumed that most of the families went thither to be near the camp meeting. It is, however, a queer brand of religion which will justify any human being in deliberately abandoning an animal to the slow tortures of starvation. Humane agents of Beverly have lately taken action, with a view to putting these neglected animals out of misery by some painless poison. Whatever may be their fate, the story is extremely discreditable to the summer community of Asbury Grove.—Boston Advertiser.

Vienna's Horsemeat Databars.

The horsemeat butcher shops of Vienna, of which there are no less than 185, present a clean and attractive appearance; and are in no way distinguishable from the shops where the usual kinds of meat are sold, save by the sign announcing their specialty. Restaurant keepers who serve horsemeat must designate this fact in a special column on the bill of fare offered to patrons.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Wonderful Cure.

Wright City, Mo., Dec. 30.—Medical men are still wondering over the Symes case, which has aroused such a widespread interest in this neighborhood.

Mr. Joseph G. Symes had suffered very severely with Inflammatory Rheumatism, enduring pains which were something terrible, and which made it altogether impossible for him to work by day or rest or sleep at night. In spite of all treatments he grew worse, and his case seemed to defy all the usual remedies.

He began a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills and very soon noticed a marked improvement, which increased as he kept on till six boxes were used, when he found himself without a trace of pain or ache. He is now able to work all day and sleep all night, and his rapid and complete recovery is regarded by the doctors as little short of a miracle.

LARGER SCHOOL BUILDINGS REQUIRED.

Owing to the recent large influx of population into Western Canada it has become absolutely necessary in many parts of Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and Alberta to increase the school accommodation. In many places buildings have been erected that are only half-occupied. This is perhaps as good evidence as will be found not only of their satisfaction with their present school system and their confidence that it will remain as it is, but also of their firm belief in the future expansion of the country. In increased immigration, and it further indicates that they have little fear that the well established rate of births in civilized communities will not be maintained there.

The free homestead laws and the cheap railway lands offer great inducements, which are opening up the new settlements. Brigands and Conspirators in Bulgaria.

Brigandage is nothing new in Bulgaria. The story of the capture of Miss Stone, the missionary, recalls other remarkable tales. The Balkan mountains have been the homes and haunts of many brigands through centuries of Bulgarian history. In the sixteenth century a national movement against the oppression of Turkey fell into the hands of brigand chiefs. They were known by the name of Haidutin. They were represented as the friends of the poor, the protectors of the weak, the allies of Christians, and the foes of the Mohammedans. In legends and in songs their names and fame were perpetuated. They increased from the ranks of the avengers and the worthless. Once identified with them, a brigand's safety consisted in continuing with them. The Turks blocked the way to return to the ranks of common citizenship. Villagers often welcomed them as deliverers from their oppressors.—Leslie's Weekly.

LOOK INTO MERGER

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION WILL CONDUCT AN INVESTIGATION.

GATHER DATA FOR THE PRESIDENT

TO BE USED IN A SPECIAL MESSAGE TO BE SENT TO CONGRESS.

WILL DEAL WITH THREE SUBJECTS

RAILWAY COMBINES, INTERSTATE COMMISSION AND INTERSTATE TRAFFIC.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—The Record-Herald says:

The interstate commerce commission will begin a series of three investigations in Chicago next Tuesday which are said to have for their purpose the gathering of data for a special message by President Roosevelt to congress.

It is said that in this special message the president will deal with three subjects, as follows:

First—Railway combinations.

Second — The interstate commerce commission.

Third—Legislation governing interstate traffic.

Originally it was the purpose of the president to cover these subjects fully in his annual message to congress, but owing to the inability of the interstate commerce commission to get all the facts necessary, the subjects were touched upon but briefly and were left to be handled in a supplementary message. The investigations which will be made and which will supplement these already made are:

First — Tuesday at Chicago — The transportation of packing house products and dressed beef.

Second — Wednesday at Chicago — The Burlington-Northern Pacific-Great Northern combination.

Third — Thursday at Kansas City — Grain and grain products to Eastern and seaboard points.

Fourth — Friday at Chicago—Packing house products and dressed beef.

United States Marshal Ames' deputy was busy yesterday serving and trying to serve subpoenas on representatives of packing house interests. He had six summonses and succeeded in serving two. Several of the men sought are said to have escaped service by leaving the city hurriedly, one of them missing the deputy only by a few seconds.

Railroad Men Willing.

While the packing house men are apparently shunning the investigation, the railroad men are not seeking to avoid it. Many of them believe that anything is better than the present conditions, and that with stable rates would come lower rates, to the great benefit of the entire country.

It is doubtful if the investigation into the Burlington deal can proceed on Wednesday, as President Harris of the Burlington, and Darius Miller, vice president, will not be in the city. They have asked the commission to postpone the date, and unless the St. Paul people interested can get here a postponement may become necessary. It is understood that the legal counsel interested in the organization of the Northern Securities company, James J. Hill, E. H. Harriman, J. P. Morgan, Former President Hays of the Southern Pacific, President Burt of the Union Pacific, and J. C. Stubbs, traffic director for the Harriman lines, have been asked to attend. None of these men were subpoenaed, but Darius Miller said that he expected to respond to the commission's request, and it is presumed that others will do the same.

It is also the purpose of the commission to inquire into the purchase of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, and into all that has transpired within the last year as tending to show the workings of the community of interests idea.

Railroad men have been given to understand that the investigations into rate matters is not for the purpose of inflicting punishment upon any one, but simply in the line of investigation for facts and data. This is understood as confirming the purpose of the president to send a special message to congress.

BANK IS ROBBED.

Vault Blown Open With Dynamite and $2,000 Taken.

Columbus, Neb., Jan. 5. — The Blue Valley bank at Bellwood, Butler county, was robbed Thursday night of $2,000. The vault was blown open with dynamite and the robbers escaped. It is supposed they were three in number, as a trio of strangers were seen loafing about the town Thursday. One carried a heavy grip on his shoulder and the presumption is that it contained the tools and dynamite used to wreck the vault. The officers have a very incomplete description of the men and extraordinary efforts are being made to apprehend them.

ATTACK ON MILNER.

Rumor of an Attempt to Assassinate the British Commissioner.

London, Jan. 5.—A rumor was current in the city that an attempt had been made to assassinate Lord Milner, the British high commissioner in South Africa. The rumor, however, was wholly unconfirmed, and was entirely discredited in responsible quarters.

LIKE A WITCH OF OLD.

Girl With Abnormal Power Is Driven From Her Home.

Elkhart, Ind., Jan. 5.—Like a witch of Puritan days, pretty thirteen-year-old Bessie Currier, who is credited with abnormal power to cause plates to float through the air, water pails to upset, bedsteads to come asunder and other startling phenomena, has been driven from her home. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. William Currier, with whom she and her mother, Mrs. Mary Currier, lived, declared that the girl should no longer be harbored under her roof, and she has accordingly gone to another sister-in-law, Mrs. John Currier, some distance from the city. Mrs. William Currier, however, does not regard the girl with supernatural awe, but thinks the phenomena the result of trickery on her part, though the child maintains that she is not responsible for the manifestations. The story of the remarkable manifestations at James McCarthy's residence in this city has stirred up much comment. Many ridicule the story, but the scores who visited the house were impressed with the evident sincerity of the family, boarders and neighbors.

WHITE HOUSE DEBUTANTE.

President's Eldest Daughter Is Presented to Society.

Washington, Jan. 5. — Miss Alice Roosevelt, the eldest daughter of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt, was formally presented to Washington society last night at a ball given in her honor at the White House. About 500 guests were present, many of whom either were connections of the Roosevelt family or well known society people living outside of Washington. Miss Roosevelt is the first White House debutante since 1873, when Miss Nellie Grant, the daughter of President and Mrs. Grant, was presented to society at a ball which was the gayest social event of the decade. Last night's entertainment was given a personal rather than an official character by Mrs. Roosevelt, whose wish was that Miss Roosevelt should make her debut much as though it had taken place in her own private home rather than in the White House.

Later the governor called on Speaker Henderson. He will have a more extended conference with the president to-day. Gov. Shaw accorded a hearty greeting to the group of newspaper men who were awaiting him in the hotel lobby, after his return from the White House. He was non-communicative, however, when asked leading questions about matters of financial policy.

Mullins, Robinson and Clark were charged with murder in the first degree for the killing of J. B. Waldrupe, one of the prison guards. Various prison officials testified as to the incidents of the outbreak. The commissioner remanded the three prisoners into the warden's care to be held to the United States grand jury. The examination of Frank Robinson and Turner Barnes will take place to-day.

On his return he went back of his barn, and, lying on his back, placed the dynamite beneath his vest. With his hands he struck the cap and exploded the dynamite. The explosion tore a great hole in the earth and blew the man's body into countless pieces.

BADLY DISABLED

VESSEL WHICH SUNK THE WALLA WALLA ARRIVES AT SAN FRANCISCO.

CAME VERY NEAR GOING DOWN

HER WATERTIGHT APARTMENTS ALONE WERE KEEPING HER AFLOAT.

LOST NOW NUMBERS FORTY-TWO

SAD EXPERIENCE OF A CLERGYMAN WHO LOSES HIS ENTIRE FAMILY.

San Francisco, Jan. 6—The French bark Max, which collided with the steamship Walla Walla early Thursday morning, arrived here in tow of the steamer Acme and revenue cutter McCulloch in a badly disabled condition. The Max's bowsprit was carried away and her bow was stove in, both above and below the water line. Her water-tight compartments alone were keeping her afloat. Ninety-two survivors of the Walla Walla arrived here yesterday from Eureka on the steamer Pomona. There is still some discrepancy in the lists of dead and missing. The number ranges from thirty-seven to forty-seven. This discrepancy is due to the fact that several passengers boarded the vessel just as she was leaving port. Others who were traveling second-class gave assumed names in order to hide their identity. By striking out what are possible duplicates, the number lost

Stands at Forty-Two.

Rev. Henry Erickson, who was among the six survivors brought to this city by the steamer Nome City, is at St. Mary's hospital, a physical and almost a mental wreck. His wife and three children are among the dead and missing. The Erickson family, excepting the mother, were second class passengers. When the crash came they were awakened and all went to the upper deck together. Mrs. Erickson and the two younger children became separated from the others and it is supposed they were drowned when the vessel went down. Erickson and his son clung together and were pitched into the water clear of the sinking steamer. They floated around for some time and finally were picked up by the life raft, on which were a number of the officers of the Walla Walla. It was almost daybreak when they were found and they were in an exhausted condition. Father and son were pulled into the light structure, but the boy was too weak

To Stand the Exposure.

A few hours later he died in his father's arms, and after the heartbroken parent had bowed his head in silent prayer over the corpse of his son, the body was consigned to the waves. After the body of the boy had gone overboard the father became more and more despondent. Despite the advice of his companions time and time again he filled his hands with water and drank it down. This added to his misery, and his companions feared that he would be next to succumb. The sea was running high and dashing over the raft, but all clung on through the long hours of the day and night. They hoped against hope until the Nome City picked them up. The Rev. Erickson was the first to be lifted aboard. He was at once placed in bed and carefully tended. It is thought he will recover.

CONVICT CAUGHT IN A TRAP.

Attempts to Escape by Crawling Through a Sewer.

Jeffersonville, Ind., Jan. 6. — Frank Strunck of Brookville, a convict serving a term in the reformatory for burglary, carried into effect at noon yesterday a unique scheme for escape, in which he failed and came near giving up his life for his folly. Strunck opened the grating covering the sewer that runs from the institution to the river, and, lowering himself into the opening, replacing the grating and started on his hands and knees on a journey of a mile and a half to liberty. At the point where he entered the sewer is twenty-four inches in diameter. All went well for about 400 feet, as there was enough fresh air admitted at the opening to neutralize the foul gas. At this distance the pipe got smaller and he soon found himself almost overcome by the foul air and stench. Almost deprived of his strength, he then decided to turn back. He could not turn around and was compelled to back out the entire distance. When he reached the manhole he was lifted out more dead than alive.

CITY COMPLETELY TERRORIZED

ARMED CITIZENS WILL PATROL THE STREETS DURING THE NIGHT.

THUGS AND CRIMINALS HOLD SWAY

HOLD-UPS AND ROBBERIES OF ALMOST DAILY OCCURRENCE.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 6.—This city will present a decidedly martial aspect if plans adopted at a mass meeting of citizens yesterday afternoon are carried out, and the temper of the meeting would indicate that they will be. Because of the many crimes that have been committed here within the past year or two which have brought terror to Denver residents the latter have organized a committee of safety for the purpose of protecting the people against criminals. The streets are to be patrolled during the night by armed citizens who will be expected to keep the town free of the criminal class. All persons on the streets at night will be expected to give an account of themselves when called upon, and failing to satisfy the challenger of the sufficiency of their reasons for being abroad, will be arrested. Police magistrates will be urged to make punishment for crime so heavy as to deter even the most desperate. For months past thugs and criminals have held sway in this city. Women have been criminally assaulted in their own homes and on the streets; hold-ups and robberies have been of almost daily occurrence and even murder has been committed.

BOILER LETS GO.

Explosion Wrecks a Handsome Residence in Washington.

Washington, Jan. 6—The explosion of a boiler connected with the heating apparatus in the basement of the handsome five-story residence of Mr. Beale R. Howard at 1410 Sixteenth street, yesterday morning seriously damaged the house and may result in loss of life. The shock of the explosion was felt throughout the immediate neighborhood and the house was so badly wrecked as to be unfit for occupancy. William Foegus, the colored butler, who was attending the fires under the boiler at the time of the explosion, was frightfully scalded and badly cut about the hands and face. His condition is critical. The damage is estimated at $10,000.

STOPPED LAND SALE.

Injunction Against Disposing of Big Property.

La Porte, Ind., Jan. 6. — Emmet H. Scott, Frank H. Morrison, Edward F. Michael and William A. Martin of La Porte, directors of the Las La Pelle company, have been enjoined by Judge Banker of the federal court from completing the sale of 100,000 acres of land near Munising, Alger county, Mich., for $212,000 to Barry Brown of Detroit. The proceedings were instituted by Timothy Nestor of Munising, who asks an accounting claiming there is due him about $[illegible] a result of the sale. Clevel[illegible] Indianapolis and La Porte [illegible] are interested in the company.

JIM HALL IS DYING.

Famous Pugilist Is Afflicted With Lung Trouble.

Cincinnati, Jan. 6.—Jim Hall, the well known Australian pugilist, was taken to the city hospital yesterday suffering from lung trouble. While conversing with a group of friends he was seized with a violent hemorrhage. A carriage was immediately called and the once famous pugilist was taken to the city hospital. The physicians said there was no immediate danger, but Hall only smiled and said: "I know better; I know when the referee is counting ten." Hall has made his home in this city the past few weeks.

ILLINOIS BANK IS ROBBED.

Gang Binds Night Watchman and Obtain $2,000.

Moweaqua, Ill., Jan. 6.—The Exchange Bank of Bethany, owned by R. Scott & Co., was robbed of $2,000, the thieves getting away without leaving a clew. In their haste they overlooked $3,000 in gold and silver. The robbers secured tools from a neighboring blacksmith shop and used nitro-glycerine on the safe. The robbers bound and gagged the night watchman of the town, and the explosion did not arouse the people. The bank is fully insured and will resume business immediately.

HORSES AND COWS KILLED.

Scarcity of Food in Texas Makes It Necessary.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 6. — On account of the almost total failure of grass and the high price of feedstuffs in this section over 100 head of horses and milch cows have been killed in San Antonio during the past sixty days to prevent them from dying of starvation, their owners, who are of the poorer class, being unable to buy feed for the animals. There has been a drouth in this section for twelve months or more and there is no present prospect for an improvement.

Victims of Severe Weather.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 6. — Two persons have died as a result of the severe weather near Dawson according to advices brought the steamer Amur. The weather there is very stormy and the temperature has been as low as 50 deg.

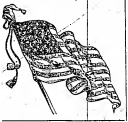
WEDNESDAY, JAN 8, 1902.



Last week a new wage scale went into effect on the Great Northern railway system. The wages of the engineers and firemen are increased and those individuals are tickled accordingly. Another radical change in the Great Northern was recently spoken of by J. J. Hill as follows: "We are going to make substantial reductions in freight rates about the holidays. They were determined upon before Gov. Van Sant made his attack upon us, and they are not for effect. We can afford to reduce rates. There will be a general reduction about Jan. 1 on all but grain rates. Those will follow next summer, in time to benefit the farmers to move next years crop. They would do him no good this winter."

And still there's a lot of people who will continue to say some mean things about Jim Hill and the G. N

Sir Thomas Lipton is up against another hard proposition. This time it is not a Yacht race. Lady Henry Somerset, president of the Working Women's League in England, and other prominent ladies of the land, declare that Sir Thomas underpays his great army of female employes; that women and girls in the Lipton factories are paid from $1.50 to $2.75 per week and are subjected to many indignities as well. Sir Thomas may have learned how how to do such things from his frequent association with the American millionaires who practice the same thing in the big factories in this country. Sir Thomas has money enough to head off any proceedings started on the American plan. But Lady Somerset is certainly not on the "American plan."

A Missouri preacher the other day said that women should lay aside their natural timidity and woo and propose to the man of their choice. His announcement has created quite a sensation, of course. Just think, though, of the sensuions that would jar the soul of a bashful young man when acme dry old maid would come along and put her arm around him, kiss him fondly and murmur in the sweetest of cracked old voices: "George dear I love you—I have always loved you. Will you be mine, dearest, mine for-e-v-e-r?"

The Bulgarian brigands who captured Miss Stone, the American missionary, have neither killed her or collected the big ransom which they demanded. The latest reports go to show that she is very much alive and is working overtime to convert the robbers. The next news expected is to the effect that her captors will offer the Missionary Society a large reward to take her off their hands.

Walsh county, N. D., has some cases of leprosy. People over there are having a bill prepared providing for a national home for lepers and the matter will be brought before congress this session.

Why She Was Silent.

A very silent old woman was once asked why it was she had so little to say. She replied that when she was a young girl she was very ill and could not talk for a long time. Whereupon she made a vow that if speech were given her once more she would never again say anything unkind of anybody. And thus she was as they found her.

He Was It.

The fresh young man walked into the restaurant and noticed a sign:

"This Counter For Clams and Oysters."

"Where is the counter for lobsters?" asked the young man.

"Oh, you can sit most anywhere!" said the waiter.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

HE SAVED THE SCOW

A CLEVER BIT OF STRATEGY IN AN ENGINEERING JOB.

How a Young American Engineer Brought His Spirit of Invention to Aid in Solving a Wreck Problem in South America.

"It is easy enough for an engineer to show ability in New York or in other big towns where he can get about all the tools and conveniences ever devised. It is when an engineer finds himself in the wilds of a jungle or up in the mountains, hundreds of miles from civilization, that his own natural ingenuity and invention count," said a veteran engineer to a youngster who had been admitted to the ranks of the Engineers' club.

"Down in Surinam, Dutch Guiana, where the arrival of a sailing schooner causes a sensation, where a mail steamer enters the muddy harbor once in two weeks to tarry two hours to get rid of its mail and to take on a few passengers, there was once a young American engineer who showed that he had the proper spirit of invention to advance him to the front ranks of the profession. Like all the best inventions, his was the simplest one, and it was one that was widely talked about among the profession to the credit of the inventor.

"To understand the story properly you need a trifling insight into Surinam and its habits. Here Indians may be seen on the streets wearing only a breechcloth. The white population is so scarce that all are thrown together as if in one large family. Englishmen, Americans, Germans, Dutchmen and Frenchmen all combining together and forming clubs and society to keep themselves from dying of sheer lonesomeness.

"In this primitive town there was a man who held the splendid monopoly of owning a large scow. That, up there, seems a remarkably small thing to be proud of, but the value of even a scow depends entirely upon where the scow is and what it will cost to replace it. This particular scow had been built by American ship carpenters sent especially from the United States at great expense. There was not another scow in the entire harbor, and about all of the heavy river work to be done for the city and plantations and mining companies was done by this one vessel. Its loss, therefore, would have been not only a severe one for the owner, who had a monopoly of the business in those days, but it would have been little short of a national calamity.

"One day, while the scow was anchored in midstream, one of those smashing black squalls for which the tropics are famous broke over the river, and for twenty minutes you could not see ten feet away or hear a man shouting at your elbow. When the storm finally abated, the scow was not to be seen, and it was found she had gone down, deck load and all. To most of us there seemed about as much chance of raising the vessel as there would be to raise an ocean steamer sunk in the middle of the Atlantic.

"It was about this time that the young engineer took a hand in the problem. He asked the dimensions of the scow and was told that it was 12 by 60 feet, and then he announced that if the owner would provide him with four men he would raise the scow for a certain sum of money. The bargain was made, though the contractor refused to say how he would go about the job.

"Now, you must know that aside from the ebb and flood tide, which alternate every six hours, there is also what is known as a spring tide. This comes with the full of the moon, and it has the effect of making a higher flood tide than any during the month. The opposite to the spring tide is the neap tide, and that happens at the dark of the moon, with the effect that at no other tide during the month is the ebb tide so low as it is at that time. The difference in the height of water between the ebb at neap tide and the flood at spring tide is considerable.

"The engineer waited until neap tide. On that day he towed a number of logs down the river. These he anchored over the scow and sent men below to fasten chains to one side of the scow, and these he fastened to the logs on the surface. Then he waited patiently. As the spring tide approached he towed other logs down the river until he had enough to make quite a raft, and on the day of the highest tide all the logs were tied together and fastened. The tide rose steadily, and the more it rose the more the raft went down under the strain of the pull on the chains. At last, just as it seemed that the raft was unequal to the occasion, it was seen to bob up violently, and a moment later there was a commotion in the water, and the scow appeared. What had happened, of course, was this: The chains pulling upward on one side of the scow tilted it more and more until the deck load began to slide off, and finally, when all the stones had slid into the river, the scow came up under its own buoyancy. The remainder was simple. The vessel was towed to the shore, where it was hauled up on the sand, and when the water receded holes bored into the hull caused the scow to empty. Later the holes were plugged again, and the old ship was as fine as silk."—New York Times.

She—Well, why don't you? What do you suppose I brought the wishing subject up for?—London Tit-Bits.

FOLLIES OF FASHION

SARTORIAL VAGARIES OF THE CENTURIES THAT ARE GONE.

Grotesque Styles That Reigned In the Time of Chaucer—Raiment That Rivaled the Rainbow and Men Who Starched Their Beards.

It is a little gratifying to reflect that, however the man of today may compare with his ancestors of bygone centuries in physique and morals, his dress is much more moderate and inexpensive, even if it is less picturesque, than theirs.

It is true that here and there one may find some foolish young man whose taste in dress is as extravagant as that of any "buck" of the days of the Georges. There is, for instance, a son of a well known peer who has the reputation of never wearing a suit twice. He has a wardrobe of waistcoats of all the colors of the rainbow, ranging from a light blue spangled with silver stars to a deep green satin with buttons of eighteen carat gold, each of which is adorned with the painted face of a beautiful woman.

Another wealthy aristocrat is credited with having as many suits and uniforms as there are days in the year and with spending on his tailor's bill a sum which would pay the yearly salary of a minor cabinet minister.

But such men are modestly arrayed compared with the dandies of many a past century. The earl of Northumberland who lived in the latter part of the fourteenth century boasted no fewer than sixty suits of cloth of gold alone, and the bishop of Ely of that time had a change of raiment for every day of the year.

Much later, in Queen Mary's time, the wardrobe of a bishop might have been the envy of Solomon for the variety and costliness of its contents, and even a simple village priest, according to Fuller, wore "a vestment of crimson satin, a vestment of crimson velvet, a stole and fanon set with pearl, gowns faced with taffetas, etc."

In the days of Chaucer fashionable men wore clothes as many colored as Joseph's coat, so that "while one leg would be a blaze of crimson the other would be tricked out in green or blue or yellow, without any regard to harmony or contrast."

Even as late as the middle of the eighteenth century a dandy would deck himself in "a vivid green coat, a waistcoat of scarlet, yellow breeches and blue stockings," and the gentleman of a few years later wore, among similar sartorial vagaries, "a coat of light green, with sleeves too small for the arms and buttons too big for the sleeves; a pair of Manchester fine stuff breeches, without money in their pockets; clouded silk stockings, a club of hair behind larger than the head that carries it, a hat of the size of a sixpence on a block not worth a farthing."

At one fashionable epoch our ancestors, to quote the words of a quaint chronicler, "would weare clothes so tighte to ye skin that it might well be conceived they were no clothes at all," and at another they would wear them "so voluminous that a single suite might well have afforded rayment for a whole familie, and so stuffed out with feathers that, of a verity, their wearers resembled nothing so much as walking sackes."

At another period it was the grotesque fashion to combine on one person the dress of all the countries of Europe—the hat would be Spanish, the coat French, the trousers Turkish, and so on—so that the wearer was a "walking epitome of the dress of a continent."

At one time shoes would be worn with square toes of such width that a royal proclamation was issued limiting the width to six inches, and these shoes were succeeded by others which came to the finest of points at the toes.

In Henry II.'s time shoes with points two feet long were worn by the fashionables, and in the reign of Henry IV. these points had grown to such an inordinate length that in order to be able to walk at all it was necessary to attach the tips to the knees by chains, which were of gold or silver, while the tops of the shoes were carved with all kinds of fantastic designs.

In the early part of the eighteenth century it was a common thing for a man of fashion to spend several hours a day with his valet, among the many quaint operations being "the starching of the beard and the proper perfuming of garments, the painting of the face and anointing with oils, tinctures, quintessences and pomatums." It is even said that some of the dandies of the time bathed in wine and milk "for the preservation of their complexions and the rejuvenation of their energies."—London Tit-Bits.

Hanson—Wonder how it is that the Jugginsons get along so harmoniously. They never have any quarrels, apparently.

Mrs. Wunder—It seems to me that that music teacher is always asking for money.

Mr Wunder—That's perfectly natural. His scale, you know, begins and ends with "dough."—Baltimore American.

Harvard University.

Harvard university derives its name from Rev. John Harvard, its earliest benefactor, who in 1638 bequeathed one-half of his estate, amounting to £800, for the endowment of the college. Harvard hall was built in 1765, Holworthy hall of brick in 1812 and Hollis Hall, also of brick, in 1704. Stoughton hall, being of the same dimensions and material as Hollis, was built in 1804, and a writer of 1817 states that "its appearance is somewhat in the modern style."—Boston Budget.

Sayings About Breadcrumbs.

In the days when the "bread loaf" was dear careful mothers had a set of thrift sayings which are seldom heard in this time of the big, cheap loaf. Crumbs were regularly swept up and kept for some useful purpose. If a child threw crumbs in the fire, the old fashioned mother lifted a warning finger and said: "If you throw crumbs in the fire, you are feeding the devil." Children were told that the better part of a loaf was the crust, and when a child was sent to the shop for bread the order was to ask for "a crusty loaf." If a child left its crust, came the warning: "Yes, my lady (or my lad), you'll want for a loaf some day. You'll find hunger's a sharp thorn."—Notes and Queries.

A Co-Operative Creamery.

It looks very much as though St. Hilaire would have a new creamery in the coming spring. The movement has been talked up among the farmers in this vicinity during the past few days and enough shares are now pledged to make the project practically a certainty. It is proposed to put in one of the best creameries in the northwest and such an industry should certainly be a success here.

Some of the business men have promised substantial aid to the enterprise and it is expected that all of them will give a helping hand.

It is assured that plenty of milk can be obtained in this immediate vicinity as stockraising is being more extensively gone into each year. Some of the farmers express their intention of doubling the number of their cows if they can find a good market for their butter.

The business will be conducted purely on co-operative principles and it is expected that an organization will be effected within a few days. A suitable site for buildings will be procured and work will be commenced at once.

Letters From Abroad.

There is no better way to keep posted in detail on the progress of the world outside of the United States than by watching the "Foreign News notes" published in The Chicago Record-Herald. Over a hundred foreign staff correspondents of The Chicago Record-Herald are located in important cities abroad. Their duties do not end with the transmission of news by cable, but include also correspondence by mail concerning all important matters of any interest to readers in this country. It is worthy of note also, that in addition to the work of its own correspondents The Record-Herald receives the full foreign news service of The New York Herald, The New York Tribune and The Associated Press.

King Oscar's Horsemanship.

King Oscar, of Sweden and Norway, never wished to become king. When the honor was thrust upon him, he was totally unprepared. One serious inconvenience was his complete lack of skill as a horseman; but, though a man of 40 years, he immediately took steps to remedy this defect. For seven years he took daily exercise in riding and today is an expert horseman with unusual endurance. Endurance and strength come from drinking "Golden Grain Belt" beer, the purest and most healthful beverage brewed. You will find it an ideal family drink. The Last Execution at Tyburn.

The last execution on a permanent gallows in London took place at Tyburn on Nov. 7, 1783; the malefactor being one John Austin, condemned for highway robbery with violence. For centuries Tyburn had been the scene of executions for criminals condemned in Middlesex, and before the erection of the permanent gibbet occasional hangings had taken place, record existing of the hanging of Judge Tressilian and Nicholas Brembre at that place as far back as 1388.

The gallows consisted of three posts, and around it were open galleries, resembling race stands, in which seats were let. On account of the disgraceful scenes on the road, executions were transferred in 1783 to the area in front of Newgate, despite the objections of residents, and on Dec. 3 of that year the first hanging took place there, when no less than ten were executed.—London Chronicle.

New Affadavit Required.

The land office has received instructions that commencing with the new year all those making entries for lands, will be required to file an affidavit in addition to those heretofore required, what is known as the "Non-Saline Affidavit." This affidavit in substance must allege that the party applying to make the entry is well acquainted with the land applied for and each subdivision of the same, that he has frequently passed over the same and that there is not to his knowledge any salt spring, or deposits of salt in any form, such as to make it chiefly valuable on account thereof, and no portion of the land is claimed for saline purposes and that the land is essentially non-saline lands.

While there are no saline lands in this section of the country now known it would seem that this is an uncalled for affidavit, and the main part of interest to entrymen is that hereafter they will be required to examine their lands and each subdivision thereof before making entry. The usual penalties prescribed for perjury apply in making these affidavits.—Crookston Times.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE.

Cups, Brushes and Sponges That Are Left in Barber Shops.

"What becomes of all the old shaving mugs?" was the question asked the barber.

"What becomes of the owners?" was the response.

Neither side seemed disposed to answer the query, and there was an awkward silence. The barber slapped his razor on the strop, smeared some extra lather on the victim's mouth so he wouldn't be inclined to interrupt and said in a stage whisper:

"Now, I'll tell you, but I don't want it shouted from the housetops. We use the mugs again."

He paused and sighed as he tossed the questioner's head the other way.

"Yes," he continued, "we use them again. We don't like to lose customers; but, if we must lose them, why, we don't mind if they leave their cups, etc., behind. It's surprising how many do; but, then, barbers do mostly a 'shifting trade.' It's no secret that we urge customers to have their own cup. Most of them are satisfied if they have a private cup, brush and sponge. We supply them with the man's name on the cup for $1.50, and our profit on the transaction is 50 cents. When a man has a razor and comb and brush besides the other tools, he generally takes the whole lot away when he's leaving, but countless cups, brushes and sponges are left behind in every barber shop.

"The cups are always good. Many of them contain such common names as John Smith, William Jones, etc., and when some other John Smith or William Jones orders a cup we simply supply him with the cast off one. Sometimes they need a little touching up with gilding; but, on the whole, it's very profitable.

"The brushes and sponges? Oh, we use them on the transients."—New York Telegram.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Ducks and geese need no grain when they have plenty of grass.

Chicken fatten faster on cooked food than on raw because it is more easily digested.

When soft feed is given to either young or old fowls, it should never be thrown on the ground.

When closely confined, the loose grain fed to fowls should be scattered among litter of some kind, so that they can scratch it out.

There is nothing so bad for the health and well being of poultry as confining them in close quarters and preventing them from taking needed exercise.

One of the most important items to insure success in the hatching of chickens is what is to get the eggs from a flock of healthy and vigorous fowls.

There is better health among roving fowls because they get the feed that is best for digestion and get the necessary grit to help the gizzard do its work.

When necessary to administer medicine by placing it in the drinking water, keep the birds from drink for several hours. They are then thirsty and more apt to get a good swallow.

An Interesting Relic.

In the matter of diminutive bank notes a correspondent sends an account of a curious note which he has in his possession. It is a card measuring 2 by 2½ inches, on one side of which is twice printed the word "Twopence," while on the other the sum is printed in words and figures round the border. In the middle is the following: "I promise to pay the bearer, on demand, twopence. By order of the Corporation of the City of New York. Feb. 20, 1790. D. Phoenix, City Treasurer."—London Graphic.

Not Durable.

"Marriages may be made in heaven," he said thoughtfully, "but if so, they're dealing in a cheaper grade of goods up there every year. They don't last anything like the way they used to."—Chicago Post.

Thomas Edison's Deafness.

That Thomas A. Edison is deaf is a fact well known to the public. Only his intimate friends, however, are aware that in his case deafness is more a psychological phenomenon than a physical condition. That which interests him he can usually hear very well, but to that which does not interest him he can be as deaf as the proverbial adder.

Not long ago a specialist in diseases of the ear called upon Mr. Edison, and unfolded a plan of treatment which he was sure would restore his hearing. The inventor listened to his story with patience, as it was informative on several points. To the proposition that he submit to treatment, however, Mr. Edison opposed an emphatic negative.

"What I'm afraid of," said he, "is that you would be successful. Just think what a lot of stuff I'd have to listen to that I don't want to hear! To be a little deaf and to be the only person who knows just how deaf you are, has its advantages; and, on the whole, I think I prefer to let well enough alone."—New York Times.

She Had Buried Eleven.

Miss Mary Butler, the daughter of William Allen Butler, the lawyer, who, years ago, published a poem entitled, "Nothing to Wear," and who, apparently, was frightened by the fame it brought him into, never trying again, is greatly interested in tenement house work, and at the recent conference of state charities read a paper advocating the appointment of women inspectors, whose duty it shall be to make frequent calls upon the mothers of their districts, and instruct them in the ways of cleanliness, cookery and health. This plan, Miss Butler said, is being tried in Yonkers with great success, but not wholly with the commendation of those it is intended to benefit.

"The idea," cried one raw-boned 'lady' of a top flat back, "of a woman comin' around here and tryin' to tell me how to bring up kids? Why, I've buried eleven 'already!'"—New York Times.

THE MAN THAT WASN'T

BY MABEL IRVIN

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The Woman leaned back among the silken cushions in the great arm chair in which she sat and shook her golden head saucily.

"No," she said, "I have never loved."

"And you never want to," answered the Man solemnly.

"Yes. It must be splendid to have your whole heart wrapped up in some one man. To feel that his presence was your only sunshine, your only one great joy. And when he was cross to grope in utter darkness, despair and humiliation, and when he smiled to feel the gladness and warmth of Heaven."

"You have clear ideas for a woman who has never loved."

"Yes, haven't I? If it wasn't for my healthy appetite I should have been a poet."

"Now, suppose," said the Man, "that you loved some one dearly—as you said before—and you were laughed at and treated like a school boy, though you knew you were not indifferent to the loved one or she would not tolerate you, and you knew you had no very serious rival because every other man was treated the same. What would you do?"

"I would go away and forget."

"No, you would not. Not as long as there was hope."

"Yes, I would. A person who can love once can love again."

"But suppose——"

"No, I will not suppose."

"Very well. Then we will talk fact. Why do you treat me so? Why do you keep me dangling to your chariot wheels? You are not indifferent to me."

"You are useful to me. You run my errands. You give me ideas for my work, you——"

"Is that all?"

There was a deep-toned pathos to the Man's voice.

"You amuse me."

"Is that so?"

"You are excellent company."

"And——?"

"A delightful escort."

"In other words, a cross between a graphophone and a watchman."

"With a generous piece of faithful Fido added."

"You are heartless."

"I know it."

"You love me."

For answer the Woman arose and pushed aside the Indian seat she had used for a footstool and raising her clasped hands to her head she walked to the other end of the room and viewed through half-closed eyes an unfinished painting.

"I'm going to put more yellow in that grass," she said.

The Man did not move his eyes from her face. He repeated:

"You love me."

The Woman continued to smile, and returned to her chair.

"I know it," the Man continued. "But you are too cold-blooded to tell me so. You like to see me suffer; it gratifies your vanity. I? I? Why, I can do anything except where you are concerned."

"Go on," said the Woman. "I love to hear it. You can never say it too often."

"No, I will never say it again. I love you. I have always loved you from the time we first met, a year ago. You know it. Now, for the last time, will you be my wife?"

"And if I say 'No'?"

"You will never see me again."

"But I say it."

"You do?"

"Yes."

"You will never find another love like mine."

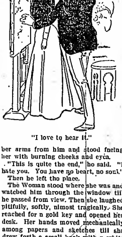
"I know it."

"And yet you throw it away?"

"Yes."

They sat in silence and looked in each other's eyes. It seemed ages to the Man. Merely seconds to the Woman. Then the Woman arose and going to the back of his chair she wound her arms around his neck and raised his head till his eyes met her's.

"Don't leave me," she said. "I would give my soul to love you, but I can't. It will be so hard at first to do without you and to get used to some one else. Please don't——" She broke off in a sharp cry, for the Man had thrown her arms from him and stood facing her with burning cheeks and eyes.



"I love to hear it."

"This is quite the end," he said. "I hate you. You have no heart, no soul."

Then he left the place.

The Woman stood where she was and watched him through the window till he passed from view. Then she laughed pitifully, softly, almost tragically. She reached for a gold key and opened her desk. Her hands moved mechanically among papers and sketches till she drew forth a small book with a white satin corner on which was traced a gilt composition. She opened the leaves. There was nothing within the book but names and dates. Slowly she counted them. Then she dipped her pen in violet ink and wrote below the last name a number, the date, and the Man's name. There was no smile on her face now. She turned back the leaves of the satin-covered book to the first name—the one that lead all the rest. And with a sob that seemed to tear her heart, her golden head fell on her arms, stretched across the desk.

"Then she dipped her pen."

New Bath-Chair Hansom Cab.

A new species of recreation has just made its appearance in Oxford, England. It takes the form of a kind of bath-chair hansom cab, being, indeed, nothing more than a very comfortable basket chair mounted upon two wheels, with ball bearings and rubber tires. This chair is fastened to the saddle pillar of a bicycle by means of a rigid shaft, with a ball socket at the head, so that neither the steering of the cycle nor the leaning over of the machine as it turns a curve is affected. No doubt the new conveyance will prove an excellent form of entertainment with which the undergraduate may provide his sisters or aunts when they visit Oxford. The cars are not inappropriately called "rickshas," and the labor is much lighter than might be expected for the coolie. Rather more hills than usual have to be walked, but the idea has such vast possibilities—for the purpose, say, of paying a round of afternoon calls, or conveying fair burdens to outlying districts of beauty and amusement—that "rickshas" are deserving of adoption in the country generally, where, indeed, they are beginning to be used, and in the London suburbs where traffic is not too heavy. They cannot possibly upset; they travel more smoothly and faster than a carriage, and are not in the least liable to run away.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss.

An American art student, confined to the care of a friend in Paris, arrived at his destination in the evening, and, meeting some difficulty in finding the address, was late in reaching the latter's apartments. After a long journey, being hungry as well as tired, he asked to be directed to the nearest restaurant, preferably to one of the many Duval establishments of which he had so often heard. His friend accompanied him to the Duval place of the neighborhood, reaching the door just as it was about to be closed. At that hour of the night there were no substantial viands to be had, except a certain ragout au quelquechose, which the young student accepted as Hobson's choice. To his satisfaction, he found his supper very appetizing, and, with a glass of good red wine, he enjoyed the meal heartily; the more as the charge, all told, was less than two francs. Well pleased with his first prandial experience in Paris, he expressed his gratification to his friend on the road home, asking incidentally: "By the way, what was that ragout—beef, or mutton, or what?" His feelings underwent a sudden revulsion as his friend replied: "Probably horse."—Chicago Journal.

Andrew Carnegie's New Office.

Andrew Carnegie's new office of lord rector of St. Andrew's university carries with it no emoluments and does not involve any renunciation of that American citizenship which he first acquired through his father's naturalization, and subsequently confirmed through his own acquisition of the necessary papers on attaining his majority. As lord rector he presides over the senate and governing body of the university and is essentially the representative of the students, since they alone elect him triennially, and professors and other members of the faculty having no voice whatsoever in the voting.

As a rule the election is carried out on political party lines and bitterly contested. But in this instance the election was unanimous, the entire body of students uniting to pay tribute to the munificence of the author of "Triumphant Democracy" toward the Scotch seats of learning.

Pawn Broking in Austria.

In Austria pawnbroking is in the hands of private persons, except in the capital, where the emperor, since the time of Joseph II., has been the pawnbroker-general. The imperial pawning office has lately experienced a complete transformation. Originally formed out of an ancient convent and adjoining church, it had long become far too small for the volume of business and has been razed and replaced by very fine offices, with spacious auction rooms. Henceforth the interest on loans will never exceed 10 per cent.

Looking for Cheap Labor.

Representatives of Hawaiian planters are in the Philippines to ascertain whether it is feasible to import farm laborers from the archipelago to Hawaii. The scheme is generally regarded as impracticable for the reason that the percentage of skilled agriculturists among the Filipinos is very small.

Keep Eggs Clean.

A government publication relating to the poultry interests, says: Occasionally a person is found who is habitually made ill by eating eggs just as there are those who cannot eat strawberries or other foods without distress. Such cases are due to some personal idiosyncrasy, showing that in reality "one man's meat is another man's poison." A satisfactory explanation of such idiosyncrasy seems to be lacking.

Overindulgence in eggs, as is the case with other foods, may induce indigestion or other bad effects. Furthermore, under certain conditions, eggs may be the cause of illness by communicating some bacterial disease or some parasite. It is possible for an egg to become infected with micro-organisms, either before it is laid or after. The shell is porous, and offers no greater resistance to micro-organisms which cause disease than it does to those which cause the egg to spoil or rot. When the infected egg is eaten raw, the micro-organisms, if present, are communicated to man and may cause disease. If an egg remains in a dirty nest, defiled with the micro-organisms which cause typhoid fever, carried there on the hen's feet or feathers, it is not strange if some of these bacteria occasionally penetrate the shell, and the egg thus becomes a possible source of infection. Perhaps one of the most common troubles due to bacterial infection of eggs is the more or less serious illness sometimes caused by eating those which are "stale." This often resembles ptomaine poisoning, which is caused not by micro-organisms themselves, but by the poisonous products which they elaborate from materials on which they grow.

Occasionally the eggs of worms, etc., have been found inside hens' eggs, as indeed have grains, seeds, etc. Such bodies were doubtless accidentally included while the white and shell were being added to the yolk in the egg gland of the fowl.

Judged by the comparatively small number of cases of infection or poisoning, due to eggs, reported in medical literature, the danger of disease from this source is not very great. However in view of its possibility, it is best to keep eggs as clean as possible and thus endeavor to prevent infection. Clean poultry houses, poultry runs and nests are important, and eggs should always be stored and marketed under sanitary conditions. The subject of handling food in a cleanly manner is too seldom thought of, and what is said of eggs in this connection applies to many other foods with even more force.

The Macaroni Wheats.

The macaroni wheats promise to be of great service to American farmers when a market has been found for them, either at home or abroad. As drouth resisters they are famous. No doubt exists among investigators that they will stand drouth and cold to a far greater extent than the softer American wheats. The varieties that have been tried under hard conditions in the West have given yields three and four times as great as have the ordinary wheats. This is doubtless due to the fact that they have been developed in parts of Europe and Asia where only grains of exceptional hardiness can be grown.

These wheats are used in Italy for the making of macaroni. No market at present exists for them in this country, for the reason that the macaroni factories here do not use macaroni wheat at all in their product, but use the ordinary American wheat. The macaroni wheats are so hard that they cannot be ground by the same machinery that grinds our common wheats. Therefore the mills do not want it. The owners of the mills claim they are not in the milling business from a philanthropic purpose and so are not inclined to spend money for new machinery just to help out western farmers.

Dirt Depreciates Wool.

From Farmers' Review: The greater part of Illinois wool comes in in saleable condition but some wools are chaffy. This condition comes, I suppose, from allowing sheep to run to the hay or straw stacks. I frequently get consignments of burry wool. Those are the principal defects, to which may be added weak staple, which comes from sickness of the sheep or want of care and feeding, especially in very cold weather. These defects reduce the value of wool from two to five cents a pound, according to the extent of the defect.—P. C. Porter, Chicago.

The turpentine industry in the South is being greatly injured by the wasteful methods employed. The pine forests have been annihilated recklessly. Professor Herty, of the University of Georgia, says that unless turpentine operators at an early date adopt a more conservative plan of gathering the product, the business will soon be a thing of the past.

Mme. Emma Eames, the opera singer, recently had a narrow escape from death or serious injury. They Were Duck Pants.

When Ed Gilmore, of the Academy of Music, and Col. Jones, of the Aquarium, meet at the Fifth Avenue hotel, there is always something doing.

"I see that Senator Stadler was out gunning the other day," said the colonel to Ed Gilmore, the other day.

"Yes?" said Gilmore. "Did he bag anything?"

"Bagged a pair of duck."

"You don't say so? Where'd he bag 'em?"

"At the knees," said Col. Jones. "They were duck pants."—New York Times.

Thomas B. Reed's Story.

A client recently asked Thomas B. Reed whether a jury could be relied upon to pronounce accurately as to the intentions of a man accused of crime. Said Mr. Reed:

"When I was a young man studying law, I was one day asked to give an illustration from Blackstone on that very point. I quoted the well known incident wherein the law, which prohibited the shedding of blood on the streets of London would not apply to the act of a surgeon bleeding a man who had a fit.

"The reply was satisfactory to the questioner, but a fellow student, celebrated for keen, intelligent exceptions, put in his oar at once.

"'The surgeon would be guiltless,' he admitted, 'but how about the fellow with the fit?'"—New York Times.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Before I knew of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I dreaded the approach of the time for my monthly period, as it would mean a couple of days in bed with intense pain and suffering. I was under the physicians care for over a year without any relief, when my attention was called to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by several of our Mormon women who had been cured through its use. I began its systematic use and improved gradually in health, and after the use of six bottles my health was completely restored, and for over two years I have had neither ache or pain. You have a truly wonderful remedy for women. Very sincerely yours, Mrs. Hulda Jakeman, Salt Lake City, Utah."

The Distinctive Value

of Syrup of Figs is due to its pleasant form and perfect freedom from every objectionable quality or substance and to the fact that it acts gently and truly as a laxative, without in any way disturbing the natural functions. The requisite knowledge of what a laxative should be and of the best means for its production enable the California Fig Syrup Co. to supply the general demand for a laxative, simple and wholesome in its nature and truly beneficial in its effects; a laxative which acts pleasantly and leaves the internal organs in a naturally healthy condition and which does not weaken them.

To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value and Syrup of Figs possesses this great advantage over all other remedies, that it does not weaken the organs on which it acts and, therefore it promotes a healthful condition of the bowels and assists one in forming regular habits. Among its many excellent qualities may be mentioned its perfect safety, in all cases requiring a laxative, even for the babe, or its mother, the maiden, or the wife, the invalid, or the robust man.

Syrup of Figs is well known to be a combination of the laxative principles of plants, which act most beneficially, with pleasant aromatic liquids and the juice of figs, agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system, when its gentle cleansing is desired. The quality of Syrup of Figs is due not only to the excellence of the combination, but also to the original method of manufacture which ensures perfect purity and uniformity of product and it is therefore all important, in buying, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

JAMES J. HILL to the GRAIN GROWERS

Mr. Hill's Speech Before the Grain Growers' Convention at Fargo, North Dakota.

Fargo, N. D., Special, Jan. 10.—This was Hill day in the Tri-state Grain and Stock Growers' convention. It was the final wind-up of a most successful four day's session, and the close was in the nature of an ovation to the president of the Great Northern railway and the recently organized Northern Securities company. Great interest was aroused in Mr. Hill's appearance here and had increased since his original announcement. Each day since the convention started had augmented the attendance, and to-day was the banner one of the meeting.

Mayor Johnson introduced President Hill in a complimentary eulogistic speech, as the man the audience had come to hear. His reference to the liberality of Mr. Hill in providing free excursions for North Dakota farmers to the North Dakota agricultural college brought forth a lot of applause. When President Hill arose to speak there was another ovation. He said:

Mr. Hill's Speech.

I want to present to you to-day some important figures which I think will establish many facts that are of great interest to all the people of this country, and more especially to the people of the Northwest.

An advance in the material prosperity of our country has always marked an improvement in the condition of the people. Every United States census from 1790 to 1900 shows an average growth which has practically doubled the population of the country about every thirty years. At the close of the Civil war this country contained, say 31,000,000 of people; since that time we have added fully 40,000,000 of people. At the average rate of the increase of the past one hundred years we should have at least 150,000,000 of people by 1930. The present increase is more than one and a half millions annually.

The all-important question presenting itself to every individual and to every community is: Where will they go and what will they do to secure for themselves comfortable homes and the ability to educate their children and to bring them up in such manner as will make them good, useful citizens of the republic?

At the close of the war a large portion of the States of Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota were government lands, open for homesteads, and practically all the country west of these states to the Pacific ocean was open to settlement. The census reports show that a large portion of the increased population has gone into this new country and built up cities and states, opened up prosperous farming communities and dotted the land with schools and churches—every evidence of American Enterprise and Progress.

Nearly one-half of the capital of the country is invested in agricultural land and what goes with it for the purpose of making it productive. Nearly one-half of the population of the country is directly or indirectly connected with the cultivation of the soil, and if we judge from all the experience of the past, the agricultural half of the population has done more than its share in everything that goes to benefit the country as a whole; that half has always shown itself more intelligent, more patriotic, and in every way the sheet-anchor of the nation. When men have been called to defend the flag of our country the farmers' sons have always been ready to step to the front and answer to the call. While the farmers are ready to go ten miles on election day to cast their votes, others hang around the polls in the cities waiting to sell their votes. From the farmers' sons in New England and the Middle and Western states are constantly recruited the numbers of those who engage in the professions and the various walks of business, and their individual successes clearly establish their right to be placed in the front rank wherever they have been called. My observation leads me to believe that the nation at large has more to expect from those who cultivate the soil than from all others combined.

The largest area of unoccupied land where green trees and green grass grows, and where clear water runs, lies in the zone between Lake Superior and the Pacific ocean, and to the settlement and development of this country we must look for the increase of our traffic and the future value of our investment in railways.

How are we to provide homes for our

Rapidly Increasing Population?

Most of the lands that will produce crops every year and are susceptible of cultivation are already occupied. The important question to-day before the statesmen of the nation is: How can the remaining lands best be made to furnish homes for the rapidly crowding population? A little reflection will show every individual man that it is only by the wisest action on the part of the general government by well-matured plans for irrigation and every other means which will make available every portion of the country that is or can be made susceptible of cultivation. There is a movement among a few of our statesmen to secure this end. In some localities in the West this movement is opposed by cattle and sheepmen who desire to retain these lands for their own purposes. In some cases an effort is being made to induce congress to convey the lands to the several states, to be disposed of by them. This latter movement can only end in failure. The lands would be frittered away or practically given away or appropriated without benefiting any considerable number of people. I consider the future welfare of the country depends more upon the wise disposition of the public domain, so as to secure homes for the people, than upon any other single condition in our nation. Our country is large; our population and occupations differ as widely as the climate and natural conditions differ. Every congress shows an active effort being made to secure some advantage to some local district, overlooking, as I think, the broad general fact that the nation should and must prosper as a whole.

In 1896 this country settled the question of a gold standard; the universal want of confidence prior to that time came to an end, people who had money to invest were no longer afraid that if they put out a 100-cent dollar they would be compelled to take a 50-cent dollar in return, and now the business of the country is marching forward at a rate greater than has ever been known in our history or in the history of the world. Our attention is frequently called to the enormous balance of trade in our favor; in other words, the amount of money we receive for what we sell is above that which we pay for what we buy, thus making our country rich beyond all precedent. If we carefully inquire into the source from which this enormous balance of trade comes, we find that about three-fourths of our exports are furnished directly and indirectly from the cultivation of the land; the farmers have done the work and have benefited the nation. Now let us consider what the nation has done in return for the farmers, or what it can do in their behalf. The first and great object is to provide them means to sell the product of their land and their labor, at the

Highest Possible Prices

it will bring. I will ask you to look over the statute books of the nation and the different states, and find, if you can, any intelligent step that has been taken to find new markets for our agricultural exports. I have examined these records carefully and up to the present time I do not find one intelligent sentence or line the object of which has been to find new markets for the products of the land, except as to Southern sugar and rice, and some wool. In order to advance the price of every commodity the first step is to increase the demand for it, as long as there is a surplus in the market seeking a buyer the price must remain low, and whenever there is a shortage and the demand is greater than the supply it follows that prices must advance. Great Britain buys about 70 per cent of all our exports. She is our one great customer, and the single nation that does not in her markets or through her tariffs discriminate against the product of our soil. In order to buy from us she must be able to sell her own products and get the wherewith to pay for her purchases. England and Germany seek for markets over all the world; they are nations of merchants, and their ships go to all parts of the earth where a harbor can be found and trade relations established. During the past ten or fifteen years our consular service has been greatly improved, and is now furnishing valuable information as to the conditions under which might be extended, but our consular agents are comparatively few and their action in that regard limited.

Twenty years ago the foreign trade of Japan was not to exceed $1 per capita of its population; to-day this trade is equal to $6 or $7 per capita of its population. Twenty years ago it amounted to about $40,000,000 and to-day it amounts to about $250,000,000, of which the United States' share is less than one-fifth. The total foreign trade of China in 1890 was about 75 cents per capita; should it increase in the next twenty years in the proportion of one-half that the trade of Japan has increased in the past twenty years the foreign trade of China would amount to $1,200,000,000. The Chinese race is a commercial race. Their merchants in point of commercial ability and integrity will rank with those of any other nation. The Russian-Siberian line will soon extend through Siberia to Manchuria and Port Arthur, an open port all the year round. This will give Russia an opportunity to distribute more of her products in China and will place her in a strong position. The treaty between China and Japan at the close of the Japanese war secured to Japan the right to trade in China and to make use of ports and rivers and provide facilities for that purpose. Under the most favored nation clause in the treaty, each nation has the same privilege, as respects trade relations, as is secured by Japan by its treaty.

> If we are to enjoy a fair share of the benefits of the development of Oriental trade it must come from finding a market for the necessities of life, nearly all of which come from the farms.

The farm bears a relation to the market, and a vital point of national prosperity and a happy social condition will be in proportion to our success in securing our share of this trade. In the Orient men get from 10 to 30 cents per day; they cannot buy luxuries; their wants are restricted to the mere necessities of life—food and clothing. A few years ago I sent a man to China and Japan, keeping him there a year, to find out and report upon the commercial conditions of those countries and to learn what was necessary for this country to do in order to create a new market for our rapidly increasing products which were being sent to Europe and sold, not to the highest, but I might say to the lowest bidder, because of the surplus we had to sell. During the past six years the flour trade of the Orient has grown to fifteen or twenty millions bushels of wheat per annum, and if there was a supply of cheap ocean transportation, this amount could, in my judgment, be very much increased. If we could take twenty-five or thirty million bushels a year out of the surplus that is sent to Europe, it would nearly offset the average exports of Argentina. If the new order of things following the recent war in China is to secure a stable government and protection for life and property, the development of China cannot fail to be very great, and I see no reason why it may not be as great as that of Japan. In that case we would be called on to furnish one-half of our entire surplus grain, taking this amount out of the European markets and greatly advancing the price of every bushel exported from this country.

A few years ago some very intelligent Japanese gentlemen were in my office and I asked them why they did not use American cotton to mix with the short staple cotton from India. They did not seem to know that our cotton was so much superior to that which they were in the habit of using. I told them if they would try a few carloads of our cotton, and if they did not find it to their advantage to use it I would pay the cost of the cotton. They ordered a few carloads; the result has been that we have not been able to find transportation to supply the Oriental demand for American cotton from that time to this. During the months of September, October and November just passed, we shipped about sixty thousand bales of cotton to the Orient. This was all we could find ship-room to carry; the amount could have been doubled had the ship-room been available. During this time other roads have also carried their share of cotton to the Far East and their experience has been practically the same as our own.

> Five years ago land in the Red river valley and in North Dakota was selling at from $3 to $20 per acre; to-day the demand for these lands have made them worth from $10 to $50 per acre.

As we have extended our railway lines throughout the Northwest our first object has been to settle up the country along these lines. A comparison of the census reports of 1890 and 1900 shows that in Minnesota in forty-three counties reached by our lines there has been an increase of 289,000 people, in North Dakota in twenty counties over 80,000 people. In fifteen of the counties in North Dakota most depending upon the Great Northern for their railway service I find that the vacant land in 1893 was 9,356,000 acres; in 1901, 4,300,000 acres, showing that in the eight years there had been settled upon in fifteen counties on the lines of the Great Northern road 5,050,000 acres. In Montana the increase in counties on the line of the Great Northern was about 70,000 people and in Washington 110,000 people. This year the indications are that the influx of new people will be greater than at any previous time in the history of the country. More people will come in to make their homes with you and help you as neighbors and fellow workers in the development of your state than ever before.

> At the present time we hear much about the "community of interests" between the railroads. I want to say to you here and now that the only community of interests that there is or ever can exist is the community of interests between the producer of tonnage and the carrier; the man on the farm, in the forest and in the mine must be able at all times to sell the products of his labor and his lands at a profit, or he will cease to labor and have nothing to sell.

The railroads depend for their existence on the products of the lands served by their lines; it has no other source of income. Individuals may come and go, we will all sooner or later pass from active life, but the land—the country—its resources and the railroads will be here permanently, and they will either prosper together or be poor together. There is no other community of interests that can ever exist against this one. While it is necessary for the railroads that the farmers, the lumbermen and the miners shall be prosperous, it is also necessary that the railroads should prosper.

> Much is being said about the combination between railroads, and that the country for its prosperity must rely upon a continuance of competition. The law of the survival of the fittest must inevitably end such competition as exists by the destruction of the weaker by the stronger.

This has already been done in the East to the extent that throughout all of New England the hundreds of original railway corporations are now mostly consolidated into three or four, and the people are better off than ever before. Twenty-five years ago it was supposed that competition was necessary to reduce rates. I think we have shown in the Northwest that, without competition, rates have been reduced faster than anywhere else in this country.

> To-day the farmers can ship their grain from the Red river valley to the Twin Cities and the Head of the Lakes at from 15 to 20 per cent lower rates than farmers living in the Des Moines valley and Western Iowa, where there are many lines, can ship to Chicago, the same distance.

The effect of this has been to bring thousands of farmers from the Middle Western states, including Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois to find homes in Minnesota and North Dakota. This, more than anything else, has doubled the price of your lands in a comparatively few years. We have about twelve hundred miles of railway in North Dakota. The average cost of our railway, including terminals, equipment, shops, elevators, etc., is about thirty-five thousand dollars per mile, as shown by its capitalization. In the fifteen counties depending almost entirely for their transportation upon the Great Northern railway, there are, in round numbers, sixteen million acres of land. If the building of the railway and what has followed it has added $10 per acre to the value of this land it is worth $160,000,000 more than it would have been without the railway, and you have the benefit of this advance. I am glad that it is yours and hope it will enable you to enjoy your old age in comfort and to make those who follow after you good, and worthy citizens of your state.

> There has recently been an attempt to show that we have no interest in building up the prosperity of the people of your state and of the Northwest. If we did not do everything in our power to build you up we would be false to our best interests. Our object in acquiring the Burlington, jointly with the Northern Pacific railway, was to insure an outlet to the best markets for the grain, live stock and lumber of the Northern lines, and to increase the volume of our traffic, to the end that we might at all times be able to establish the lowest rates and most favorable conditions under which the traffic must be carried.

The Burlington, with its own rails reaches Chicago, Peoria, Rock Island, Davenport, Quincy, Alton, Hannibal, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha and Denver, and then connects with the main arteries of traffic of the whole country.

Assuming that the line of the Burlington had not been constructed and that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific jointly had raised the money and were engaged in the construction of it, would there be anything to meet the disapproval of the states traversed by the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific? On the contrary, would not such a course have been hailed with approval as a means of opening up markets for Northwestern produce and of reaching markets in the South and Southwest and of securing business, increasing the volume of traffic of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, thus making reduction of rates and adding to the general prosperity of the Northwest? Instead of building the Burlington system or a line of railway alongside of it, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific purchased the capital stock of a line already constructed. Instead of issuing stock or bonds for the purpose of raising money to build a line reaching the same country bonds were issued to purchase the stock of a constructed line.

Convincing Reasons.

The capital stock of railway companies, as of other corporations, will be held by somebody and somewhere. Railway companies as carriers are subject to supervision and control by the public for the purpose of insuring the performance of their obligations to the public. Railroads make public through published rates the price charged for transportation, the only thing they have to sell, and must report the amount they receive for what they sell and what has been done with it. Courts are open for the purpose of determining whether railway companies as carriers observe their obligations to the public. The question of the reasonableness of rates and service does not depend upon whether one man owns the capital stock of a railway or another—whether the capital stock is owned by ten men or one thousand, by persons or by corporations. The capital stock of a railway company is personal property, to be sold, transferred from one man to another, and any one may purchase and hold all that he desires to buy and pay for. The capital stock of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern will be held by somebody—persons or corporations, if not by the present owners, by other owners. Suppose by death of present owners the stock should be scattered and a majority of it find its way into the hands of those interested in competing lines serving the country to the north or to the south of the territory served by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. Would the people along the lines of those railways be benefited? If the present owners of a majority of the stock of the two companies could be compelled to sell it or dispose of it on the market, would it fall into hands more interested in the development and prosperity of the Northwest than its present owners? How is it that the lines have been extended and improved? What brought about the present condition of the property of the two companies? What has enabled them to serve the people along the lines as they have been served? Plainly the willingness and ability of those controlling large interests in the stock of the companies, who found it to their advantage to build up the lines and promote the settlement of the territory tributary to it and who will continue it.

Broad-Gauge Competition.

The great freight producing area of the country is along the Atlantic seaboard and in the territory south of Lake Erie. The freight that is the product of all the manufacturing enterprises which find a market west of the Mississippi river to a large extent must pass through the lakes to Duluth and to St. Paul and Minneapolis and into the territory between these cities and the Pacific, or around Lake Michigan and at that point going largely to Southwestern lines. The question of stock ownership, so far as the public along the lines served by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific is concerned, is to be considered in the light of a great competitive condition between the territory served by the Northern lines and those of the South and West—between lines whose interest it is to secure traffic as against the Northern lines, to populate and build up the country in which the people along the Northern lines have no special immediate interest.

A few years ago the transportation on Lake Superior was mainly in the hands of what was known as the Lake Superior Transit company, a pool line made up by steamers operated by Eastern trunk lines, who also operated boats running from Chicago, and whenever we reduced the rates from the wheat fields to Lake Superior a corresponding advance in the water rate was made to offset our reduction on land and equalize the rate by Lake Superior and by Chicago. We built six steel steamers, which at that time were the largest on the lakes. The first cargo we landed at Buffalo we were told that it would have to pay the local rate from Buffalo to New York, which was practically the same as the through rate from Duluth to New York. We found a way to get around this, and the result was to break up the Transit company and break down the rates on the lakes to a reasonable figure. Later the elevator charges at the head of Lake Superior were 1½ cents per bushel, and at Buffalo 1¼ cents per bushel, with an additional charge for shoveling of ¼ cent. We built large elevators at both places, the effect of which has been to reduce the rates to ½ cent each in Buffalo and at the head of Lake Superior; in other words, where the grain paid 2¾ cents per bushel it is now paying 1 cent. The difference to the Northwest on the 200,000,000 bushels of wheat is $3,500,000 per year. The proportion of this we handle through our elevators is probably 15 per cent. We did not build the elevators for the purpose of grinding the faces off the farmers of the Northwest, but in order that they might have fair play and that their grain might go forward without undue and unnecessary taxation. I say this to show you that we are at all times mindful of everything that will add to your material prosperity.

> In 1880 the average rates on grain from the Red river valley to Duluth were from 25 cents to 35 cents per hundred, to-day they are from 14 cents to 16 cents per hundred, or about one-half the rates of twenty years ago. The rates on coal and lumber have been reduced in the same proportion.

Reductions in rates of transportation must be made with the greatest care in order to avoid unfair discrimination against persons or localities. A reduction in the rates of the whole country of 10 cents for moving a ton of freight 100 miles would make a reduction of over $150,000,000 on the traffic handled during the past year, and would wipe out a large part of the income of the railroads.

General Railroad Conditions.

The conditions of the general railroad situation in the United States at the present time are hardly understood: For the year ending June 30, 1890, the number of tons carried one mile by all the railroads was 76,207,000,000 ton miles; in 1900 it was 141,600,000,000 as shown by the Interstate commerce commission reports. In 1901 a safe estimate will bring this to 185,000,000,000 tons carried one mile, an increase of 120 per cent in eleven years. During this time the mileage of the railroads in the United States increased 18 per cent. While the tons moved shows an increase of 120 per cent, the earnings show an increase of less than 40 per cent. During this time the rates have been reduced to the extent of that difference. During that period of eleven years, notwithstanding the enormous increase in traffic, four of the so-called trunk lines have through destructive competition failed, and been reorganized, and all but one of them have been absorbed by the stronger surviving lines. Destructive competition has forced the weakest lines into bankruptcy, and to-day they are owned by the lines that were able to maintain their position and credit, giving the ability to acquire these bankrupt roads. The Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania for half a century have been rival roads. Both states and cities have actively aided in building them up. Destructive competition between them has finally resulted in the Pennsylvania road owning the Baltimore & Ohio. Have the rates advanced? Have the people along the line of the Baltimore & Ohio suffered? On the contrary, the first step has been to furnish money to cut down the grades, to double track the line from the Ohio river to Chicago and to furnish cars and terminal facilities to handle the business to the best advantage, and at such rates as will enable the shippers along the line to open up their mines and increase their business in every branch of trade, and to rely upon the solvent company for the facilities necessary to transact their business.

Hardly a day passes without a railroad accident, many of which are attended with much loss of life. What is the cause? In an effort to handle the business of the public trains are run in such numbers and at a rate of speed which is entirely beyond the capacity of the roads—to-day there is an absolute blockade of traffic between Chicago and the Mississippi river points in the West and the Atlantic seaboard. Furnaces within a short distance of the coke ovens are cold and thousands of men are idle for want of transportation. There is a coal famine from Pittsburg to Denver. People say it is due to shortage of cars. Ten years ago, with a ton mile movement of seventy-six billions, the average freight car movement was about thirty miles per day; at this time it is not more than twenty miles per day. It is not more cars that is wanted, but more movement of the cars now in use. Freight trains move certainly an average of sixteen miles an hour while on the road. Twenty miles car movement daily means that the cars move one hour and a quarter out of the twenty-four hours.

> No business in the world can thrive under conditions when it can use its facilities for earning money less than one hour out of the twelve.

When many of the roads were built capital was scarce and high. A very large proportion of the original railway enterprises failed, losing a large part of the investment—they had no idea of the future growth, and from want of money and want of forethought the terminal facilities are to-day totally inadequate. If the cars could be moved at the principal terminals the main lines would be able to do better than at present. However, with a continuance for three or five years of the present volume of traffic between the East and West added to industrial traffic in the great manufacturing districts, this country will find itself confronted with the most serious commercial question it has yet been called upon to solve. Terminals in the larger Eastern cities are both difficult and expensive to acquire. The Pennsylvania railway, in order to get into New York, onto Manhattan island, is building a tunnel from Jersey City to Brooklyn at a cost of forty or fifty million dollars. Will it bring new business or must the expense of operation and interest on cost be levied on present traffic?

A careful examination of the railway problem from a national standpoint will, I believe, show beyond question that the business of the country has outgrown the facilities on most of the trunk lines and that new facilities not now apparent will be necessary to relieve the situation. Rates in the United States are much lower than in any other country. Wages are higher—the cost of most of the material is higher than in Europe, still the average rate charged in Europe is fully twice as high as in America. The conditions in this country change very rapidly—while rates have been cut in two in twenty years all kinds of labor and material used by railways have advanced from 30 to 50 per cent. Nothing but the increased volume of traffic has made it possible to reduce rates as they have been reduced. To-day we find the volume of traffic so great east of Chicago that the railways are not able to move it under the present conditions. How will these conditions be changed and at whose cost? Who will build new lines or increase old ones? These are the questions which I will not undertake to answer farther than to say that the West must have the facilities or suffer for the want of them.

> The public must always bear in mind that a bankrupt road cannot furnish good service. The railroad must be able to furnish the service demanded from it at fair and reasonable rates. The problem we have had to solve has been how to reduce the cost of operation so that we can furnish transportation at the lowest prices.

This can be done only by increasing the volume of traffic. The question is as simple as raising a given amount of money by taxation. The more dollars' worth of property taxed the lower the rate of taxation will be, and the greater number of tons carried the lower the rate of transportation will be. This is one of the main reasons why we are so anxious to develop the enormous through business that is rapidly growing up along our lines. Every ton of new business that we bring contributes its proportion of net revenue and enables us to reduce the rate of transportation on our local business. The interstate business on our lines in North Dakota to-day constitutes 65 per cent of the whole and still you enjoy all the facilities furnished, both passenger and freight, with the increased number of trains necessary to handle this business, every one of which is an additional accommodation to you.

It will be thirty-two years next March since I first saw the Red River Valley. At that time there was not a single house on the west side of the Red river from the Bois de Sioux to Pembina. During the past twenty years all of my time and effort has been given to building up the Northwest and no part of the Northwest has given me more satisfaction or is giving me more satisfaction to-day than North Dakota. Its growth in the past has been marvelous. The first years in all new countries are marked by hardship and self-denial, but during the past few years you are getting the reward of your labor; people are coming into the state by thousands, the value of your land has advanced and will advance beyond your reasonable expectations and I hope that together your property and our property will work side by side and shoulder to shoulder to carry forward the best interests of North Dakota. No man, no hundred men in your state, represent the same interest in your welfare that it is my good fortune to represent and I hope in the future that with better methods of cultivation and more knowledge of what is required, your condition may be constantly improved and if your condition is improved, ours will certainly share it with you. As the volume of traffic increases our rates will be reduced.

> Remember that whatever helps you helps the railroad, and whatever hurts or restricts your growth restricts the growth of the railroad serving you. We will always prosper together or be poor together.

Annoyances of the President's Life.

Among the annoyances of a president's life are the intrusions of well-intentioned people upon his private and personal affairs. He is the common property of the nation. He has no home, or as little of one as the public is compelled to leave him; he is worse off than any private citizen in the country in this respect, for when he or his wife asks some friends to call on them on a certain day of the week persons who are not asked, and who do not know them, accept the invitation which was not given them and go also. Not so annoying, perhaps, are the people who open upon the president as teachers of morality. They have no delicacy; they rush in where they are not asked; and they insist that now the president is in the White House he shall conform his life to theirs, shall live as they think is right, and is a monster of iniquity if he does not accept their tutelage. There is not a president who has escaped them, and there never will be until we have a score or so of presidents, each of whom will not heed them, who will not answer their letters, who will insist on having his own habits, and on living according to his own light and not according to the light of another. We have recently had a temperance president who has been called a drunkard because some one said he saw him drink a glass of champagne at dinner. Denials of the truth of the statement merely whetted the appetite for objurgation. And now we have another president, a very abstemious man, who receives letters nearly every day whose writers express the regret that we have a "wine-bibber" in the White House. These letters, we are told, are not answered, but a reply was sent to the woman who reminded the president of the commandment, "Six days shalt thou labor," and then lectured him for Sabbath-breaking. The reply was written by Secretary Cortelyou, and was this:

"I am directed by the president to say that he goes to church on Sunday morning, and takes his wife and children into the country Sunday afternoon.

News of the Northwest

VIEW OF NORTH DAKOTA.

Resolutions Endorsing J. J. Hill's Railroad Operations.

Fargo, N. D.—At the North Dakota Grain Growers' convention at Fargo, on the 10th inst., a series of resolutions were adopted which concluded as follows:

It is the sense of this meeting that, in resisting the attempts of the Union Pacific road and its allies, on the one hand, and the Canadian Pacific railroad and its feeders on the other, to secure control of the Northern Pacific railroad, James J. Hill has performed a notable public service, and once more displayed the far-sighted and business-like policy that has characterized his long career as the great developer of Northwestern resources and the most watchful guardian of Northwestern interests.

Mr. Hill built a great transcontinental road through a wilderness, that has grown, through his efforts, into the richest empire on earth, and never asked a bonus or subsidy. He has connected that railroad at one end with a fleet of vessels that carry American products to the Orient, and bring back the trade of the Orient to the Northwest, and to the whole nation, and at the other end with shipping facilities by water to the Atlantic seaboard—all of this, too, without a dollar of bonus or the semblance of a subsidy. Trusting to the resources of the country for the traffic to justify extension, he has entered every section that needed transportation facilities, and constructed, often at a loss to himself, lines into sparsely-settled and unproductive communities. During all the years of railroad building, there has been a regular, marked reduction of freight tariffs, according as the volume of traffic increased and warranted it, and a uniform disposition to make temporary sacrifices for the permanent improvement of the country.

In view of this record, and in recognition of the honorable and upright course of James J. Hill in his dealings with the farmers of the Northwest, we congratulate the country upon his success in preventing the absorption of the Northern Pacific by Union Pacific interests, on the one hand, and the Canadian Pacific manipulators on the other, and express our confidence in the purpose and ability of Mr. Hill to give to the States of Minnesota and North and South Dakota, the best and cheapest transportation facilities to be had by the people of any section of the nation.

Two years ago Mr. Hill came to our convention and gave us some good points on diversified farming and other matters of interest to the farmers of the Northwest, and stated that he would furnish free transportation to delegations of farmers from the different counties of the state to visit the agricultural college and state farm, which offer many farmers have accepted, to their great satisfaction and benefit.

He also stated that he expected to build some large steam vessels, costing a number of millions of dollars, to put on the Pacific ocean trade from this country to the Orient. We notice by the daily press that this statement is being fulfilled, and it will make a new market for the farmers of the Northwest, to their benefit.

WAS ONCE MAID FOR VICTORIA.

Racine Woman, Now Too Old to Work, Finds Refuge in Hospital.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 13.—Miss Mary Harrison, seventy-four years old, who has no friends or money, has found a home at St. Mary's hospital, where she has been the past five years. Miss Harrison claims that when a young woman she was a servant in the household of Queen Victoria. During that time she became engaged to marry a young man. The engagement was broken and she came to America and never married. Five years ago she became too old to work.

Died in a Smelter.

Rapid City, S. D., Jan. 13.—James J. Donahue died suddenly at the new smelter building here Thursday evening. He was found several minutes afterward lying face downward, having evidently fallen forward. There were several slight cuts on the face, but the coroner's jury investigated the case carefully and concluded that death was caused by heart disease. Donahue came from Springfield, Mass., three weeks ago and was assisting in the erection of the steel structure for the smelter.

Children Forced to Steal.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Jan. 13.—The members of thirteen families are under arrest here, charged with the wholesale theft of coal from the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul chutes at Ottumwa Junction. An average of thirty tons a week has been stolen, and it is claimed that wagons and horses had been purchased for the purpose of hauling the stolen coal and that the children of the families were compelled to commit the thefts.

Forsythe, Mont., Jan. 13.—Charles Straw, who arrived in Forsythe yesterday from Cheyenne agency at Lame Deer, says Friday was issue day for the Indians, and appeared at the post excepting two or three, who, their companions claimed, were hunting and had lost horses in the hills. Everything is quiet at present and no more trouble is feared.

AN EXTRA SESSION

GOV. VAN SANT ISSUES FORMAL CALL FOR MEETING OF LEGISLATURE.

WILL COME TOGETHER FEB. 4

TO CONSIDER REPORT OF TAX COMMISSION AND REVISE TAXATION LAWS.

MAY ALSO TACKLE THE MERGER

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE WILL SUM UP THE RAILROAD SITUATION.

St. Paul, Jan. 13.—Gov. Van Sant Saturday issued a formal call for a special session of the legislature on Feb 4 to consider the report of the tax commission and to revise the law governing taxation. The call is in accordance with an agreement whereby the legislature cut short its extra session of last winter. The early date of the extra session is necessary because the proposed tax law changes the time of beginning an assessment. The assessor, under the bill submitted by the tax commission, will begin his work April 1 instead of May 1, as formerly. The governor deemed it expedient to call the session as soon as possible, in order that the proposed tax laws may take effect before the next assessment is made.

Gov. Van Sant declined to discuss the scope of the work that has been mapped out for the special session. As soon as the call was issued he began the work of preparing his message to the legislature. The message will deal not alone with the work of the tax commission and the necessity of doing away with the present system, but it will sum up the railroad situation in the state and the railway merger. The governor suggests that his call includes only the matters that are most important to the state, yet it will be possible for the legislature to pass upon a great many things.

TORTURE BY RED DEVILS.

Sacrifice of a Medicine Man at Hands of a Band of Yuma Indians.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 13.—Padre, a big medicine man of the Yuma Indians who lives on a reservation near Yuma, Ariz., has been offered as a sacrifice to the spirit in accordance with their customs, and has expiated the sins of the tribe which are held responsible for the epidemic of smallpox. The medicine man suspected the intentions of the Indians several days ago and fled to the mountains, but in a half-starved condition wandered back to the Indian village and pleaded for mercy. He was promptly bound hand and foot and conveyed by a delegation of Indians to Mexico, where he was bound to a tree and cruelly tortured to death. Padre had a warm place in the hearts of his tribesmen, but their customs required them to make a heavy sacrifice.

BAYKINAHWAUNH DIES.

Old Warrior of White Earth Who Desired Modern Growth.

White Earth, Minn., Jan. 13.—Baykinahwaunh, a well known chief among the White Earth Chippewa Indians, and one of a few remaining early day warriors, died Saturday morning, aged seventy years. He was among the first to remove to the White Earth reservation when it was first set aside for the Chippewas. He was an earnest advocate of education and cherished constant interest in all movements looking to the elevation of his race.

AGED KANSAN IS MURDERED.

John Booth Killed With Ax at Ottawa and Body Thrown Into Well.

Ottawa, Kan., Jan. 13.—John Booth, an old man, was robbed and murdered and his body thrown into a well on the premises of Mrs. McCoy, a block from her home. A bloody axe was found near the well, and stains were found on the kitchen door of the McCoy house. Mrs. McCoy and a daughter were arrested. The Kansas City authorities have been notified to arrest another daughter, who is believed to have left for that city on an early train.

MANGLED BY BLAST.

One Man Killed and Severals Others Hurt by Dynamite.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 13.—James Burgess was killed and two companions were injured by the explosion of a blast in the mines of the Webster County Coal and Land company at Lehigh. The men had placed the blast, which did not explode at once, and they started forward to ascertain the trouble, reaching it just as the explosion occurred. Burgess' body was badly mangled, but the others were not seriously injured.

IOWA SALOON MEN ENJOINED.

Personal Injunctions Issued Against Ottumwa Liquor Dealers.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Jan. 13.—Personal injunctions were issued from the district court here against five of the thirty-six saloonkeepers against whom proceedings were recently commenced by the local anti-saloon league, restraining them from in any manner disobeying the mulct law. Plans for like decrees in other cases are under consideration.

VOLUME XXI. ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1902. NUMBER 26.

JAMES J. HILL to the GRAIN GROWERS

Mr. Hill's Speech Before the Grain Growers' Convention at Fargo, North Dakota.

Fargo, N. D., Special, Jan. 10.—This was Hill day in the Tri-state Grain and Stock Growers' convention. It was the final wind-up of a most successful four day's session, and the close was in the nature of an ovation to the president of the Great Northern railway and the recently organized Northern Securities company. Great interest was aroused in Mr. Hill's appearance here and had increased since its original announcement. Each day since the convention started had augmented the attendance, and to-day was the banner one of the meeting.

Mayor Johnson introduced President Hill in a complimentary eulogistic speech, as the man the audience had come to hear. His reference to the liberality of Mr. Hill in providing free excursions for North Dakota farmers to the North Dakota agricultural college brought forth a lot of applause. When President Hill arose to speak there was another ovation. He said:

Mr. Hill's Speech.

I want to present to you to-day some important figures which I think will establish many facts that are of great interest to all the people of this country, and more especially to the people of the Northwest.

An advance in the material prosperity of our country has always marked an improvement in the condition of the people. Every United States census from 1790 to 1900 shows an average growth which has practically doubled the population of the country about every thirty years. At the close of the Civil war this country contained, say 31,000,000 of people; since that time we have added fully 46,000,000 of people. At the average rate of the increase of the past one hundred years we should have at least 170,000,000 of people by 1950. The present increase is more than one and a half millions annually.

The all-important question presenting itself to every individual and to every community is: Where will they go and what will they do to secure for themselves comfortable homes and the ability to educate their children and to bring them up in such manner as will make them good, useful citizens of the republic?

At the close of the war a large portion of the States of Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota were government lands, open for homesteads, and practically all the country west of these states to the Pacific ocean was open to settlement. The census reports show that a large portion of the increased population has gone into this new country and built up cities and states, opened up prosperous farming communities and dotted the land with schools and churches—every evidence of American Enterprise and Progress.

Nearly one-half of the capital of the country is invested in agricultural land and what goes with it for the purpose of making it productive. Nearly one-half of the population of the country is directly or indirectly connected with the cultivation of the soil, and if we judge from all the experience of the past the agricultural half of the population has done more than its share in everything that goes to benefit the country as a whole; that half has [illegible] more intelligent, more patriotic, and in every way the [illegible] of the nation. When need has been called to defend the flag of our country the farmers' sons have always been ready to step to the front and answer to the call. While the farmers are ready to go ten miles on election day to cast their votes, others hang around the polls in the cities waiting to sell their votes. From the farmers' sons in New England and the Middle and Western states are constantly recruited the numbers of those who engage in the professions and the various walks of business, and their individual successes clearly establish their right to be placed in the front rank wherever they have been called. My observation leads me to believe that the nation at large has more to expect from those who cultivate the soil than from all others combined.

The largest area of unoccupied land where green trees and green grass grows, and where clear water runs lies in the zone between Lake Superior and the Pacific ocean, and in the settlement and development of this country we must look for the increase of our traffic and the future value of our investment in railways.

How are we to provide homes for our

Rapidly Increasing Population?

Most of the lands that will produce crops every year and are susceptible of cultivation are already occupied. The important question to-day before the statesmen of the nation is: How can the remaining lands best be made to furnish homes for the rapidly crowding population? A little reflection will show every individual man that it is only by the wisest action on the part of the general government in well-matured plans for irrigation and every other means which will make available every portion of the country that is or can be made susceptible of cultivation. There is a movement among a few of our statesmen to secure this end. In some localities in the West this movement is opposed by cattle and sheepmen who desire to retain these lands for their own purposes. In some cases an effort is being made to induce congress to convey the lands to the several states, to be disposed of by them. This latter movement can only end in failure. The lands would be frittered away or practically given away or appropriated without benefiting any considerable number of people. I consider the future welfare of the country depends more upon the wise disposition of the public domain, so as to secure homes for the people, than upon any other single condition in our nation. Our country is large, our population and occupations differ as widely as the climate and natural conditions differ. Every congress shows an active effort being made to secure some advantage to some local district, overlooking, as I think, the broad general fact that the nation should and must prosper as a whole.

In 1896 this country settled the question of a gold standard; the universal want of confidence prior to that time came to an end; people who had money to invest were no longer afraid that if they put out a 100-cent dollar they would be compelled to take a 50-cent dollar in return, and now the business of the country is marching forward at a rate greater than has ever been known in our history or in the history of the world. Our attention is frequently called to the enormous balance of trade in our favor; in other words, the amount of money we receive for what we sell is above that which we pay for what we buy, thus making our country rich beyond all precedent. If we carefully inquire into the source from which this enormous balance of trade comes, we find that about three-fourths of our exports are furnished directly and indirectly from the cultivation of the land; the farmers have done the work and have benefited the nation. Now let us consider what the nation has done in return for the farmers, or what it can do in their behalf. The first and great object is to provide them means to sell the product of their land and their labor, at the

it will bring. I will ask you to look over the statute books of the nation and the different states, and find, if you can, any intelligent step that has been taken to find new markets for our agricultural exports. I have examined these records carefully and up to the present time I do not find one intelligent sentence or line the object of which has been to find new markets for the products of the land, except as to Southern sugar and rice, and some wool. In order to advance the price of every commodity the first step is to increase the demand for it; as long as there is a surplus in the market seeking a buyer the price must remain low, and whenever there is a shortage and the demand is greater than the supply it follows that prices must advance. Great Britain buys about 70 per cent of all our exports. She is our one great customer, and the single nation that does not in her markets or through her tariffs discriminate against the product of our soil. In order to buy from us she must be able to sell her own products and get the wherewith to pay for her purchases. England and Germany seek for markets over all the world; they are nations of merchants, and their ships go to all parts of the earth where a harbor can be found and trade relations established. During the past ten or fifteen years our consular service has been greatly improved, and is now furnishing valuable information as to the conditions under which might be extended, but our consular agents are comparatively few and their action in that regard limited.

Twenty years ago the foreign trade of Japan was not to exceed $1 per capita of its population; to-day this trade is equal to $6 or $7 per capita of its population. Twenty years ago it amounted to about $10,000,000 and to-day it amounts to about $250,000,000, of which the United States' share is less than one-fifth. The total foreign trade of China in 1900 was about 75 cents per capita; should it increase in the next twenty years in the proportion of one-half that the trade of Japan has increased in the past twenty years the foreign trade of China would amount to $1,200,000,000. The Chinese race is a commercial race. Their merchants in point of commercial ability and integrity will rank with those of any other nation. The Russian-Siberian line will soon extend through Siberia to Manchuria and Port Arthur, an open port all the year round. This will give Russia an opportunity to distribute more of her products in China and will place her in a strong position. The treaty between China and Japan at the close of the Japanese war secured to Japan the right to trade in China and to make use of ports and rivers and provide facilities for that purpose. Under the most favored nation clause in the treaty, each nation has the same privilege as respects trade relations, as is secured by Japan by its treaty.

> If we are to enjoy a fair share of the benefits of the development of Oriental trade it must come from finding a market for the necessities of life, nearly all of which come from the farms.

The farm bears a relation to the market, and a vital point of national prosperity and a happy social condition will be in proportion to our success in securing our share of this trade. In the Orient men get from 10 to 50 cents per day; they cannot buy luxuries; their wants are restricted to the mere necessities of life—food and clothing. A few years ago I sent a man to China and Japan, keeping him there a year, to find out and report upon the commercial conditions of those countries and to learn what was necessary for this country to do in order to create a new market for our rapidly increasing products which were being sent to Europe and sold, not to the highest, but I might say to the lowest bidder, because of the surplus we had to sell. During the past six years the flour trade of the Orient has grown to fifteen or twenty millions bushels of wheat per annum, and if there was a supply of cheap ocean transportation, this amount could, in my judgment, be very much increased. If we could take twenty-five or thirty million bushels a year out of the surplus that is sent to Europe, it would nearly offset the average exports of Argentina. If the new order of things following the recent war in China is to secure a stable government and protection for life and property, the development of China cannot fail to be very great, and I see no reason why it may not be as great as that of Japan. In that case we would be called on to furnish one-half of our entire surplus grain, taking this amount out of the European markets and greatly advancing the price of every bushel exported from this country.

A few years ago some very intelligent Japanese gentlemen were in my office and I asked them why they did not use American cotton to mix with the short staple cotton from India. They did not seem to know that our cotton was so much superior to that which they were in the habit of using. I told them if they would try a few carloads of our cotton, and if they did not find it to their advantage to use it I would pay the cost of the cotton. They ordered a few carloads; the result has been that we have not been able to find transportation to supply the Oriental demand for American cotton from that time to this. During the months of September, October and November just passed, we shipped about sixty thousand bales of cotton to the Orient. This was all we could find ship-room to carry; the amount could have been doubled had the ship-room been available. During this time other roads have also carried their share of cotton to the Far East and their experience has been practically the same as our own.

> Five years ago land in the Red river valley and in North Dakota was selling at from $8 to $20 per acre; to-day the demand for those lands have made them worth from $10 to $50 per acre.

As we have extended our railway lines throughout the Northwest our first object has been to settle up the country along these lines. A comparison of the census reports of 1890 and 1900 shows that in Minnesota in forty-three counties reached by our lines there has been an increase of 289,000 people, in North Dakota in twenty counties over 80,000 people. In fifteen of the counties in North Dakota most depending upon the Great Northern for their railway service I find that the vacant land in 1893 was 9,356,000 acres; in 1901, 4,300,000 acres, showing that in the eight years there had been settled upon in fifteen counties on the lines of the Great Northern road 5,050,000 acres. In Montana the increase in counties on the line of the Great Northern was about 70,000 people and in Washington 110,000 people. This year the indications are that the influx of new people will be greater than at any previous time in the history of the country. More people will come in to make their homes with you and help you as neighbors and fellow workers in the development of your state than ever before.

> At the present time we hear much about the "community of interests" between the railroads. I want to say to you here and now that the only community of interests that there is or ever can exist is the community of interests between the producer of tonnage and the carrier; the man on the farm, in the forest and in the mine must be able at all times to sell the products of his labor and his lands at a profit, or he will cease to labor and have nothing to sell.

The railroads depend for their existence on the products of the lands served by their lines; it has no other source of income. Individuals may come and go, we will all sooner or later pass from active life, but the land—the country—its resources and the railroads will be here permanently, and they will either prosper together or be poor together. There is no other community of interests that can ever exist against this one. While it is necessary for the railroads that the farmers, the lumbermen and the miners shall be prosperous, it is also necessary that the railroads should prosper.

> Much is being said about the combination between railroads, and that the country for its prosperity must rely upon a continuance of competition. The law of the survival of the fittest must inevitably end such competition as exists by the destruction of the weaker by the stronger.

This has already been done in the East to the extent that throughout all of New England the hundreds of original railway corporations are now mostly consolidated into three or four, and the people are better off than ever before. Twenty-five years ago it was supposed that competition was necessary to reduce rates. I think we have shown in the Northwest that, without competition, rates have been reduced faster than anywhere else in this country.

> To-day the farmers can ship their grain from the Red river valley to the Twin Cities and the Head of the Lakes at from 15 to 20 per cent lower rates than farmers living in the Des Moines valley and Western Iowa, where there are many lines, can ship to Chicago the same distance.

The effect of this has been to bring thousands of farmers from the Middle Western states, including Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois to find homes in Minnesota and North Dakota. This, more than anything else, has doubled the price of your lands in a comparatively few years. We have about twelve hundred miles of railway in North Dakota. The average cost of our railway, including terminals, equipment, shops, elevators, etc., is about thirty-five thousand dollars per mile, as shown by its capitalization. In the fifteen counties depending almost entirely for their transportation upon the Great Northern railway, there are, in round numbers, sixteen million acres of land. If the building of the railway and what has followed it has added $10 per acre to the value of this land it is worth $160,000,000 more than it would have been without the railway, and you have the benefit of this advance. I am glad that it is yours and hope it will enable you to enjoy your old age in comfort and to make those who follow after you good and worthy citizens of your state.

> There has recently been an attempt to show that we have no interest in building up the prosperity of the people of your state and of the Northwest. If we did not do everything in our power to build you up we would be false to our best interests. Our object in acquiring the Burlington, jointly with the Northern Pacific railway, was to insure an outlet to the best markets for the grain, live stock and lumber of the Northern lines, and to increase the volume of our traffic, to the end that we might at all times be able to establish the lowest rates and most favorable conditions under which the traffic must be carried.

The Burlington, with its own rails reaches Chicago, Peoria, Rock Island, Davenport, Quincy, Alton, Hannibal, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha and Denver, and then connects with the main arteries of traffic of the whole country.

Assuming that the line of the Burlington had not been constructed and that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific jointly had raised the money and were engaged in the construction of it, would there be anything to meet the disapproval of the states traversed by the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific? On the contrary, would not such a course have been hailed with approval as a means of opening up markets for Northwestern produce and of reaching markets in the South and Southwest and of securing business, increasing the volume of traffic of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, thus making reduction of rates and adding to the general prosperity of the Northwest? Instead of building the Burlington system or a line of railway alongside of it, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific purchased the capital stock of a line already constructed. Instead of issuing stock or bonds for the purpose of raising money to build a line reaching the same country bonds were issued to purchase the stock of a constructed line.

Convincing Reasons.

The capital stock of railway companies, as of other corporations, will be held by somebody and somewhere. Railway companies as carriers are subject to supervision and control by the public for the purpose of insuring the performance of their obligations to the public. Railroads make public through published rates the price charged for transportation, the only thing they have to sell, and must report the amount they receive for what they sell and what has been done with it. Courts are open for the purpose of determining whether railway companies as carriers observe their obligations to the public. The question of the reasonableness of rates and service does not depend upon whether one man owns the capital stock of a railway or another—whether the capital stock is owned by ten men or one thousand, by persons or by corporations. The capital stock of a railway company is personal property, to be sold, transferred from one man to another, and any one may purchase and hold all that he has means to buy and pay for. The capital stock of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern will be held by somebody, persons or corporations, if not by the present owners, by other owners. Suppose by death of present owners the stock should be scattered and a majority of it find its way into the hands of those interested in competing lines serving the country to the north or to the south of the territory served by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific. Would the people along the lines of those railways be benefited? If the present owners of a majority of the stock of the two companies could be compelled to sell it or dispose of it on the market, would it fall into hands more interested in the development and prosperity of the Northwest than its present owners? How is it that the lines have been extended and improved? What brought about the present condition of the property of the two companies? What has enabled them to serve the people along the lines as they have been served? Plainly the willingness and ability of those controlling large interests in the stock of the companies, who found it to their advantage to build up the lines and promote the settlement of the territory tributary to it and who will continue it.

Broad-Gauge Competition.

The great freight producing area of the country is along the Atlantic seaboard and in the territory south of Lake Erie. The freight that is the product of all the manufacturing enterprises which find a market west of the Mississippi river to a large extent must pass through the lakes to Duluth and to St. Paul and Minneapolis and into the territory between these cities and the Pacific, or around Lake Michigan and at that point going largely to Southwestern lines. The question of stock ownership, so far as the public along the lines served by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific is concerned, is to be considered in the light of a great competitive condition between the territory served by the Northern lines and those of the South and West—between lines whose interest it is to secure traffic as against the Northern lines, to populate and build up the country in which the people along the Northern lines have no special immediate interest.

A few years ago the transportation on Lake Superior was mainly in the hands of what was known as the Lake Superior Transit company, a pool line made up by steamers operated by Eastern trunk lines, who also operated boats running from Chicago, and whenever we reduced the rates from the wheat fields to Lake Superior a corresponding advance in the water rate was made to offset our reduction on land and equalize the rate by Lake Superior and by Chicago. We built six steel steamers, which at that time were the largest on the lakes. The first cargo we landed at Buffalo we were told that it would have to pay the local rate from Buffalo to New York, which was practically the same as the through rate from Duluth to New York. We found a way to get around this, and the result was to break up the Transit company and break down the rates on the lakes to a reasonable figure. Later the elevator charges at the head of Lake Superior were 1¼ cents per bushel, and at Buffalo 1½ cents per bushel, with an additional charge for shoveling of ¼ cent. We built large elevators at both places, the effect of which has been to reduce the rates to ½ cent each in Buffalo and at the Head of Lake Superior; in other words, where the grain paid 2¾ cents per bushel it is now paying 1 cent. The difference to the Northwest on the 200,000,000 bushels of wheat is $3,500,000 per year. The proportion of this we handle through our elevators is probably 15 per cent. We did not build the elevators for the purpose of grinding the faces off the farmers of the Northwest, but in order that they might have fair play and that their grain might go forward without undue and unnecessary taxation. I say this to show you that we are at all times mindful of everything that will add to your material prosperity.

> In 1880 the average rates on grain from the Red river valley to Duluth were from 25 cents to 35 cents per hundred; to-day they are from 14 cents to 16 cents per hundred, or about one-half the rates of twenty years ago. The rates on coal and lumber have been reduced in the same proportion.

Reductions in rates of transportation must be made with the greatest care in order to avoid unfair discrimination against persons or localities. A reduction in the rates of the whole country of 10 cents for moving a ton of freight 100 miles would make a reduction of over $150,000,000 on the traffic handled during the past year, and would wipe out a large part of the income of the railroads.

General Railroad Conditions.

The conditions of the general railroad situation in the United States at the present time are hardly understood. For the year ending June 30, 1890, the number of tons carried one mile by all the railroads was 76,207,000,000 ton miles; in 1900 it was 141,000,000,000 as shown by the interstate commerce commission reports. In 1901 a safe estimate will bring this to 165,000,000,000 tons carried one mile, an increase of 120 per cent in eleven years. During this time the mileage of the railroads in the United States increased 18 per cent. While the tons moved shows an increase of 120 per cent, the earnings show an increase of less than 40 per cent. During this time the rates have been reduced to the extent of that difference. During that period of eleven years, notwithstanding the enormous increase in traffic, four of the so-called trunk lines have through destructive competition failed, and been reorganized, and all but one of them have been absorbed by the stronger surviving lines. Destructive competition has forced the weakest lines into bankruptcy, and to-day they are owned by the lines that were able to maintain their position and credit, giving the ability to acquire these bankrupt roads. The Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania for half a century have been rival roads. Both states and cities have actively aided in building them up. Destructive competition between them has finally resulted in the Pennsylvania road owning the Baltimore & Ohio. Have the rates advanced? Have the people along the line of the Baltimore & Ohio suffered? On the contrary, the first step has been to furnish money to cut down the grades, to double track the line from the Ohio river to Chicago and to furnish cars and terminal facilities to handle the business to the best advantage, and at such rates as will enable the shippers along the line to open up their mines and increase their business in every branch of trade, and to rely upon the solvent company for the facilities necessary to transact their business.

Hardly a day passes without a railroad accident, many of which are attended with much loss of life. What is the cause? In an effort to handle the business of the public trains are run in such numbers and at a rate of speed which is entirely beyond the capacity of the roads—to-day there is an absolute blockade of traffic between Chicago and the Mississippi river points in the West and the Atlantic seaboard. Furnaces within a short distance of the coke ovens are cold and thousands of men are idle for want of transportation. There is a coal famine from Pittsburg to Denver. People say it is due to shortage of cars. Ten years ago, with a ton mile movement of seventy-six billions, the average freight car movement was about thirty miles per day; at this time it is not more than twenty miles per day. It is not more cars that is wanted, but more movement of the cars now in use. Freight trains move certainly an average of sixteen miles an hour while on the road. Twenty miles car movement daily means that the cars move one hour and a quarter out of the twenty-four hours.

> No business in the world can thrive under conditions when it can use its facilities for earning money less than one hour out of the twelve.

When many of the roads were built capital was scarce and high. A very large proportion of the original railway enterprises failed, losing a large part of the investment—they had no idea of the future growth, and from want of money and want of forethought the terminal facilities are to-day totally inadequate. If the cars could be moved at the principal terminals the main lines would be able to do better than at present. However, with a continuance for three or five years of the present volume of traffic between the East and West added to industrial traffic in the great manufacturing districts, this country will find itself confronted with the most serious commercial question it has yet been called upon to solve. Terminals in the larger Eastern cities are both difficult and expensive to acquire. The Pennsylvania railway, in order to get into New York, onto Manhattan Island, is building a tunnel from Jersey City to Brooklyn at a cost of forty or fifty million dollars. Will it bring new business or must the expense of operation and interest on cost be levied on present traffic?

A careful examination of the railway problem from a national standpoint will, I believe, show beyond question that the business of the country has outgrown the facilities on most of the trunk lines and that new facilities not now apparent will be necessary to relieve the situation.

Rates in the United States are much lower than in any other country. Wages are higher—the cost of most of the material is higher than in Europe, still the average rate charged in Europe is fully twice as high as in America. The conditions in this country change very rapidly—while rates have been cut in two in twenty years all kinds of labor and material used by railways have advanced from 30 to 50 per cent. Nothing but the increased volume of traffic has made it possible to reduce rates as they have been reduced. To-day we find the volume of traffic so great east of Chicago that the railways are not able to move it under the present conditions. How will these conditions be changed and at whose cost? Who will build new lines or increase old ones? These are the questions which I will not undertake to answer farther than to say that the West must have the facilities or suffer for the want of them.

> The public must always bear in mind that a bankrupt road cannot furnish good service. The railroad must be able to furnish the service demanded from it at fair and reasonable rates. The problem we have had to solve has been how to reduce the cost of operation so that we can furnish transportation at the lowest prices.

This can be done only by increasing the volume of traffic. The question is as simple as raising a given amount of money by taxation. The more dollars' worth of property taxed the lower the rate of taxation will be and the greater number of tons carried the lower the rate of transportation will be. This is one of the main reasons why we are so anxious to develop the enormous through business that is rapidly growing up along our lines. Every ton of new business that we bring contributes its proportion of net revenue and enables us to reduce the rate of transportation on our local business. The interstate business on our lines in North Dakota to-day constitutes 96 per cent of the whole and still you enjoy all the facilities furnished, both passenger and freight, with the increased number of trains necessary to handle this business, every one of which is an additional accommodation to you.

It will be thirty-two years next March since I first saw the Red River Valley. At that time there was not a single house on the west side of the Red river from the Bois de Sioux to Pembina. During the last twenty years all of my time and effort has been given to building up the Northwest and no part of the Northwest has given me more satisfaction or is giving me more satisfaction to-day than North Dakota. Its growth in the past has been marvelous. The first years in all new countries are marked by hardship and self-denial, but during the last few years you are getting the reward of your labor; people are coming into the state by thousands, the value of your land has advanced and will advance beyond your reasonable expectations and I hope that together your property and our property will work side by side and shoulder to shoulder to carry forward the best interests of North Dakota. No man, no hundred men in your state, represent the same interest in your welfare that it is my good fortune to represent and I hope in the future that with better methods of cultivation and more knowledge of what is required, your condition may be constantly improved and if your condition is improved, ours will certainly share it with you. As the volume of traffic increases our rates will be reduced.

> Remember that whatever helps you helps the railroad, and whatever hurts or restricts your growth restricts the growth of the railroad serving you. We will always prosper together or be poor together.

Annoyances of the President's Life.

Among the annoyances of a president's life are the intrusions of well-intentioned people upon his private and personal affairs. He is the common property of the nation. He has no home, or as little of one as the public is compelled to leave him; he is worse off than any private citizen in the country in this respect, for when he or his wife asks some friends to call on them on a certain day of the week, persons who are not asked, and who do not know them, accept the invitation which was not given them and go also. Not [illegible] annoying, perhaps, are the people who open upon the president as teachers of morality. They have no diffidence; they rush in where they are not asked, and they insist that when the president is in the White House he shall conform his life to theirs, shall live as they think is right, and is a monster of iniquity if he does not accept their tutelage. There is not a president who has escaped them, and there never will be until we have a score or so of presidents, each of whom will not heed them, who will not answer their letters, who will insist on having his own habits, and on living according to his own light and not according to the light of another. We have recently had a temperance president who has been called a drunkard because some one said he saw him drink a glass of champagne at dinner. Denials of the truth of the statement merely whetted the appetite for objurgation. And now we have another president, a very abstemious man, who receives letters nearly every day whose writers express the regret that we have a "wine-bibber" in the White House. These letters, we are told, are not answered, but a reply was sent to the woman who reminded the president of the commandment, "Six days shalt thou labor," and then lectured him for Sabbath-breaking. The reply was written by Secretary Cortelyou, and was this:

"I am directed by the president to say that he goes to church on Sunday morning, and takes his wife and children into the country Sunday afternoon."

To which of these occupations do you object?—Harper's Weekly.

Cholly—I think I may change my mind. Miss Marbleheart (earnestly)—I would, if I were you.—Judge.

News of the Northwest

VIEW OF NORTH DAKOTA.

Resolutions Endorsing J. J. Hill's Railroad Operations.

Fargo, N. D.—At the North Dakota Grain Growers' convention at Fargo, on the 10th inst., a series of resolutions were adopted which concluded as follows:

It is the sense of this meeting that, in resisting the attempts of the Union Pacific road and its allies, on the one hand, and the Canadian Pacific railroad and its feeders on the other, to secure control of the Northern Pacific railroad, James J. Hill has performed a notable public service, and once more displayed the far-sighted and business-like policy that has characterized his long career as the great developer of Northwestern resources and the most watchful guardian of Northwestern interests.

Mr. Hill built a great transcontinental road through a wilderness, that has grown, through his efforts, into the richest empire on earth, and never asked a bonus or subsidy. He has connected that railroad at one end with a fleet of vessels that carry American products to the Orient, and bring back the trade of the Orient to the Northwest, and to the whole nation, and at the other end with shipping facilities by water to the Atlantic seaboard—all of this, too, without a dollar of bonus or the semblance of a subsidy. Trusting to the resources of the country for the traffic to justify extension, he has entered every section that needed transportation facilities, and constructed, often at a loss to himself, lines into sparsely-settled and unproductive communities. During all the years of railroad building, there has been a regular, marked reduction of freight tariffs, according as the volume of traffic increased and warranted it, and a uniform disposition to make temporary sacrifices for the permanent improvement of the country.

In view of this record, and in recognition of the honorable and upright course of James J. Hill in his dealings with the farmers of the Northwest, we congratulate the country upon his success in preventing the absorption of the Northern Pacific by Union Pacific interests, on the one hand, and the Canadian Pacific manipulators on the other, and express our confidence in the purpose and ability of Mr. Hill to give to the States of Minnesota and North and South Dakota, the best and cheapest transportation facilities to be had by the people of any section of the nation.

Two years ago Mr. Hill came to our convention and gave us some good points on diversified farming and other matters of interest to the farmers of the Northwest, and stated that he would furnish free transportation to delegations of farmers from the different counties of the state to visit the agricultural college and state farm, which offer many farmers have accepted, to their great satisfaction and benefit.

He also stated that he expected to build some large steam vessels, costing a number of millions of dollars, to put on the Pacific ocean trade from this country to the Orient. We notice by the daily press that this statement is being fulfilled, and it will make a new market for the farmers of the Northwest, to their benefit.

WAS ONCE MAID FOR VICTORIA.

Racine Woman, Now Too Old to Work, Finds Refuge in Hospital.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 13. — Miss Mary Harrison, seventy-four year sold, who has no friends or money, has found a home at St. Mary's hospital, where she has been the past five years. Miss Harrison claims that when a young woman she was a servant in the household of Queen Victoria. During that time she became engaged to marry a young man. The engagement was broken and she came to America and never married. Five years ago she became too old to work.

Died in a Smelter.

Rapid City, S. D., Jan. 13.—James J. Donahue died suddenly at the new smelter building here Thursday evening. He was found several minutes afterward lying face downward, having evidently fallen forward. There were several slight cuts on the face, but the coroner's jury investigated the case carefully and concluded that death was caused by heart disease. Donahue came from Springfield, Mass., three weeks ago and was assisting in the erection of the steel structure for the smelter.

Children Forced to Steal.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Jan. 13.—The members of thirteen families are under arrest here, charged with the wholesale theft of coal from the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul chutes at Ottumwa Junction. An average of thirty tons a week has been stolen, and it is claimed that wagons and horses had been purchased for the purpose of hauling the stolen coal and that the children of the families were compelled to commit the thefts.

Indians Are Quiet.

Forsythe, Mont., Jan. 13. — Charles Straw, who arrived in Forsythe yesterday from Cheyenne agency at Lame Deer, says Friday was issue day for the Indians, and appeared at the post excepting two or three, who, their companions claimed, were hunting and had lost horses in the hills. Everything is quiet at present and no more trouble is feared.

Curfew Rings Every Night.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 13.—Madison has a curfew law. The common council has passed an audience requiring children to be off the street by 8 o'clock in the evening in winter, and 9 o'clock in summer. The vote of the aldermen was a tie, and mayor Bull cast the deciding vote in favor of the ordinance.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE WILL SUM UP THE RAILROAD SITUATION.

St. Paul, Jan. 13.—Gov. Van Sant Saturday issued a formal call for a special session of the legislature on Feb. 4 to consider the report of the tax commission and to revise the law governing taxation. The call is in accordance with an agreement whereby the legislature cut short its extra session of last winter. The early date of the extra session is necessary because the proposed tax law changes the time of beginning an assessment. The assessor, under the bill submitted by the tax commission, will begin his work April 1 instead of May 1, as formerly. The governor deemed it expedient to call the session as soon as possible, in order that the proposed tax laws may take effect before the next assessment is made.

Gov. Van Sant declined to discuss the scope of the work that has been mapped out for the special session. As soon as the call was issued he began the work of preparing his message to the legislature. The message will deal not alone with the work of the tax commission and the necessity of doing away with the present system, but it will sum up the railroad situation in the state and the railway merger. The governor suggests that his call includes only the matters that are most important to the state, yet it will be possible for the legislature to pass upon a great many things.

TORTURE BY RED DEVILS.

Sacrifice of a Medicine Man at Hands of a Band of Yuma Indians.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 13.—Padre, a big medicine man of the Yuma Indians who lives on a reservation near Yuma, Ariz., has been offered as a sacrifice to the spirit in accordance with their customs, and has expiated the sins of the tribe which are held responsible for the epidemic of smallpox. The medicine man suspected the intentions of the Indians several days ago and fled to the mountains, but in a half-starved condition wandered back to the Indian village and pleaded for mercy. He was promptly bound hand and foot and conveyed by a delegation of Indians to Mexico, where he was bound to a tree and cruelly tortured to death. Padre had a warm place in the hearts of his tribesmen, but their customs required them to make a heavy sacrifice.

BAYKINAHWAUNH DIES.

Old Warrior of White Earth Who Desired Modern Growth.

White Earth, Minn., Jan. 13. — Baykinahwaunh, a well known chief among the White Earth Chippewa Indians, and one of a few remaining early day warriors, died Saturday morning, aged seventy years. He was among the first to remove to the White Earth reservation when it was first set aside for the Chippewas. He was an earnest advocate of education and cherished constant interest in all movements looking to the elevation of his race.

AGED KANSAN IS MURDERED.

John Booth Killed With Ax at Ottawa and Body Thrown Into Well.

Ottawa, Kan., Jan. 13.—John Booth, an old man, was robbed and murdered and his body thrown into a well on the premises of Mrs. McCoy, a block from her home. A bloody axe was found near the well, and stains were found on the kitchen door of the McCoy house. Mrs. McCoy and a daughter were arrested. The Kansas City authorities have been notified to arrest another daughter, who is believed to have left for that city on an early train.

MANGLED BY BLAST.

One Man Killed and Several Others Hurt by Dynamite.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 13. — James Burgess was killed and two companions were injured by the explosion of a blast in the mines of the Webster County Coal and Land company at Lehigh. The men had placed the blast, which did not explode at once, and they started forward to ascertain the trouble, reaching it just as the explosion occurred. Burgess' body was badly mangled but the others were not seriously injured.

IOWA SALOON MEN ENJOINED.

Personal Injunctions Issued Against Ottumwa Liquor Dealers.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Jan. 13.—Personal injunctions were issued from the district court here against five of the thirty-six saloonkeepers against whom proceedings were recently commenced by the local anti-saloon league, restraining them from in any manner disobeying the mulct law. Plans for like decrees in other cases are under consideration.

Fire of Mysterious Origin.

St. Louis, Jan. 13.—A fire of mysterious origin yesterday caused damage estimated at $170,000 in the building occupied by the E. C. W. Meier China and Glass company.

Farmer's Fatal Mistake.

New Richmond, Wis., Jan. 13.—Carelessness in getting the wrong bottle will probably cost Arthur McConnell, a prosperous farmer residing one mile east of Cylon, his life. He had been taking medicine and got carbolic acid.

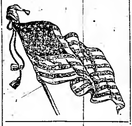
WEDNESDAY, JAN 15, 1902.



Crookston's papers, as well as politicians, have been making some little stir concerning the prospective congressional nominees on the democratic ticket. Wheelock's Weekly, in speaking of the various candidates spoken of by the Crookston papers, very wisely remarks: When Crookston gets ready to select one of its own citizens and present him to the district as the united choice of Crookston there is every reason to believe that the democrats in other counties will acquiesce in the selection, but so long as Crookston democrats are split into two or more hostile camps it would clearly be an act of folly for the rest of the district to antagonize either one by supporting the nominee of the other.

February 4th is the day set by Gov. Van Sant for the extra session of the state legislature to convene. It is expected that the session will not last a very long time but it will be busy. The principal item which will come up will be the report of tax commission and the revising of the tax laws. Of course, the railroad merger and the providing of ways and means to fight it, may also come up for consideration.

AN ECCENTRIC DINER.

The Tall Story That Is Told of a Parisian Gourmet.

Paris is par excellence the city of gourmets and cranks, and many a story concerning them has added to the gayety of the nations. Here is one of the latest, told by a well known French head waiter: One of the regular customers of a famous Parisian restaurant used to be a short, thin, shy and shabbily dressed man whose name no one knew, but who gave out that he was a butter dealer, for which reason he was called the butter man at the restaurant in question.

He ate next to nothing, but his soup tureen, filled with a soup specially prepared for him, was always put before him. He took a few spoonfuls and had it taken away. Next came a whole fillet of beef, from which he cut the tiniest slice. Then followed four quails or a large chicken, of which he ate one mouthful, together with two lettuce leaves and one radish. His dessert was four grapes—never a single one more—and a cup of coffee. A bottle of the best claret and another of the best champagne were served with the repast, but he only wetted his lips with a drop from them and let them go. He took two of these meals a day, and the price for each meal was 120 francs.

But this was not all. Every time the butter man got up from his extraordinary meal he gave 40 francs to the head waiter, who put his food on his plate, since the guest did not like to handle spoons or dishes; 20 francs to the waiter, 10 francs to the woman cashier and 5 francs to the porter. Thus each meal came to 200 francs. The head waiter of the restaurant often did slight errands for him, buying his cigars, etc., and took them to the Grand hotel, where the butter man lived. The little old man would then open the drawer of a wardrobe filled with heaps of bank notes of from 100 francs to 600 francs in value and with an enormous mass of goldpieces. "Pay yourself," said the owner, and the head waiter did so, putting the bills before his patron, who never deigned to look at them.

One day the mysterious millionaire went away and was never seen again.—Westminster Gazette.

NAPOLEON'S ORDER.

THE LEGION OF HONOR AND HOW IT WAS FOUNDED.

Despite the Ridicule the Project at First Invited Its Inauguration Proved That Napoleon Knew French Human Nature.

France owes the Legion of Honor to Napoleon. All orders of chivalry had been abolished by the revolution and had left a gap which it was not easy to fill. "They are mere geegaws," said Monge, the chemist, who had taught the revolutionists how to make gunpowder out of plaster of paris. "Geegaws, if you will," the first consul answered, "but people like them. Let us approach the question frankly. All men are enamored of decorations—the French more than any. They positively hunger for them, and they have always done so."

This was at Malmaison in 1802. In May the conseil d'etat was invited to consider the project of the institution of the Legion of Honor. It was ridiculed by many, notably by Moreau, who as victor of Hohenlinden was bitterly jealous of the victor of Marengo. At a dinner party he sent for his cook and said to him in the presence of his guests: "Michel, I am pleased with your dinner. You have indeed distinguished yourself. I will award you a saucepan of honor." Mme. de Stael was also satirical upon the subject. "Ah, one of the decorated?" she used to ask each guest who was shown into her salon.

But Napoleon had gauged human nature correctly. His Legion of Honor did meet a felt want, and it was definitely inaugurated on July 14, 1804. Among the eminent men of science and men of letters on whom it was then bestowed were included Laplace, the mathematician; Lalande, the astronomer; Cuvier, the naturalist, and Legouve, the poet. The most notable name omitted was that of Bernardin de St. Pierre, just then in disgrace for championing Mme. de Stael, whom Napoleon had banished, but he got the decoration later on the entreaty of Queen Hortense.

After Jena Goethe was decorated. A little later high promotion in the order was given to General Lamarque, to whom Sir Hudson Lowe had surrendered at Capri. "What did you do with him?" asked Napoleon. "The king of Naples had him exchanged for a Neapolitan general who was a prisoner in Sicily." "Very well; there is no harm in letting this English colonel go. He is not dangerous." It seems not unlikely that Sir Hudson Lowe remembered this sarcasm when he was Napoleon's jailer a few years afterward.

After Napoleon's downfall the question of suppressing the Legion of Honor arose. Chateaubriand, whom Napoleon had not decorated, strongly urged its abolition. So did Pozzo di Borgo. Marshals Victor, Marmont and Macdonald opposed. After debate it was decided to recognize and retain the order, not on any high moral or patriotic grounds, but because Louis XVIII. could not afford to make himself more unpopular than he was already by stripping people of their decorations. Chateaubriand and Lamartine consented to accept the red ribbon, but it was also conferred upon a great number of worthless personages and so brought into contempt.

There have been many Legion of Honor scandals since those days, but one of them surpasses all the others in magnitude. This is, of course, the Wilson scandal, the history of which, though intricate, is worth recalling.

The trouble may be said to have begun on the day on which Mlle. Alice Grevy fell in love with an opera singer who need not be mentioned here. He wanted to marry her, and she wanted to marry him, and the papers were beginning to couple the two names in a manner most embarrassing to the president of the republic. The president, however, sent the opera singer about his business and found his daughter another husband, not a very good husband, but the best husband he could procure on the spur of the moment. His choice fell upon M. Daniel Wilson, who had long been one of M. Grevy's political supporters and was a financier of some mark.

No sooner was M. Wilson established at the Elysee than he proceeded to enrich himself by various means. Among other things, he founded a paper called Le Moniteur de l'Exposition Universelle, which really covered a traffic in decorations. The whole story came out in a state trial toward the end of 1887. It was proved that Wilson had made a regular practice of selling the Legion of Honor, or, rather, of inviting people who wanted it to bribe him to use his influence to obtain it for them. His overtures were presented through his jackals, Generals d'Andlau and Cafferel and Mmes. Limousin and Ratazzi and the whole party had to stand in the dock together.

Wilson was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, a fine of 3,000 francs and five years' deprivation of civil rights. He appealed, and the court of cassation annulled the judgment. The accused, said the judges, was obviously guilty of everything that he was charged with, but as his offenses were not anticipated by any punitive law he could not be punished. So he retired to the country and tried to live down his bad name. As he ultimately got himself elected conseiller general, one must suppose that he succeeded in this object.—Pall Mall Gazette.

His Mission.

A lawyer was passing along the street carrying under his arm a lawbook when he was accosted by a self righteous individual: "Ho, Mr. Blank! And where are you going to preach today?"

"I don't preach, I practice," replied the lawyer.

DISAPPEARING WRITING.

The Way a Big Swindle Was Successfully Worked in Paris.

A number of Parisian financiers were recently defrauded of a very considerable sum of money by a swindler, who relied for the success of his scheme entirely upon the peculiar properties of iodide of starch. Posing as a man of considerable wealth, whose money was tied up in such a manner that he could not realize without heavy losses and pretending to have the option of some valuable concessions in China, he obtained various large amounts of money in exchange for bills dated to stand for three months.

No one for a moment suspected that there was anything in the least degree shady about the man or his transactions, and when he made it public that he had been successful in selling his Chinese concession at a large profit his creditors felt absolutely certain that he would meet his bills.

To their immense surprise, however, when they came to look through their papers to find the bills they only found bills with blank spaces in the places where the swindler's name should have been and had actually been. They clamored round him for an explanation of the strange affair, but he denied that he had ever given any of them bills and defied them to sue him for repayment of the loans, and the fact that the bills were devoid of the swindler's signature rendered them absolutely worthless.

The matter was put into the hands of the police, who were able to discover that in signing the bills the man had used a solution of iodide of starch, which, when first used for writing, appears much the same as ordinary ink, but completely disappears in the course of a few weeks, and, although traces of the chemical may subsequently be discovered, nothing can make the writing show up again. Finding that his victims had discovered his method, the schemer decamped, despite the fact that the chances of the police obtaining a conviction against him were very remote indeed.

WAVES OF WATER.

Slow rivers flow at the rate of three to seven miles an hour.

The amount of water flowing out of the Nile is sixteen times that of the Thames.

The English channel is nowhere more than 960 feet deep. The Irish sea is 2,130 feet deep.

The largest gulf in the world is the gulf of Mexico—800,000 square miles—almost twice as big as the bay of Bengal.

The Parana of Brazil and Argentina is 2,200 miles in length and after the Amazon is the largest river in South America.

The shallowest of all seas are the Baltic and the Adriatic, which average only forty-three and forty-five yards' depth respectively.

Askul Chin, in Tibet, is the lake which lies at a greater height than any other in the world. Its level is 16,600 feet. The lowest is the Dead sea—1,290 feet below sea level.

A Judicial Retort.

Sir William Meredith, chief justice of Ontario, Canada, was formerly a very prominent politician as well as a famous lawyer. He was especially noted for his success as prosecuting attorney, and few criminals escaped conviction when he addressed the jury.

During one of his political campaigns he was speaking at a meeting in the city of London, his native town. The audience was turbulent and he was frequently interrupted. Finally a voice from the gallery cut into one of his finer flights with a sarcastic "Oh, go and get your hair cut!"

Sir William, who wore his hair somewhat longer than is usual, was stopped by a burst of laughter. But as soon as he was able to make himself heard he turned the laugh and won the audience by this reply: "My friend, if I'm not mistaken, I've had your hair cut before this!"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Fainting.

The direct cause of fainting is a diminished circulation of blood through the brain. To revive a person who has fainted it is necessary, therefore, to alter this condition as quickly as possible. In order to do this the individual should be laid quite flat, the head on a level with the body, so that the feebly acting heart will not have to propel the blood upward. The neck and chest should be exposed, fresh air admitted freely, water sprinkled on the face and stimulating vapors, such as ammonia, held at intervals to the nostrils. When there is difficulty in restoring animation, friction over the region of the heart with the hand or a rough cloth should be applied vigorously.

Exemplifying an Adage.

"Yes," said the old conductor. "I have followed the railroad about all my life. I wasn't exactly born on a train, but I was married on one at the rate of forty-five miles an hour."

"That was a good deal like marrying in haste."

"It was. And we got tired of each other while we were making the return trip on a freight train."

"That was a good deal like repenting at leisure."—Chicago Tribune.

Grow Handsome.

Would you like to be truly beautiful? Thoreau says: "We are all sculptors and painters, and our material is our own flesh and blood and bones. Any nobleness begins at once to refine a man's features and any meanness or sensuality to imbrute them." So there, now, you sour visaged, plain faced people, go along about your business and grow handsome.—National Magazine.

Got His Money.

When King Edward VII. was an undergraduate at Oxford, he was a great huntsman, and few men could beat him across country. On one occasion his royal highness and some other riders galloped into a farmyard by way of a short cut. The farmer, a sturdy yeoman, closed the gates and told the huntsmen they must pay £1 apiece for trespass.

One of the gentlemen smiled indulgently at the rustic and said, "But, my good man, this is the Prince of Wales."

The good man was in nowise abashed and retorted, "Prince or no prince, I'll have my money." And he got it.

County Board Meets

The first regular meeting of the county commissioners convened at Red Lake Falls last Tuesday. Commissioner Sotor was elected as chairman for the ensuing year. THE SPECTATOR was duly designated as the official paper of Red Lake county for this year. The board of audit reported a balance in the treasury, on Nov. 26th, of $48,-914.73, which shows that the county is in pretty fair shape financially.

They got It for Asking.

Several days ago a couple of women canvassed St. Hilaire in the interests of a Duluth orphan's home. They got quite a little money from our generous citizens and moved on. Now nearly all the papers in the districts further south are giving those same females a glorious lot of advertising. It is alleged that they were not of the purest kind and that all the money they collected went into their own pockets- or helped pay for a good time.

We are requested to make the announcement that any person, who shall in any way mislay or carry off any of the supplies belonging to the fire department, in the village hall, shall be arrested and fined. All the fire department supplies are kept in the village hall and it is very hard for the department to give prompt service when they cant find any thing where it belongs. Any person who will carry away any of their material should be treated as a misdmeanant and punished accordingly.

Praises Red Lake County.

The Lisbon correspondent of the Clarkfield Reform Advocate says:

"K. K. Solberg left Tuesday for Red Lake county, this being his third trip up there this winter. He certainly ought to be able to tell us about that country, and he says it is indeed the country for a poor man besides offering many opportunities for investment. They can raise everything that we can raise here and clover and timothy in addition."

Mr. Solberg only voices the sentiments of all those who came here from the southern part of the state looking for the best returns for their investments.

Get Ready to Dodge.

The Thief River Falls News is one of the luckiest papers published in the northwest, and editor Eastman is blessed beyond the lot of the average editor. He has at least one correspondent who is a gem. We don't know his name but he signs himself "One Who Knows." This knowing correspondent of the News had a communication in the last issue of that paper, in which he commenced by wondering what sort of a God THE SPECTATOR editor worships—goes on to state what a noble, heroic, selfsacrificing, fearfully and wonderfully constructed a person a certain Mrs. Chelin is and ends up by saying that if the people of St. Hilaire believed as she did they might capture the new court house which it seems, is now bound to "slide" in some unknown manner through St. Hilaire to Thief River Falls.

Brother Eastman should anchor that correspondent so he can't get awey. Then get him to tell all he knows—if he knows any more than he says in that article.

THE SPECTATOR editor worships about the same God as the average newspaper man. We have no doubt whatever but that Mrs. Chelin is a "noble woman"—in fact, we are informed that she did once lay claim to being one of the noblest of her race, and a distant relative to King Oscar. But, please brother Eastman, won't you try to have it arranged so that the "new court house," when it gets its start, won't slide straight through St. Hilaire. Or, if it does, can't it be fixed so that it will keep to the railroad track. If you can't do this you might give us a tip on the quiet a few minutes before hand so that we can jump out of the way and let her go by without causing any loss of life in this now quiet and peaceful little village.

Bird Photographers.

Birds are made to photograph themselves by an ingenious device of an English photographer. A piece of fat is placed on an electric wire which is so connected with a camera that when the bait is removed the camera shutter is released, taking an instantaneous picture. In this way it is almost as easy to get a picture of the wildest bird or animal of the forest as to get a case of "Golden Grain Belt" beer. Brewed from the purest barley malt and hops it is nourishing and refreshing. Order of your nearest dealer, or be supplied by Alex Thomson, Crookston, Minn.

Prayer meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30. Rev. W. H. Gooderham. Pastor.

How a Man's Life Was Saved at the Very Last Moment.

The following stirring incident of the two flags happened at Valparaiso, Chile, and was related at Montreal in 1881 by the Rev. Dr. J. O. Peck. Dr. Peck said:

"The man who gave me the facts I am about to relate was Mr. Haskins, an American sailor who had sailed to a port in Chile. On going ashore, he said, to enjoy his day of liberty he drank a little and became hilarious. One of the police officers, instead of warning him not to make a noise in the street, drew his sword and, striking him a blow, knocked him down. On that the American sailor got up and knocked the policeman down in return. He was on that arrested and tried and condemned to be shot in the morning of the following day.

"Mr. Loring, the American consul, expostulated with the authorities that it would be monstrous to shoot the man for such an offense, but they paid no attention to him, so he thereupon made a formal protest in the name of the United States government against the barbarous act. Mr. Haskins, the sailor, was in the morning brought out pinioned to be shot.

"As the English consul was preparing to hoist the union jack he saw the crowd in the field opposite, where the execution of the American sailor, of which he had heard, was to take place. Rushing over the American consul, he said, 'Loring, you're not going to let them shoot that man!'

"'What can I do?' he said. 'I have protested against it. I can do no more.'

"Quick as thought the English consul shouted, 'Give me your flag!' And in a trice the stars and stripes were handed to the English representative. At once, taking his own union jack in his hand, he hastened across the field, elbowed his way through the crowd and soldiery, and, running up to the doomed man, he folded the American flag around him and then laid the union jack over it. Standing a few paces back, he faced the officers and soldiers and shouted defiantly, 'Now, shoot, if you dare, through the heart of England and America!'

"And they dared not do it, for they feared the consequences, so the man was at once released. In telling me," said Dr. Peck, "Mr. Haskins said, to me, with tears streaming down his cheeks even then, 'They loosed me then, and, oh, how I longed to embrace those two flags!'"—Anglo-American.

POULTRY POINTERS.

A safe rule in feeding is to give enough to satisfy and no more.

Droppings should not be allowed to accumulate in the poultry house longer than a week.

Bone dust supplies an abundance of bonemaking material and counteracts any tendency to diarrhea.

When possible, give the poultry house a southern exposure and furnish that side with an abundance of light.

While wheat is one of the best grains to feed to fowls, it should not be fed to excess or it may cause diarrhea. Feed it with other grains.

Loss of feathers is generally caused by want of green food or want of a dust-bath. Supply both, and, as a local application, use mercurial ointment.

Breed the best flesh formers for market: then feed them up to as great weight as possible. Well fattened, well dressed poultry bring the best prices.

NEWFOUNDLAND TRAGEDY.

A Fisherman's Wild Sail to Procure Medical Aid.

"The lack of physicians is one of the horrors of the isolation in which the Newfoundlanders of this coast live," says Norman Duncan in Ainslee's. "There is none within fifty miles of most harbors; none within reaching distance of many. It is related of a well to do fisherman who was something of a merchant that his wife, whom he fondly loved, lay in agony for many days while an autumn gale raged. No man in the harbor would put off in a skiff to fetch the nearest physician, who lived fifteen miles down the coast, for there was no possibility that he who ventured could survive. On the fourth day the wind moderated. Two men volunteered to accompany Atherton. They set sail in the first hours of a snowstorm, which abated, however, before they reached their destination. Fighting doggedly, they took the boat safely in, after indescribable hardship and through ever present danger. The gale had gone down when they knocked on the physician's door. A heavy sea was running, but the danger of wreck on the return voyage was quickly passing.

"'What's the matter with the woman?' the physician asked.

"He was informed.

"The husband minutely described his wife's agony. Then he offered what amounted almost to half his fortune as a fee.

"'I'll take that,' said the doctor, 'if you fetch her here. Go back and get her, and I'll attend to the case.'

"'In an open boat!' the husband exclaimed. He pointed out that his wife's condition put such an arrangement beyond the bounds of reason.

"'Well, I can't do anything,' said the physician. 'If you bring her over, I'll attend to her.'

"When the husband got back to his home, the child had been born, but the woman died the next day."

PARRY A COMPLIMENT.

Accept One Always, but Never Take It Seriously.

The famous Mme. Recamier said that she always found two words sufficed to make her guests seem welcome. Upon their arrival she exclaimed, "At last!" and when they took their leave she said "Already?" If taken literally, we should deprecate the flattery. Flattery is insincere praise and wrongs him that gives and him that takes. It is sometimes kinder to accept a compliment than to parry it.

One may say "Thank you. It is pleasant to be seen through such kind (or partial) eyes," or perhaps, "It is a comfort to know that friendship is partly blind as well as the mythological boy," or any nonsense that serves to show that one appreciates the spirit that prompted the kind expression, however wide the truth.

The frequent repetition of the name of the person addressed holds a subtle compliment, implying more complete concentration of the speaker's thought upon his or her personality.

De Quincey says: "More is done for the benefit of conversation by the simple magic of good manners than by all varieties of intellectual power."

It is the sympathetic and responsive listeners that call forth the best efforts of a talker. For such are reserved his choicest stories, his finest thoughts.

A ready smile acts as inspiration, and interest shown in the conversation of others stimulates and vivifies their thoughts.

To a good listener the diffident will say what they think, and the verbose will think what they say.

There is nothing more trying than to find that one's conversation is receiving but a divided attention and nothing more rude than for a person to pick up a book or paper and look over it while pretending to listen to what one is saying.—New York Herald.

ANOTHER REMARKABLE CASE

Which the Doctors Failed to Cure or Understand.

A Medical man as a rule dislikes to acknowledge the value of a proprietary medicine—in fact, professional etiquette debars him from doing so. Yet there are many eminent physicians, those most advanced in their professions, who give full credit to the great curative properties of Vogeler's Curative Compound, from the fact that it is manufactured by an old and reliable company, proprietors of St. Jacob's Oil, from the formula of a brother physician, who to-day stands in the front ranks of the most eminent medical men in London, and on account of its intrinsic merit, it is largely prescribed by the medical profession; but, in the case which we are about to relate, the attending physician called it "rubbish," but, as it turned out, Mrs. Nettleton tells the doctor that "rubbish or not, it saved her life."

Mrs. Nettleton graphically relates the particulars of her own case, which will doubtless be of interest to many of our lady readers:

"I had been an intense sufferer for many years from dyspepsia, liver and kidney troubles, when a little pamphlet was placed in my hands, and, although at that time I had been bedridden for more than six months, I determined, after reading some of the wonderful testimonials therein of cases similar to mine, which had been completely cured by the timely use of Vogeler's Curative Compound, to try some, especially as my doctors failed to even benefit me, and I had almost given up all hope of ever being well again. It is most interesting, and, in fact, marvelous to relate, that the very first dose of fifteen drops relieved me. It was not long before I was able to get up and about; three months from taking the first dose I was enjoying better health than I had been for fourteen years. I continued well until a few months back, when I was taken ill again, my troubles being dyspepsia and constipation. I had a doctor attending me for a month, but continued to grow worse, until I again found myself bedridden, when I bethought myself of my old medicine, Vogeler's Curative Compound, which I immediately sent for and took in place of the doctor's medicine; at that time I had not had a movement of the bowels for five days, but Vogeler's Curative Compound soon put me on my feet again—in fact, completely cured me a second time, but, of course, this attack was not as bad as the first, yet I fully believe I should not have been alive today had it not been for Vogeler's Curative Compound. If I had only thought to have taken it when my last illness took place, I should not only have been saved much suffering, but a $75 doctor's bill."

Mrs. Nettleton said: "I have recommended Vogeler's Curative Compound for indigestion and eczema, and in every case it has proved a cure beyond a doubt. Mr. Swinbank, our chemist, has sent me the names of no end of people who have been cured by Vogeler's Curative Compound. By the way, the proprietors have so much confidence in this great London physician's discovery, that they will send a sample free to any person sending name and address and naming this paper." St. Jacob's Oil Co, 205 Clay Street, Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Nettleton is a confectioner, in the Brighton Road, where she has been established many years, and is honored and respected by all classes. Her statements as regards Vogeler's Curative Compound may, therefore, be regarded as reliable evidence of its great value. The public, however, may look upon this remarkable statement as one of the many which we are constantly receiving from grateful people all over the world, who have been cured of various maladies by the use of this wonderful remedy, which is the result of an eminent physician's life-long experience. These people are nearly always representative and well-known citizens.

GORGEOUS AFFAIR

F. AUGUSTUS HEINZE PARALYZES THE SOCIETY PEOPLE OF BUTTE.

GIVES A SWELL DINNER DANCE

MOST ELABORAE AFFAIR EVER SEEN OUTSIDE OF PARIS OR NEW YORK.

FLOWERS AND WINE IN PLENTY

AFFAIR GIVEN IN HONOR OF A GERMAN MILLIONAIRE CAPITALIST.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 13.—F. Augustus Heinze, the young mining Napoleon, Saturday night gave a dinner and dance at his bachelor quarters on Broadway and the young men who came away from there Sunday morning say it was the swellest thing of the kind ever seen outside of Paris, or perhaps New York. The affair was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Watjen of Bremen. Watjen is immensely rich and is a member of an extensive shipping firm, and a great amount of his money has been devoted to backing Heinze in his fight against the Amalgamated company. Those who point him out on the street and at the social functions to which he has been subjected in Butte tell it that some day, provided that several other personages died in the meanwhile,

He Will Become a Count.

He came to Butte, it is said, for the purpose of examining the mines and smelters of the Heinze company and to be looked upon as Heinze's German royal relative and financial backer. This has been so successfully done that Heinze's stock has risen several points in Butte during the past week. Mrs. Watjen wore a wealth of jewels at the social gathering.

"I am told her diamonds cost $600,000," said one young society lady, whose eyes sparkled with envy as she looked at the magnificent tiara, the glistening dog collar and the dazzling strings of diamonds and pearls that dangled down to the knees.

Judge Harney There.

Several hundred of Butte's best people were guests at the dinner-dance, among the distinguished ones being Judge E. W. Harney of the district bench, whose name has become familiar throughout the land in connection with Heinze's litigation and favorable decisions.

The floral decorations were magnificent and cost thousands of dollars. There were twenty dozen bridesmaids roses that cost $100 a dozen, and corsages for the ladies with yards of pink ribbons on each. The place was choked with costly flowers, and the wine, "there were rafts of it," said one lady, "and everybody was sober." Everybody is talking about Heinze's dinner-dance.

ARMY OFFICER SEEKS DEATH.

Prevented From Taking His Life After Desperate Struggle.

San Francisco, Jan. 13.—Capt. W. J. D. Horne, of the Ninth cavalry, U. S. A., made a deliberate attempt at suicide in a fruit store owned by A. Dalporto. Dalporto was dressing a chicken in the rear part of the store when the captain walked hastily up to him, and asked whether the knife he was using was sharp. "It is," said Dalporto, and in an instant Horne grabbed it and slashed himself across the throat. Dalporto grappled with the captain and a desperate struggle followed in which the fruit man received a slight gash on the right side of his neck. The shouting and the scuffle between the two men, both standing six feet high and each weighing 200 pounds, brought a crowd, and with the aid of several men Horne was overpowered and taken to a hospital. He will probably recover from his wounds. Capt. Horne arrived from Manila in December. While in the service at Manila the captain was seriously ill in the hospital, suffering from dysentery and fever, and has been an invalid for some time. He was to have appeared soon before a retiring board.

NAVAL OFFICER SUICIDES.

While Delirious From Typhoid He Cuts His Throat.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 13. — Assistant Surgeon J. J. Buchanan, U. S. N., cut his throat with a razor, dying while delirious at his ward in the naval hospital on Coaster's Harbor Island. He was assigned to duty on the Constellation Jan. 2. About that time he was taken ill with typhoid fever and was sent to the naval hospital. Dr. Buchanan recently received his appointment from Texas, coming to this station from the cruiser Columbia. He was twenty-four years old.

Killed by a Robber.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 13. — Roy Iden, aged twenty-two years, was shot and killed by a robber in a butcher shop where he was employed as clerk. Iden was making change for a customer when two men entered and commanded them to hold up their hands. Iden instead grasped a revolver, when one of the robbers shot him dead. The robbers escaped.

Charged With Criminal Assault.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 13. — Joe Higginbotham, the negro janitor of the Floyd school building, was arrested on suspicion of having assaulted and attempted to murder Mrs. Ralph Webber. He will be taken to Roanoke.

Two Indicted; One Dismissed.

New Ulm, Minn., Jan. 13.—The grand jury has returned indictments against Frances Groebner, charging infanticide, and against Ferdinand Trebish for alleged assault. The case against Ed Jahnke and Carl Groehner on a charge of placing ties on the Minneapolis & St. Louis tracks was dismissed.

Twenty Lives Lost.

Yokohama, Jan. 13.—A fire in a wooden house here resulted in the death of twelve persons and the severe burning of twenty more.

Arrested at Spring Valley.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 11.—Anton H. Herstad, formerly under sheriff of this county, is under arrest at Spring Valley, Minn., charged with illicitly selling liquor. He is a restaurant keeper there.

FOUND AMERICANS BUYING LAND AT SASKATCHEWAN, WESTERN CANADA.

A Michigan Farmer Visits Saskatoon and is Well Pleased.

Mr. S. K. Lent was a delegate sent from the farmers of Allegan County, Michigan, to Western Canada, to report on the prospects for successful settlement. His report is as follows: I went from Winnipeg to Edmonton, thence east one hundred miles by wagon. I found the country in that vicinity a rich, black loam, varying from 12 inches to 3 feet deep; the crops are simply something enormous; wheat and oats by actual measurement often standing five feet in height. I have been a farmer for forty years, and consider myself a fair judge of the yield of grain, and I saw wheat that would yield 50 bushels per acre, and oats that would yield 100 bushels per acre; not one alone, but a good many. As for root crops and garden truck, in no country have I ever seen their equal for all kinds except corn and tomatoes; the nights being too cool for these to ripen well. As a stock country it has no equal. East of Edmonton, on the head waters of the Vermillion River, I saw hay meadows containing from 10 to 100 acres, the grass standing 4 feet high, and would often cut 3 to 4 tons to the acre. From Edmonton I passed through some fine locations, namely, Wetaskiwin, Lacombe and other points.

From McLeod I went to Regina, thence to Prince Albert, 247 miles north of the main line. For the first fifty miles is fine farming country, but the next hundred miles is more of a stock country. Then at Saskatoon, Rosthern and Duck Lake I found some very fine farming country, so good that I found a party of Americans from Minnesota buying land for themselves—one party buying 12 sections, and the other 20 sections of land for themselves, which they proposed to improve at once.

I have traveled over twenty-three different States and Territories in our Union, and never in my life time have I ever seen such magnificent crops and especially as fine a stock country.

The Petition Was Granted.

A pretty little anecdote is going the rounds of the Roman press. An old lady, the widow of an officer, who had for many years appealed to the Italian government for recognition of her husband's services, but had never received an answer. A bright idea came to her, and she wrote to "Her Royal Highness, the Princess Yolanda."

When the letter was handed to the king, he read it with a smile, and then bade his chamberlain take it to the princess and read it to her. The chamberlain went to the baby and gravely read the letter aloud to her, and then returned to the king.

"Well," said the king, "what did the princess say?"

"Nothing, your majesty."

"Very well. Silence gives consent. See that the lady's petition is attended to."—New York Press.

An Important Discovery.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 13.—A sensational statement is made by Mr. Benjamin Major, whose home is at the corner of Jane and Hurlbut Ave., this city.

Mr. Major says that he has found a remedy which will positively cure all Kidney and Bladder troubles. He suffered himself for a long time with these diseases in the most painful form, and during his illness experimented with a great many medicines without getting any relief. Finally, he tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and, to his great joy, was cured completely.

The statement he makes seems to have ample confirmation in reports being published every day of wonderful cures by this remedy.

DEATH IN FLAMES

SEVEN PERSONS LOSE THEIR LIVES IN A BURNING BUILDING.

WHOLE FAMILY IS WIPED OUT

AWAKEN TO FIND ESCAPE FROM THE BUILDING CUT OFF BY THE FLAMES.

OWNER OF BUILDING ARRESTED

TOLD THE POLICE THAT HE ACCIDENTALLY DROPPED A LAMP.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Henry Pearlstein, his wife and five children, ranging in age from one and one-half years to twelve years, were burned to death early yesterday in a fire that destroyed a two-story frame building. Joseph Supowski, who owned the building, and Karl Brackl, his brother-in-law, have been arrested pending an investigation. Supowski carried an insurance of $9,000 on the building and its contents.

The Pearlsteins and another family lived in the rooms above a shoe store and were asleep when the fire started. Supowski told the police yesterday that he accidentally dropped a lamp. A few minutes after the fire began there was a loud explosion that blew out the front of the store and hurled some of the contents of the windows into the middle of the street. Plate glass windows on the opposite side of Broadway were shattered and the report of the explosion was heard two blocks away. The flames enveloped the building in a short time. The family living in the rear flat barely escaped with their lives.

The Pearlsteins were awakened but before they could reach the only stairway leading from their rooms the fire had undermined the floor in the hallway and it collapsed, carrying them down into a mass of flames. Their charred bodies were found four hours after the firemen had extinguished the flames. The body of the mother and baby were found together, the little one tightly clasped in its mother's arms. Pearlstein's body was found close to that of his wife. He also held one of the children in his arms. The bodies of the other three children were found huddled together close to the father's body.

My brother, Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia, will appear as my representative and will be able to express to you once more my sincere feelings and friendship for the United States and their illustrious head. —William, I. R."

President Roosevelt replied as follows, in German:

"Your majesty's intention to send over your yacht Hohenzollern to attend the christening by my daughter of your new yacht is the source of great pleasure and satisfaction to me. I can assure you a hearty welcome for your brother, Admiral Prince Henry, to whom I shall personally express my sincere feelings of esteem for your majesty as well as my best wishes for the welfare of the German people. —"Theodore Roosevelt."

FOUR HUNDRED MILES AN HOUR.

Electrician Applies for Patent on a Car That Will Move Quickly.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 13. — Edward A. Kelly, a Norfolk electrician, has applied for a patent upon a car to be operated by electricity which he believes will carry the mails overland at the rate of 400 miles an hour. A working model shown appears to warrant him in this belief. The car is ship-shaped, with wheels as high as the car itself. It is built on the theory that a magnet always goes to the larger end of a piece of iron. Between the rails Kelly has arranged a series of iron plates, small at one end and large at the other, the narrow ends all pointing one way. The magnetized car used as a model follows these plates at high speed. As it reaches the end of each plate the current is automatically cut off and the car jumps to the next plate. A half-mile circular track and a larger car will be built for the inventor's next experiment.

Journalism in France.

Every Frenchman is said to be, or to have been, a journalist, and a recent census of the French press would seem to bear out this. Paris can boast, just now, of nearly 3,000 journals, of which forty-two were started in 1900. The dailies number 140, the weeklies 751 and the monthlies 933. In the provinces there are 3,349, or 123 fewer than at the census of the preceding year. The patriarch of all is the Gazette de France, which was founded in 1631. As regards the number of Paris dailies, it should be mentioned that some of the 140 exist only in title, for in several instances the same matter is utilized under different names.—Athenaeum.

NEW TAX STATUTE

COMMISSION PRESENTS A LENGTHY REPORT TO GOV. VAN SANT.

PROPOSES RADICAL CHANGES

SHIFT THE BURDEN OF TAXATION FROM THE MAN OF MODERATE MEANS.

PUBLICITY IS PROVIDED FOR EVERY MAN MAY KNOW IF HIS NEIGHBOR IS PAYING HIS JUST SHARE.

St. Paul, Jan. —The state tax commission has reported. A document containing 85,000 words was deposited on Gov. Van Sant's desk yesterday. It is signed by Gideon S. Ives, Henry W. Childs and William J. Hahn, who have been laboring since last April to construct a new and improved tax code for Minnesota.

The changes made by the new code are in some respects radical and far-reaching. The commissioners believe they will result in shifting the burden of taxation from the man of moderate means, and, adding many millions to the assessment rolls by reaching interests heretofore inadequately taxed. This will so increase the total valuation that the rate may be decreased.

The salient features of the new system are:

First—Improved machinery.

Second—Publicity.

Third—Assessment at full value.

Fourth—Assessment of franchise values.

The state board of equalization is abolished because of its tendency to keep down values, each locality striving so to do through its representative. The local board of equalization is for the same reason. The whole machinery of assessment is constructed as a compact agency for ferreting out true values and equalizing the burdens. The state tax commission is a permanent body in constant supervision. It visits localities, requires reports to be made by all corporations, and personally attends to all abatements and rebates.

Done Away With

Under the state board is the county supervisor of assessments. He is elected by the people but is subordinate to the state tax commission. He must oversee the work of the assessors and see to it that values are uniform. He also watches to see that no interest escapes, and sits with the county board of equalization.

More time is allowed all assessing officers for performing their work. Listing is to be done April 1, before the spring movement of goods. The assessor has until July 1 to make his return to the county auditor. The county board of review will meet on the third Monday in July, and the state board of review on the third Tuesday in September. The time when taxes are due is changed from Jan. 1 to Jan. 15.

An oath is absolutely required of each taxpayer at the time he certifies to his list.

Publicity is attained, not through the newspapers, but through the mails. When assessments are reported to the county auditor he is to printed, and mail it to every taxpayer in the county, that each one may see what his neighbors are paying. It is intended by this that a man shall be worth as much to the assessor as he is to his bank, or to the commercial agency.

Have the Full List

All property must be assessed at its full market value. Any other method, the report declares, is productive of inequalities. This will increase the personal property valuation many fold.

Corporations will be reached in every manner possible to exact the full valuation.

First, exhaustive reports will be required, not only of the tangible assets, but of amount of business done, capitalization, etc. These will serve to inform the assessing officers of the real value.

Franchises of gas, water, electric, heating, power, wharf and boom companies will be assessed. The value of each will be reached by adding together the value of the capital stock and the funded or bonded debt, and deducting therefrom the value of real and personal property. This will, in effect, assess the companies on the market value of their stocks and bonds.

The street railways wanted a gross earnings tax, but are held to the same system of ad valorem taxation, including franchises. This will increase the assessed valuation of such companies many fold.

Telegraph, telephone, express, sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies

Will Report Direct

to the state auditor, and will be assessed by the tax commission on the basis of the value of the capital stock and funded debt. This will then be apportioned to localities on a mileage basis. This is a radical change from the present gross earnings system.

The commission would have preferred to tax mines on their output, but was obliged to adopt an ad valorem basis. The assessment will be made, not by local officers, but by the state board of review, which will be informed as to the actual value of the properties and will assess them as real estate. The assessment may be changed from year to year, however.

With regard to the collection of taxes, the tax title shark is discouraged. Such safeguards surround tax sales that a tax title will be practically as good as a warranty deed. Instead of selling to the highest bidder, the sheriff will sell to the person bidding the property in for the amount charged, at the lowest rate of interest.

The machinery of the new act is not expensive. The state tax commissioners will each receive $3,000 per year. County supervisors of assessments will receive $4 per day for the time employed, except in counties of over 75,000, where they will be kept at work continually. These are the only officials added.

In view of the importance of the changes, there is no doubt about the calling of an extra session. After sufficient time for reading the report and forming ideas upon it, the legislature will be called together to adopt or reject it.

BANK ROBBERS FAIL.

Work All Night on the Safe, but Without Success.

Carbondale, Ill., Jan. 16.—A bold but unsuccessful attempt at bank robbery occurred early yesterday at Cobden, eight miles south of this city. Nine men bound and gagged the night marshal of the village and took him into the bank, when they attempted to open the safe. He was placed in the front office and the robbers drilled the door open. They worked diligently until near daylight but were unable to get into the inner vault before dawn and the robbers fled without securing any money.

TOOK HIM FOR AN ENEMY.

Man Killed by a Shot Fired Through a Door.

Shawnee, Okla., Jan. 21.—B. R. Hunt of Huntsville, Mo., was shot and killed here yesterday by John Seville, who mistook him for an enemy. Hunt went to Seville's home and demanded admittance. Seville had experienced trouble Saturday with other persons, and supposing that they had returned to open the quarrel refused to admit Hunt and shot through the closed door. Hunt dropped dead on the steps.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

Half a Spanish Town Is Destroyed —Many Are Dead.

Barcelona, Jan. 21.—The explosion of the boiler of a spinning mill near Manresa last Saturday destroyed half the village of Puente de Vilumara. The hospital at Manresa is filled with the injured. Sixteen mutilated bodies of working people buried in the debris have been recovered. These include the manager of the spinning mill and his two sisters. Of the persons injured thirty are not expected to recover. The dead included many children. The queen regent has wired her condolences.

A HEAP OF RUINS

ALL THAT NOW REMAINS OF FOUR LARGE BUILDINGS IN DETROIT.

COLLAPSE WITHOUT ANY WARNING

NO ONE SEEMS TO KNOW WHAT CAUSED THE SUDDEN CATASTROPHE.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN MANY DEATHS

IF THE ACCIDENT HAD OCCURRED ON ANY OTHER DAY THAN SUNDAY.

Detroit, Jan. 21. — Four buildings each four stories high, located in the heart of the wholesale district, collapsed at 8:30 last night, without any apparent cause and all that now remains is a smouldering heap of ruins. The buildings were a part of the block bounded by Jefferson avenue and Shelby and Griswold streets, and were occupied by five concerns and their stocks are a total loss, which is estimated at $152,000 exclusive of the loss on the buildings, which amounts to $50,500. The buildings joined each other at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Shelby street. No one seems to know what caused the collapse of the buildings. On Sunday night that district is practically deserted and the few who were in the vicinity say that the buildings seemed to fall into a heap without apparent cause, making a noise like the rumbling of distant thunder. There are evidences of an explosion about the ruins, but no one heard a sound of such an explosion. The walls of the rear part of the Maddocks Glove company's building are still standing to the height of two stories, but the roof of this part of the building lies turned in the middle of Shelby street, and a large iron smokestack lies on the sidewalk on the opposite side of the street, mashed against the buildings there, as if driven by force. Experts from the Detroit Gas company's office made an examination of the ruins but said they were unable to find evidences of a gas explosion.

It was fortunate that the wreck occurred on Sunday night. Had it happened during the business hours the loss of life would have been appalling, as there are approximately 200 persons employed by the various firms. They would have been caught in a veritable death trap and crushed and buried before they could have been rescued. The buildings collapsed into a heap and in a short space of time the inflammable material caught fire from the furnaces used for heating the buildings. There were no watchmen about the premises, consequently there will be no loss of life. No one was injured nor is there any one who can give a definite reason for the catastrophe.

Famous Female Filipino General Is Caught by Americans.

Manila, Jan. 21. — Sergeant Kichline, with eight men, has surprised and captured the famous female general who for two years has been fighting the Americans as she formerly fought the Spaniards. She boasts that she commanded 300 men of the rifles in Laguna de Bay. She has freely disclosed the location of the insurgents, and will make overtures to them for surrender.

The rebel leaders in Batangas, who have strong influence with the peasants, are cunningly proclaiming that civil war is in progress in the United States. They say that Washington is besieged, and that there has been a battle at Chicago, with heavy carnage. The Russian fleet visiting Manila is pictured as destroying the American navy at Cavite.

Gen. Bell, with 2,000 men, is successfully cornering and punishing Gen. Malvar. It is reported that during the week his command killed a hundred insurgents, wounded 30 and captured 70 rifles. Over 20 tons of supplies were capture and destroyed. Lieut. Ely of the Fifteenth cavalry and 4 men were wounded and 2 men were killed. Capt. Alexander and 12 men of the Eleventh infantry stormed a fortified hill and killed 5 rebels. Among the killed was a native presidente and some officers.

Bauman says after he had repeatedly requested Garwood to leave, he opened the door, with his shotgun in hand, and demanded that Garwood leave the premises, which he refused to do. Bauman says he then saw Garwood draw a revolver. Bauman raised his shotgun and fired into Garwood's left breast, causing instant death. Bauman gave himself up.

HIS LIFE FOR THE TREASURE.

Diamond Dealer Found Murdered in Front of His Safe.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 21. — Bela E. Brown, aged sixty-five, a prominent dealer in diamonds and manufacturer of jewelry, was found murdered in his store here last night. His legs were tied together, and he was gagged with a long red neck scarf. At the back of the head was a hole extending into the brain, and there were several gashes in the scalp, evidently made by a hammer, which was found near the body smeared with blood and white hairs from the head of the victim. The murdered man's head was covered with blood and a pool of it formed on top of a small chest of drawers over which the head lay. All about were evidences of a determined struggle but a thorough search failed to discover any positive clue as to the identity of the murderers. From the position of the body in front of the safe the conclusion was reached by the police that the murderers had placed Mr. Brown before the safe, which was locked, and which contained thousands of dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry, and tried to force him to work the combination for them. His right hand was covered with blood, indicating that he had raised it to his head, when he was struck, and tried to ward off the other blows which followed. The murderers secured nothing of value, perhaps a diamond stud which Mr. Brown wore, and which was missing.

JEWELS ARE GONE

MINNEAPOLIS TRAVELING MAN IS ROBBED AT GLENDIVE, MONTANA.

$20,000 WORTH OF JEWELRY TAKEN

TRUNKS ARE STOLEN FROM A BAGGAGEMAN AND BROKEN OPEN.

AN UNUSUALLY BOLD ROBBERY

EXPRESS AGENT SLEPT IN ADJOINING ROOM WHILE THE ROBBERS WORKED.

Glendive, Mont., Jan. 21. — Robbers yesterday morning secured about twenty thousand dollars worth of unset and set diamonds by stealing two iron-bound trunks from the baggage room of the Northern Pacific station and breaking them open. A bag of diamonds and from 300 to 400 rings unmounted in gold settings were stolen. A tray containing twenty-four set diamonds were overlooked by the robbers.

The trunks were the property of C. R. Clausen, traveling representative of S. H. Clausen & Co., wholesale manufacturing jewelers of Minneapolis, who arrived from the East Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, and who left the trunks in charge of the baggage agent.

The robbery was an unusually bold one, as four men were in the second story and the express agent slept in the adjoining room. The robbers forced the baggageroom window with a pinch bar, removed the two trunks, each weighing 250 pounds, through the window and broke them open within twenty feet of the station platform, where they were found yesterday morning. The robbers were undoubtedly old hands and selected the best time, during the absence of the express agent, to do the work.

The local officers have arrested Jimmy McCarty, an ex-prize fighter, who has been acting suspiciously and who carried two large six-shooters when arrested.

UNDER ADVISEMENT.

Another Legal Round in the Montana Copper Fight.

In presenting the motion to set aside the injunction Attorney Evans called attention to the fact that a similar action was pending in the United States court and that Judge Knowles had made an order enjoining McGinnis from further prosecution of the suit in the district court. The motion to set aside the injunction was taken under advisement.

Many protested against this action, but all were compelled to prove they had been vaccinated successfully recently or else submit to the new operation.

CONGRESS

RESUME OF THE WEEK'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 14.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Nelson of Minnesota called up the bill providing for the establishment of a department of commerce. He explained the necessity, which, he said, existed for the passage of such a measure, and was plied with questions by several senators, who said that sufficient time had not been allowed for looking into the merits of the measure. Mr. Teller criticised that feature relating to the transfer of the geological survey, while Mr. Hale said that the bill provided for a department which ultimately would be one of the largest in the government. The bill finally went over, subject to call by Mr. Nelson. The senate was in executive session for an hour and a half.

In the House.

The house of representatives spent the day in general discussion of the pension appropriation bill, the first of the annual budgets. The debate took a wide range. Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio and Mr. Hepburn of Iowa denounced a report presented to the last G. A. R. encampment criticising the course of themselves and other members of congress on the veteran "preference" bill which was defeated at the last session. They explained that their opposition to the bill was due to the incorporation in the bill of a clause which had not been indorsed by the G. A. R., placing veterans of the Spanish war in the preferential class. Mr. Rixey of Virginia caused something of a stir on the Democratic side by advancing a proposition to open the doors of the national soldiers' homes to ex-Confederates and to furnish federal aid to state Confederate homes. Mr. Richardson of Alabama was the only Democrat who joined Mr. Rixey in support of it.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 15. — For the first time this session the Philippine question was touched on the senate. The interest taken indicates that it will occupy the attention of the upper branch of congress for some time when the tariff bill is reported. The Philippines were the subject of an address by Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts, who spoke on his resolution introduced Monday providing for the appointment of a senate committee to investigate the administration of those islands. Mr. Hoar spoke at some length regarding the unreliability of statements which have been made from time to time regarding the situation in the Philippines and the causes which led to the outbreak.

Mr. Lodge, Mr. Hoar's colleague, said he regarded the resolution as a reflection on the Philippines committee, of which he was chairman, and the necessity for the latter would cease were this resolution to be adopted. His committee, he said, was perfectly able to handle any investigation which might be conducted. Mr. Carmack agreed with him. The discussion was leading rapidly to an opening up of the whole Philippine question when it was agreed that the resolution should go over until to-day. Mr. Mason of Illinois made a speech in favor of reciprocity with Cuba and discussed the protective policy generally.

In the House.

The house continued the debate on the pension appropriation bill yesterday and devoted much time to the proposition advanced by Mr. Rixey of Virginia Monday, to open the doors of the soldiers' homes to ex-Confederate veterans. Two notable speeches were made in support of the proposition, one by Mr. Gardner, a Michigan Republican, and the other by Mr. De Armond, a Missouri Democrat. Mr. De Armond's eloquence aroused both sides of the house. The Republicans, with the exception of Mr. Gardner, took no part in the discussion of the Rixey suggestion, which met with much opposition on the Democratic side on the ground that it was utterly impracticable. Mr. Lamb of Virginia read a number of telegrams from prominent ex-Confederates of Richmond protesting against the scheme.

In the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 16.—A spirited discussion was precipitated in the senate yesterday by some remarks submitted by Mr. Hale of Maine in respect to bills relating to the formation of a naval reserve which he introduced. He took strong ground against the organization of a naval reserve, his comments being construed by some of the senators into a reflection upon volunteer soldiers and land militia. Half a dozen senators were on their feet in an instant to defend the volunteers and the naval guard of the various states and the debate took so wide a range that senators went back in their references to the days of the Revolutionary war to seek illustrations for their arguments. While no action was possible at this time, it is likely that the discussion upon the measures, should they be reported, will be very lively. No business of special importance was transacted, the time of the senate being consumed by matters of routine.

In the House.

The house passed the pension appropriation bill which has been under discussion for three days and then adjourned until Saturday. The resolution prepared by the special committee on the McKinley memorial exercises, providing for an address by Secretary of State John Hay, in the hall of representatives Feb. 27, was adopted.

Washington, Jan. 17. — The senate yesterday for a brief time had under consideration the bill creating a department of commerce, and the discussion tended to show that the measure will have to be amended in many particulars before it can receive the approval of the senate. Serious objections were raised to the transfer to the proposed department of several important bureaus, now a part of other departments of the government. It was pointed out that if the bill as reported became a law it would create the greatest department of the government and that the secretary of commerce would have more power than the secretary of the treasury. Notice of several important amendments was given. A large number of uncontested bills and private pension measures were passed, after which the senate adjourned until Monday.

Letters From Harry E. Ives.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 15, 1902

Thinking that some of the readers of the Spectator would be interested in this section of the country. I will try and give some of the experiences of a couple of St. Hilaire citizens.

The writer and M. E. Bjerk left St. Hilaire Thursday January 9th arriving at St. Paul the next Morning. The same evening, we departed for Chicago on the Burlington Limited one of the finest trains in the country. In fact we have yet to find any service equal to it. We tried to do Chicago in two days but succeeded in seeing a very small part of the second largest city in our country.

Sunday evening we took the Illinois Central for New Orleans. A night's ride on an excellent train brought us to Memphis, Tenn. Here we get the first glimpse of the "Sunny South". There is some ice on the ponds but the sun is shining. Steamboats are unloading at the wharf and the colored citizens are very much in evidence. I saw the Mississipi river at Bemidji recently and it certainly has been doing some business and looks more like a river here.

It is 923 miles from Chicago to New Orleans and we made the run in 25 hours. In Tennessee we see many small hard wood saw mills and some good timber. The country is a timber country but most of the best has been cut. They raise cotton and corn down here but do not go at it in the northern way. Farm buildings are poor the fields are only patches. If a tree falls on a field they plow around it. In Mississipi the same conditions prevail. Once in a while we see a planters house which is in fair condition but the great majority of the buildings are poor shanties. They build their chimneys here on the outside of the house commencing on the ground They can work the land all the year here as they do not have frost enough to stop plowing.

A state senator who got off at Jackson, the capital of Miss. informed me that the white farmers of that state did little or no work, and the "niggers" only when they were compelled to. Northern industry should do wonders here but they say that the climate soon gets in its work and the northern gets just as lazy as the native in a few years. The soil is a clay and sand mixed and there is no stone in the country.

We arrived here Monday evening and have been busy looking over the town, which has about 300,000 people. You can see more kinds and colors of people here than in any town in the country. Dagoes Niggers and Sheenies seem to predominate. Canal street is a wide and nicely kept street but most of the streets are very narrow and extremely dirty. The sewers are the gutters and they do not smell good even in January. I would not care to be here in July.

We went down to the docks this morning and saw them unloading cotton bales, cotton seed, molasses, bannanas and rice. Niggers and Italians do the work and a white man stands every few feet to push them along. In one place there was a negro boss and he said "Move along gentlemen!"—but the white bosses did not say it that way. The men get from 25 to 50 cents an hour and the work looks hard. A planter who was unloading some barges told me that the negros spend their money as fast as they got it. Not one in a thousand trying to save their money.

It is quite warm here. A light overcoat for morning and evening is comfortable, but the middle of the day is warm. It is about like September with us. Living here is fairly cheap. You can get a dozen oysters on the shell for 10 cents or an excellent dinner with a bottle of wine and music on the side for $1.00 The oysters are small, but good, and fish is abundant and cheap room rent is high and you do not get much of a room for less than a $1.00 a day.

If we do not change our plans we will take the boat for Havana next Saturday, it is a 50 hour trip and we may feel bad before we land. If Bjerk gets seasick I will tell all about it, but I have a presentiment that it may not be that way.

New Orleans, Jan. 17, 1902.

We have seen considerable of New Orleans since I wrote before. Yesterday we were down on the docks and went aboard a very large German freighter, she was a very large steamer, built of iron and was nearly loaded with cotton, rice, grain and lumber. She takes a cargo of 7000 tons, we were also out to the cemetery it is one of the sights of the town. The water comes very near the surface so they build on top of the ground and there are some very interesting monuments. Monuments to the confederate dead are frequent and some are very beautiful. The French Market, the the U. S. Barracks and the negro shanty town, we have visited and found interesting. Lake Pontchartrain, the summer resort of New Orleans, was visited yesterday. It is a fresh water lake 24 by 60 miles and they have a miniature "Coney Island". You can "loop the loops," "shoot the schutes," take a ride on the merry go round, go up in the Ferris wheel or most any kind of foolishness. We went out on the street car but there is an excellent road out there made of shells. They use oyster and clam shels here the same as we do gravel for roads. and they make good roads We have engaged passage of the "Chalmette," a steamer belonging to the Southern Pacific, and expect to be at Havana on Monday January 20th. The weather while we have been here has been delightful. It has only rained once, and that time in the early morning. and the temparture has ranged from 38 to 60.

However they have colder weather here than this and frosts are liable this month and next. In Cuba where we will be on Monday there never was known to be a frost.

Yours truly,
H. E. Ives.

POCKET COMPASSES.

Thousands of Them Sold Yearly to Hunters and Others.

"Pocket compasses," said a dealer in such things, "cost from 25 cents to $10 each, and they are made in various sizes, from tiny compasses half an inch or less in diameter up to those of about the size of a hunting case watch.

"Many compasses are carried in nickeled hunting cases. Some of the tiny open compasses are carried for a charm on watch guards.

"In the cheaper pocket compasses the needle turns on a brass bearing; in the costlier compasses on a bearing of agate. In either, of course, the needle will point north, but the compass with the agate bearing will wear much longer.

"A good pocket compass will last a lifetime. A considerable part of the cost of the more expensive pocket compasses may be due to the material used in them and to elaborateness of finish.

"A ten dollar compass, for instance, might have a pearl face, and so on, but a good compass, with an agate bearing, as good a compass, in fact, as a man needs, can be bought for $1.50.

"Every wise sportsman carries a compass, and compasses are carried by various other people. There are sold of pocket compasses of one sort and another thousands yearly."—New York Sun.

A Willing Martyr.

Schoolteachers sometimes ask their pupils queer questions, if one may believe a story told by the youngest member of the Withington family.

His mother one morning discovered a shortage in her supplies of pies, baked the day before, and her suspicions fell upon Johnny.

"Johnny," she said, "do you know what became of that cherry pie that was on the second shelf in the pantry?"

"Yes, ma'am," he replied. "I ate it. But I had to."

"You had to!" exclaimed his astonished mother. "What do you mean, child?"

"The teacher asked yesterday if any of us could tell her how many stones there are in a cherry pie, and I couldn't find out without eating the whole pie, could I? There's just 142."—Youth's Companion.

Father's Idea of Shoes.

"Spell shoes," said the teacher.

"S-h-o-e-s," returned the little one promptly.

"Correct," said the teacher. "Of course you know what they are."

The little one nodded his head violently.

"My papa says," he announced, "that shoes are what drive the father of a family into bankruptcy." — Chicago Post.

A Point of Order.

One of the conspicuous features in the decorations of a certain official building is a full length portrait of George Washington. Being just behind the speaker's chair, it is in full sight of everybody who rises to speak. During a heated discussion, which involved the honor of the state and nation, a member rose and, pointing to the portrait, began in oratorical style "By those eyes that never quailed before an enemy, by that nose"—

Then he was interrupted by a member in the rear, who rose to a point of order.

"Mr. Chairman," said the objector. "I claim it is out of order under parliamentary rules to call the ayes and noes in a committee of the whole."

HAIR OF THE SLOTH.

It Is Green In Color and For a Peculiar Reason.

It is a very curious fact that certain plants grow and thrive on the hair of sloths. Apart from its extremely coarse and brittle nature, the most striking peculiarity of the outer hair of the sloth is its more or less decidedly green tinge. Now, green is a very rare color among mammals, and there ought, therefore, to be some special reason for its development in the sloth, and, as a matter of fact, the means by which this coloration is produced is one of the most marvelous phenomena in the whole animal kingdom, so marvelous, indeed, that it is at first almost impossible to believe that it is true.

The object of this peculiar type of coloration is, of course, to assimilate the animal to its leafy surroundings and thus to render it as inconspicuous as possible, and when hanging in its usual position from the underside of a bough its long, coarse and green tinged hair is stated to render the sloth almost indistinguishable from the bunches of gray green lichens among which it dwells. In the outer sheath of the hairs of the ai there are a number of transverse cracks, and in these cracks grows a primitive type of plant —namely, a one celled alga.

And for the benefit of nonbotanical readers it may be well to mention here that algæ, among which seaweeds are included, form a group of flowerless plants related on the one hand to the fungi and on the other to the lichens. In the moist tropical forests forming the home of the sloths the algæ in the cracks of their hairs grow readily and thus communicate to the entire coat that general green tint which, as already said, is reported to render them almost indistinguishable from the clusters of lichen among which they hang suspended.—Knowledge.

THE FATE OF CORONETS.

Lord Brougham's Became G. W. Childs' Fruit Dish.

Peers and their coronets are soon parted when the ceremonial use has been served. The fate of one coronet is told by a correspondent of M. A. P. He writes: "When I was staying some years ago in Philadelphia with G. W. Childs, the well known proprietor of The Ledger newspaper there, I noticed at dinner one evening a peculiarly shaped gilt stand used as a support for a china dish containing grapes. My host, observing that I was scanning it rather closely, said: 'Oh, that is the coronet Lord Brougham wore at the queen's coronation. I have taken out the velvet cap and turned it upside down. The golden balls form excellent feet, and it makes a most elegant dish stand.' Which it certainly did."

But what is the fate of coronets compared with the fate of coronation robes? A large portion of George IV.'s wardrobe, including the coronation robes, was put at public auction in the summer of 1831. There were 120 lots disposed of, and some of the items are interesting. A pair of fine kid trousers, of ample dimensions and lined with white satin, was sold for 12 shillings. The sumptuous crimson velvet coronation mantle, with silver star, embroidered with gold, which cost originally, according to the auctioneer, £500, was knocked down for 47 guineas; a richly embroidered silver tissue coronation waistcoat and trunk hose, £13. The purple velvet coronation robe, embroidered with gold, of which it was said to contain 200 ounces, brought only £55, although it cost his late majesty £300. An elegant and costly green velvet mantle, lined with ermine of the finest quality, presented by the Emperor Alexander to George IV., which cost 1,000 guineas, was sold for £125.

A Singular Bequest.

A peculiar fate is said to overhang the family of the late Sir Julian Goldsmid. An ancestor of his, so says the legend, once gave shelter to a rabbi, who, at his death, left to him a bequest of a mysterious box, which was on no account to be opened until after the customary seven days of mourning. If opened before that time, a curse would fall upon the family.

Curiosity got the better of superstition, and the box was opened before the seven days were up. In it was found a document which said that as the injunction of the rabbi had not been heeded no future owner of the estate would be succeeded by a son. And such, strangely enough, has been the case ever since.

Arab Music.

Arab music has been described as the singing of a prima donna who has ruptured her voice in trying to sing a duet with herself. Each note starts from somewhere between a sharp and a flat, but does not stop even there and splits up into four or more portions, of which no person can be expected to catch more than one at a time.

Intentional.

The caller had a grievance.

"That communication I sent you yesterday," he said, "was signed 'More Anon' as plainly as the words could be written. You printed it in your paper this morning 'Omega.'"

"I know it," replied the editor. "We didn't intend there should be any more anon."—Chicago Tribune.

Mrs. Buggins—Well, the crime is on my own head.—Philadelphia Record.

Esteem cannot be where there is no confidence, and there can be no confidence where there is no respect.—Giles.

The straight tree is the first to be cut down. The well of sweet water is the first to be exhausted.

Of Course She Was Glad.

"So you overcame that old antipathy of yours," her husband remarked, "and called on Mrs. Bobbles?"

"Yes."

"Do you think she was glad to see you?"

"I am sure of it."

"Ahem! You must have some reason for that belief outside of her assurances."

"I have. I had on the old dress that was made over twice, my hat was out of style, and my hair had become uncurled, while she had on a gown that could not have come from anywhere but Paris. Could she help being glad to see me?"—Leslie's Weekly.

A Church Kicker.

"When I go to the theater," says a churchman quoted in the Philadelphia Record, "I sit in a finely upholstered seat. Underneath is a rack for my hat, and on the back of the seat ahead is a place to hang my overcoat. In the church which I attend every Sunday is an uncomfortable, straight backed pew, into which the ushers always insist upon crowding visitors after my wife and I are seated until sometimes six persons are seated in a space scarcely large enough for four to sit comfortably. Hats and wraps must look out for themselves.

"Of course, when I go to the theater I pay for my seat; but, in spite of the fact that salvation is free, I also pay pew rent in church. I might also enter a protest against women wearing their hats in church, but I won't. Sometimes it's a relief to retire behind one."

F. P. Rasmusson, of Moorhead, newly graduated as a physician, called on friends here on Thursday last. He is on a prospecting tour over the country looking for a good location where he can begin practicing his profession.

The Ladies Aid will meet at the home of Mrs. G. A. Brooks on Thursday afternoon Jan. 30th. A cordial welcome is extended to all the ladies. A team will be at the M. E. parsonage at half past two to take the ladies out to Mrs. Brook's.

The Red Lake Falls Board of Trade had a meeting last week at which they passed resolutions opposing the proposed dam at the outlet of Red Lake. A copy of the resolution has been forwarded to our senators and representatives in Congress.

Walt McAndress has commenced work on a new residence addition to the Ives' building just north of the Imperial Drug Store. Mr. McAndress recently purchased the property from H. E. Ives and will move into it as soon as practicable.

Emil Brink went to Crookston on last Wednesday evening and remained until Friday. When he came back he looked somewhat weary and sad. He was one of a large class that was initiated into the Elks and blames his tired feeling on the work done by the antlered host.

T. J. Thorkelson and family left on Saturday evening for an extended trip through the south west. They intend to sojourn in St. Paul until Thursday when they will go to Chicago. From there they take the Santa Fe route through Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. When returning they will come through Colorado. They expect to be absent for about four months.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church held their meeting for the election of officers at the home of Mrs. J. K. Hannay. A large number were present. Mrs. Hannay served a very nice lunch after which the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Wm. H. Gooderham; vice president, Mrs. W. A. Arthur; secretary, Mrs. Wm. H. Amos; treasurer, Mrs. A. Dainard.

Thief River Gets the Mill

The hustling citizens of Thief River Falls made an extra effort last week in an attempt to secure the location of the Woolen Mills now located at Fosston—and they succeeded. The sum of $17,500 was subscribed in one day and the people there are jubilant. At the present time the mill employs about forty people but its capacity will be doubled when it moves to Thief River Falls. The amount subscribed by the citizens of Thief River Falls represents one half the capital stock of the concern.

A New Business House.

M. L. Hanson, of Hendrum, Minn., was here last Wednesday and leased the Eickhoff building for the purpose of starting a general merchandise business. Mr. Hanson expressed himself to the SPECTATOR as being well pleased with the business outlook here and feels confident of a good future for St. Hilaire. He expects to be ready to start his business here about the middle of February. Mr. Hanson has been for years one of the leaders in the business circles of Norman county and it is a forgone conclusion that he will enjoy a prosperous business here from the start.

To Prevent Runaways.

Frederick Phillippi, a Bavarian blacksmith, has just patented what he calls "an automatic unhitcher." This harness excels the very best ones now in use in our fire engine houses. By pulling a strap the harness drops completely off the horses and at the same time a break is applied. The value of this invention in a day when runaways are so frequent, is obvious. Still more valuable is "Golden Grain Belt" beer, for it insures against ill health. Brewed from the purest barley malt and hops, it is nourishing and refreshing. No home is complete without a case of this delicious beer. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Lang-Hall Wedding.

At noon to day Rev. Gooderham performed the ceremony uniting Arthur F. Lang and Miss Annie Elizabeth Hall in the holy bonds of matrimony. The wedding took place in the Hall building next to the Hotel Markham where the happy couple will begin housekeeping immediately. A number of invited guests witnessed the ceremony and partook of a sumptuous wedding dinner which was served immediately afterwards.

The bride is the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Hall, and is one of St. Hilaire's best known and most popular young ladies. She has been a resident of this village for about ten years and enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know her. The bridegroom is one of our leading business men and his ability and integrity in all his business dealings have made for him a most enviable reputation.

Mr. and Mrs. Lang have the heartfelt good wishes of the entire community for their prosperity and happiness.

The Creamery Question.

On last Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock a mass meeting of farmers, and others interested in the project of starting a creamery, was held in the village hall. The meeting was largely attended, there being about 150 persons present, and was most enthusiastic.

M. McAndress was elected chairman of the meeting and G. A. Brooks secretary.

A number of addresses were made and the speakers were all most attentively listened to. The proposition of starting a co-operative creamery was thoroughly discussed and it seemed as though all present were heartily in approval of such an institution.

Julius Pleth made a neat speech in behalf of the proposition in which he briefly outlined many of the advantages that would accrue to the farmers, the business men of St. Hilaire and the community at large. He promised to contribute the sum of $250 himself and also said that the people of St. Hilaire would contribute altogether $1,000 in cash and give a site for the necessary buildings free of charge.

Mr. Pleth's remarks were received with great enthusiasm, it being a well known fact that he always fulfills any promise he makes.

It being tacitly understood that the sense of the meeting was to establish a creamery a committee of five leading farmers was appointed to make a thorough canvass of the territory tributary to St. Hilaire with a view to ascertain how many cows were available to contribute the necessary milk supply and how much money can be raised among the owners of the cows towards starting the creamery, properly equipped and in first-class financial condition. The members of the committee were: A. Setterberg, Chas. Gustafson, August Swenson, N. A. Nelson, Louis Larson. This committe were instructed to report at another meeting to be held in the village hall here on Thursday the 23rd inst., (tomorrow) at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

At the meeting tomorrow a definite decision will be reached and it looks as if an organization would be effected at once and the creamery association commence life under conditions that will make it one of the most successful institutions of its kind in the state.

Got His Money.

When King Edward VII. was an undergraduate at Oxford, he was a great huntsman, and few men could beat him across country. On one occasion his royal highness and some other riders galloped into a farmyard by way of a short cut. The farmer, a sturdy yeoman, closed the gates and told the huntsmen they must pay £1 apiece for trespass.

One of the gentlemen smiled indulgently at the rustic and said, "But, my good man, this is the Prince of Wales."

The good man was in nowise abashed and retorted, "Prince or no prince, I'll have my money." And he got it.

How It Resembled Mother's.

"No," said Mr. Muddergrass to the restaurant man: "no, I'll not say that your pie is just like mother used to make, but I'll say this—it's pretty nigh as crusty as she used to git."—Baltimore American.

To the Business Men of St. Hilaire and Farmers of this Vicinity.

Having reason to believe and, in fact, having since been informed, that certain parties took offence at remarks which I made at the creamery meeting held at the village hall, Thursday the 16th inst. I wish to state that they might have been made in such a way as to be easily misconstrued. The idea I wished to convey is and was, that the system of paying cash for whatever articles you may wish to purchase is the better one for all concerned, both buyer and seller which no one will deny. The remark to which I refer is that I stated that the farmers with the cash in their possession which they would receive monthly from the sale of milk or cream would be in a position to purchase their goods wherever they might get them the cheapest, quality, of course, considered, and when I said it I meant it and do so yet.

Competition is the life of trade. If I in my business am not able to compete with the dealers in the same line in Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls you all know the results. So with the merchants. I fully believe and in fact know, that goods in St. Hilaire are sold as cheap as anywhere in the neighboring towns and it would be folly to believe that the farmers here, who for years have dealt with our old established merchants on whom they can rely, would be so indiscreet as to send away for their goods, to houses in the cities with whom they are not acquainted and such houses as are constantly sending out catalogues quoting low prices on inferior goods such as groceries, drygoods, clothing, hardware and furniture and ask them to ship their products for which they in a great many instances receive no pay. In this county, which I consider as great a dairy country as can be found anywhere in Iowa, Wisconsin or Southern Minnesota, on account of its nutritious wild grasses, timothy and clover, there is no reason why a creamery here properly conducted should not prove as great a success as it does elsewhere. In Freeborn county, this state, there are to-day fifty-seven creameries in operation and I am informed that at Red Lake Falls where a creamery is now being run successfully, that the farmers received an average of 18 cents per pound in cash for their butter this past summer and fall and that they are steadily increasing their herds of milk-cows. Now I believe that the business men in any town should encourage an enterprise of this kind and if financial aid is asked to give as liberally as they are able to, as that which benefits the farmer financially certainly acts the same way on those who have articles to sell that the farmers need, and if they don't do so they are not for or with the farmers. The secret of success of any town or country is for all to work in harmony and unison for that which is for the betterment of all concerned and follow the motto: "Live and let Live." Patronize home industries be they banks, stores, creamery or any other business if established and run on business principals and we will be better off. I have, since I have been in St. Hilaire, endeavored to do for the town and country as much as I have been financially able to and will continue to do so, and believing that a creamery located here would help the farmers greatly financially and prove to be a "Mortgage lifter" I shall and am willing to assist them all I am personally able to.

Very respectfully yours,
JULIUS PLETH.

Praying and Prinking.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, was once taking women to task for spending more time in prinking than in praying. "If there's a woman here," he screamed finally, "who prays more than she prinks, let her stand up."

One poor old faded specimen of femininity in the sorriest, shabbiest of clothes arose.

"You spend more time praying than prinking?" asked the preacher, taking her all in.

The poor old creature said she did—prayed all the time, prinked none at all.

"You go straight home," admonished Jones, "and put a little time on your prinking."

Valuable Information That Was Given About the President of the United States.

A certain literary man is engaged in writing an article on President Roosevelt. A few days ago he happened to mention this circumstance to a New York publisher, and the latter remarked that it might be interesting to state that the president invariably carried a copy of Plutarch in his pocket. The suggestion was accepted and the note incorporated in the article.

Two days later, the writer met another publisher, and informed him also, of the article that was being prepared. The publisher said:

"Well, now, I'll tell you something that ought to be of use to you. I'm told by one of his most intimate friends that Mr. Roosevelt always has a volume of Thucydides with him."

The same evening the literary man was dining at a hotel up-town, and, while smoking a post-prandial cigar, was accosted by an employe of one of the federal departments at Washington. The latter had heard that his friend was endeavoring to obtain copy about the president, and proceeded to furnish him with some. In the course of his remarks he said:

"And just stick in that he never goes out without a little pocket volume of Herodotus."—New York Times.

The Discomfiture of a Speculator From St. Louis Who Was Looking for a Bargain.

Anent the excitement of speculation in the Texas oil fields, George McRae, who is at the Waldorf-Astoria, tells of the discomfiture of a speculator from St. Louis who wanted to drive a close bargain. The St. Louisan selected a well for purchase, and it was offered him for $15,000. He demurred at the price, and finally one of the officials of the company selling the wells, remarked:

"I'll tell you what I'll do. If you will pay 10 cents a barrel for all the oil produced there for thirty days, you can have the well."

"Agreed," said the man from St. Louis, and he signed an agreement.

The well produced 10,000 barrels daily for the next thirty days, costing the St. Louis speculator $30,000.—New York Times.

TOWER FOR ST. CLOUD.

Structure of Seven Stories, Entirely of Porcelain to be Built on the Heights Overlooking the Seine.

A tower, made entirely of Sevres porcelain, is to be built at St. Cloud on the spot where the famous "Diogenes Lantern" stood before the war. Seventy designs have already been completed. The height is to be forty-five meters and the diameter eight. The seven stories will be connected by a double spiral staircase, like the one in the Chateau de Chambord. The outside will be a polychrome of turquoise, emerald, coral, brown and pink, relieved with white. The baking of the 30,000 pieces required for the tower demands 100 furnaces.—Paris Cable to New York Herald.

CALLING BY PROXY.

Sending a Representative Is One of the Latest Fads.

"The fashion and etiquette writers in some of the English journals are making a big ado over the matter of calling by proxy," said the woman who prides herself on doing things in the right way, "but there is really no cause for all the fuss and feathers. The idea is by no means new. It was tried in this town a long while ago. The custom never grew into great popularity, it is true, but it was introduced, and by women who are supposed to know what is what. I well remember what a shock the innovation gave me at first. I had never heard of the practice until a woman—an English woman, too, by the way—who had me on her calling list, sent a representative around one day to pay her respects. The occasion was of more than usual importance, for I was entertaining friends from the west then, and the calls were intended more for them than for me. Imagine, then, my surprise to receive a woman whom I had never seen before and whose name was totally unknown to me. The English woman's card was presented along with hers, and she hastened to explain the secret of her presence. The Britisher, it seemed, was not well enough to come and, being unwilling to pass my afternoon altogether, she had delegated a proxy to call in her stead. She must have found the makeshift unsatisfactory, for I subsequently met the same agent at several houses on the same errand. The proxy was a very agreeable woman, and I must say that, aside from the novelty of the plan, no one seemed to regret the substitution. Finally several other women whose social duties pressed too heavily on their hands adopted the scheme of hiring a proxy, and it is still in vogue to a limited extent, although I doubt if there is any danger of the custom ever becoming general here, as the English writers seem to fear will be the case on the other side."—New York Times.

A NEW FIELD IN SCIENCE.

Brainy Men's Claim to Now Process of Cheap Gold Manufacture.

The possibility of making gold out of cheap substances is being extensively discussed by scientists in Paris. The topic would have been discussed a few years ago as a crazy revival of medieval alchemy, but since the renowned chemist Berthelot's discoveries and remarkable assertion that gold is probably a compound substance instead of being a simple metal, an important school of chemists has predicted that gold will be manufactured as cheaply as butter some day. Meanwhile the French Society of Modern Alchemy claims that three of its members—Jollivet, De Lussus and Heoght, all chemists of reputation—have just completed a successful synthesis of gold. About half an ounce was produced and it took six months to do it. Prof. Berthelot is unwilling to give an opinion about it without knowing the details of the process and examining the product obtained, but he says: "Until now chemistry has been a study of only immediate reactions, yet slow reactions—by which I mean those taking from a month to two or three years—are suspected, and this will open quite a new field in science. Possibly metals might be decomposed into several elements. If they can be so treated, they likewise can be recombined." Camille Flammarion, to whom was given an opportunity to examine the artificial gold, says: "It presents all the outward characteristics of gold. I shall never pronounce anything impossible in science unless it is so mathematically."

Baring the Feet at Worship.

In India Hindus and Mussulmans alike wear both sandals and shoes (slippers), and the latter boots also. The sandal (the word is Persian) was evidently the original covering for the feet all over southern and eastern Asia, while the shoe was probably introduced into India by the Persians and Mo(n)gols, together with the "tiptilted" (Hittite and Etruscan) boot. Both are usually made in India of leather, but never of pigskin; and while the shoes are always colored red or yellow, the boots are generally brightly parti-colored; both, among the upper classes, being also richly embroidered in gold and silver and variegated silk thread, and with bangles, bugles and seed pearls, after the manner of the ancient Persian boots represented on Greek vases. But, of however rare and costly elaboration, the inevitable rule is to remove them after entering a private house, just when stepping on the mat or carpet on which the visitor takes his seat. They must be cast off—the right boot or shoe first—before the worshiper enters a temple or mosque, and it is still regarded as an absolute profanation to attempt to enter either fully shod. But the domestic habit arose out of its obvious propriety, and the religious ritual of "the Shoes of the Faithful," now and for centuries past observed throughout Islam, can be demonstrated to have been dictated by, if indeed it be not derived directly from, the universal social etiquette of the East.

A Skinless King of England.

It is of interest at this time to note the fact that there has actually been a skinless king of England. In a scarce historical volume on the Magna Charta and the Statutes, published in 1556, mention is made of the circumstance under the heading, "Nomina regum et eorum coronatis." Among the notices of births is this: "Richardus II., filius Ed. Principis Wolliae, natus sine pelle et nutritus in pellibus caprium, incepit regnare xxiii. Junii, anno Domini mccclxxvii." (Richard Second, son of Edward Prince of Wales, born without skin, and reared on the skins of goats, began to reign June 23, 1377.)—Montreal Star.

WHAT SETTLERS IN SASKATCHEWAN VALLEY HAVE TO SAY.

Formerly from the United States.

Rosthern, July 8th, 1900.

Frank Pedley, Esq.,
Superintendent of Immigration:

Sir:—We, the undersigned, settlers in Saskatchewan, Township 43, Range 6, beg to submit the following letter: We came from Springfield, BonHomme County, S. Dakota, in the spring of 1899, and settled where we now reside. We had considerable crop last year. We put in no new breaking, and it was very good, and this year, 1900, our crop is excellent. Our wheat will yield about twenty bushels to the acre; the oats and barley are also very good, and our potatoes and root crop are all that could be desired. We consider this a fine country, and we are glad we came, as our prospects could not be better. A poor man will get a stake in this country much quicker than in Dakota.

We are yours, respectfully: John H. Schultz, M. A. Goshen, S. Gors, B. H. Dirks, C. D. Unry, P. Unry and A. Ratzlief. All from South Dakota, U. S. A.

New Machine Gun for England.

Considerable interest is being caused in military circles on account of the invention of a new form of machine gun, which is said to be capable of firing bullets at the same rate as a Maxim, but with a range of 6,000 yards. Such a weapon, if its performances are really equal to what is claimed for it, would revolutionize the whole science of artillery, and, in fact, render the ordinary field guns nearly useless. The bullet is said to be 5-inch caliber and the cartridge is a very lengthy one.—London Mail.

A Swedish Marriage Custom.

The Scandinavian bridegroom gives his betrothed a prayer book, and many other gifts, which usually include a goose. She, in turn, gives him, especially in Sweden, a shirt, and this he invariably wears on his wedding day. Afterward he lays it away, and under no circumstances of state or poverty will he wear it even while alive. But he wears it in his grave, and there are Swedes who earnestly believe not only in the resurrection of the body, but in the veritable resurrection of the of the betrothal shirts of such husbands who have never broken their marriage vows. The Swedish widower must destroy, on the eve of his second marriage, the wedding shirt his first wife gave him.—Woman's Home Companion.

These are Plain Words.

Marshfield, Mo., Jan. 20th.—Mr. J. F. King of this place makes the following statement:

"I have suffered untold agony for twenty years with Lame Back and Acute Kidney Disease, and in that time have never been two days together clear of misery, and for some of the time I could not walk a step or even sit up.

"Last spring, after trying many doctors, and every remedy that could be thought of, I began a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills. The good results were almost immediate, and for the last seven months I have seen more comfort and pleasure than I have for twenty years before.

"Any one with Kidney Disease or Lame Back, that will not try Dodd's Kidney Pills deserves to suffer."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WATER FOR THE HOLY CITY.

Jerusalem Is Now Supplied by a System of Modern Designs.

The Holy Land has its railways, electric lights and American windmills, and now Jerusalem is about to get a supply of good drinking water. In ancient times the city of David was well supplied. The remains of aqueducts and reservoirs show this. But since the Turk's day the people of Jerusalem have been dependent on the scanty and often polluted accumulations of rain water in the rock-hewn cistern beneath their feet. Even this supply has recently failed, says a correspondent of the London Times, owing to want of rain. Distress and sickness became so general that the Turkish governor has at length been induced to sanction the purchase of iron pipe to bring water from Ain Salah, or the "sealed fountain," at Solomon's pools, about nine miles south of Jerusalem. A pipe six inches in diameter will bring 8,000 "skins" of water a day for distribution at "fountains" supplied with faucets. Solomon, in his famous "Song," speaks of this secret spring, now turned to use. "My beloved," he says, as quoted by the Times correspondent, "is like a spring shut up, a fountain sealed." It is a deep-down subterranean spring, which has, from the time of Solomon, flowed through the arched tunnel built by him to the distributing chamber or reservoir near the northwest corner of the highest of Solomon's pools. Half a century ago the location of this "hidden" spring which was still, as in Solomon's time, flowing into the reservoir mentioned, was unknown. The tunnel is roofed by stones leaning against each other like an inverted V. the primitive form of the arch, which is also seen in the roof of the queen's chamber of the great pyramid. The entrance to this tunnel from the spring is one of the oldest structures in existence. The piping is to be laid along the old aqueduct which formerly, from the time of Solomon, brought this same water to the temple area. There are eleven or twelve ancient fountains here and there in the city, long unused, but now to be utilized, and from which the water may be drawn free to all, several taps being attached to each fountain.—Baltimore Sun.

THEIR DIGESTION IS GOOD.

Boys Sometimes Eat as Much as a Dozen Grown Persons.

The appetite of the average small boy is one of the marvels of the century. An English school-master who has made a special study of the gormandizing capacity of his pupils testifies that while he found a superabundance of capacity, there was actually little or no limit. Perhaps, after rich cake, both fruit and plain, the first favor, according to the school-master, is condensed milk. This is often eaten without a spoon by simply making two small holes in the top of the can and placing the lips against them. Then after this came chocolates, chocolate cream, chocolate candy, chocolate cake. "It may be thought I am exaggerating," he says, "when I say that I have seen a boy of ten years eat in a single afternoon enough food to satisfy an adult party of twelve persons. I have myself known a little, frail boy to eat a portion of a rich cake, a third of a one-pound can of condensed milk, four ounces of mixed chocolate, a handful of assorted sweets, two oranges, one apple, four gingerbread cakes, a dozen Brazil nuts and two large pieces of peppermint candy. Did it make him ill? Did he lie down and await the coming of the medical man with the stomach pump? Not he; he just had one or two faint symptoms of uneasiness which he quickly dispelled by a few well-drawn gapes, much after the manner of a sleeping baby. Then he walked about for a time and presently accepted an invitation to join in a game of ball." The school-master's observations have led to the very natural deduction that a boy's condition is in many ways different from that of the trained strong man. The latter could not eat the things that a boy could because his fitness is mainly muscular, while the boy's is, in adition to being muscular, organic. The man may have a sluggish liver, or faulty kidneys, and still be a strong man, but the boy who runs and romps and turns somersaults and shouts and laughs and twists and turns and shouts hasn't a single blemish.—Chicago Chronicle.

He Had a Little Bet.

"Last election, for the first time in my life," said the real estate dealer, "I had a little bet on. It was only $10, and I was bluffed into making it, but they will never bluff me again. I have had deals of $50,000 impending and have not worried half as much as over that wretched little bet.

"Try as hard as I could, I could not keep down my excitement. I read politics more than ever before. I turned out to political meetings. I found myself bawling and cheering for my party. I was even ready to turn out and carry a torch.

"That little bet got me into a score of arguments and wrangles and finally produced a coolness on the part of several life-long friends. I had it in my mind all day and dreamed of it at night, and on election day I went around like a man having a fortune at stake.

"For two hours, while the returns were coming in, I was on hot bricks, and when my candidate was finally announced a winner I scarcely had strength to crawl home and go to bed.

"I may take a flyer now and then on a horse race or try to pick out a winning yacht, but you hear me when I say I've made my last political bet. It's too exciting for my nerves."

The Four Ages of British Matrimony.

"A very suitable age." That would be Mrs. Grundy's comment on the wedding of the statistically average bride and bridegroom.

The young man who would be absolutely "average" must wait until he is 26.37 years old, and then wed a lady exactly 24.65, or 1.72 years younger than himself.

This is how last year's marriage statistics worked out:, Bachelor with spinster, bride 24.65, bridegroom, 26.37; bachelor with widow, bride 36.12, bridegroom 34.20; widower with spinster, bride 32.83, bridegroom 41.87; widowers with widows, bride 45.16, bridegroom 49.81. So, according to statistics, a man does not marry a lady older than himself, unless he is a bachelor and succumbs to the fascinations of a widow.—

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

JUMP ON SCHLEY

"HERO OF SANTIAGO" MAY HAVE TO FACE ANOTHER NAVAL COURT.

LONG IS NOW LOOKING INTO IT

ADMIRAL ACCUSED OF HAVING CRITICISED SAMPSON BY INFERENCE.

THE SAMPSONITES WILL PUSH IT

ALLEGED LETTER TO THE AUTHOR OF "SCHLEY AND SANTIAGO" THE CAUSE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Admiral Schley may face another naval court for his alleged letter to George E. Graham, author of "Schley and Santiago," in which Admiral Sampson is by inference criticised for not having been present when the Spanish fleet was destroyed.

The matter was brought to Secretary Long's attention yesterday and he will give it consideration. He would not say whether or not the offense of the admiral on its face constituted a subject for court-martial or reprimand, but the opinion here is that if the Sampsonites can arrange things Schley will be put to all the annoyance possible. The secretary discussed the incident informally with Judge Advocate General Lemly, but no definite line of action was determined upon.

Admiral Schley's letter to Mr. Graham was dated Nov. 14, 1901, and was written from the Arlington hotel, this city. The sessions of the court of inquiry had then been conducted several days, but this, according to the navy department's authorities, does not affect the case. Secretary Long's special order that naval officers should not discuss the Sampson-Schley controversy for publication is held to have been in effect.

Secretary Long was in conference with the president for over an hour last night, presumably in regard to the appeal of Rear Admiral Schley from the findings of the court of inquiry, which was referred by the executive of the navy department for "comment." The secretary was accompanied by Judge Advocate Lemly and Solicitor Hanna, who conducted the case before the court. They met at Secretary Long's apartments, and when they departed for the White House they had with them bundles of papers which had the appearance of legal documents. Secretary Long declined to say anything for publication regarding the conference.

SCHLEY OUT OF POLITICS.

Admiral Says He Has No Intention of Entering Politics.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley Saturday thrice declared that he had no intention of entering politics. His remarks were calculated to set at rest for all time the present ambitions which some of his admirers have entertained for him. He said that no office, however high, would tempt him to jeopardize the good will the people of this country had expressed for him.

The demonstrations reached their climax in the banquet given in his honor by the Hamilton club in the banquet hall of the Auditorium. Approximately 650 guests were present. At the depot the admiral was greeted by a delegation from the city council and a company of naval veterans of the Civil war.

MILES NOT AFTER PRESIDENCY.

Lieutenant General in Letter Denies Report That He Seeks the Chief Magistracy.

Boston, Jan. 27.—Gen. Miles is not a candidate for the presidency of the United States. He denied the report in reply to a letter to George F. Washburn of this city. The general's letter says:

"I deeply regret these reports. They are absolutely unauthorized. They do not emanate from myself nor from my friends, and I trust the public will not be misled by them. I have not been, and am not now, a seeker for presidential honors. My ambition has ever been to faithfully serve my country, and this will be my sole purpose in the future."

MYSTERIOUS DEATHS.

Two Sisters Are Found Dead in a Boston Tenement.

Boston, Jan. 27. — Two sisters, Ann Doherty, fifty years old, and Mary Doherty, forty years old, were found dead in the tenement on Tremont street, and the cause of their death is being investigated. There is nothing to indicate that the women committed suicide and the cause of death is at present a mystery.

Kaukauna Papermakers Decide to Accept Manufacturers' Terms.

Kaukauna, Wis., Jan. 27.—Kaukauna papermakers yesterday voted not to strike because they did not get short hours which they asked for in their petition to the mill owners, but instead, after a four-hour session, voted to accept the 10 per cent advance offered them.

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 27.—The Appleton lodge of the United Brotherhood of Papermakers yesterday afternoon voted to strike next Saturday night. The action was taken after reading the report of the committee which waited upon Mr. McNaughton, the millionaire manufacturer, who, it is said, holds the key to the situation. The meeting was slimly attended, many of those who signed the agreement to accept a raise in wages failing to appear. Another week, it is thought, must decide whether the union is to win or lose in its fight in Wisconsin.

SMALLPOX WAR ON

INHABITANTS OF AN INDIANA VILLAGE ARE WILDLY EXCITED.

TAKE UP ARMS AND ATTEMPT TO DRIVE THE SICK MAN OUT OF OWN.

USES A SHOTGUN WITH EFFECT

OFFICER WHO TRIES TO QUELL THE RIOT IS FILLED WITH BIRD-SHOT.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 27.—A smallpox war is raging at Greentown, ten miles east of here. Isaac Murphy, whom the officers of a dozen Indiana towns have been pursuing for ten days on suspicion of spreading smallpox, was captured at Greentown Friday night.

Murphy was ordered quarantined at the home of William Somers. The villagers objected to sheltering Murphy in their midst and appealed to the authorities to have him removed to another place. This was refused, and at 2 o'clock yesterday morning a mob assembled at the Somers' home and ordered Murphy out of town, under penalty of violence. Murphy dared the crowd, and, raising a shotgun, began firing into the mob. One shot took effect on Officer John Poole, who had just arrived to quell the riot. The shot was not intended for the officer, his presence being unknown to the occupants of the house. Fifty birdshot penetrated his lower limbs, but the injuries are not fatal. The crowd then dispersed, but declared they would return and finish the job. In anticipation of further trouble last night the house was barricaded. So far the assailants have not again shown up and it is thought the vigorous fight displayed by the two men has scared them out.

Murphy, the alleged smallpox sufferer, says he is not afflicted with any malady, but will observe the quarantine as ordered by the health board.

STORM'S DISASTROUS WORK.

Heavy Losses Among Cattle in Parts of Nebraska.

Omaha, Jan. 27.—Predictions made as to the probable disastrous effects of the blizzard which raged all day Saturday and yesterday were partially verified in reports received here yesterday and last night from points in Nebraska. A remarkable condition exists in the vicinity of Ogalalla, where the storm was more severe than in any other portion of the state, except in the northwest quarter. It was expected that the losses among cattle in that district would be enormous, but authentic reports received from several points in the cattle district affirm that actually no loss was sustained, the cattle finding necessary shelter. Reports from the northwestern portion of the state are not so flattering, however, while those from Kimball and Banner counties, the farthermost counties on the west side of the state, indicate that heavy losses have occurred.

DEATH FOR ALMOST ALL OF THEM

IN EVERY CASE EXCEPT ONE THE PERSON MURDERED WAS A NATIVE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Maj. Gen. Chaffee is dealing out justice with a stern hand to natives of the Philippines who have been indulging in murder and pillage under the pretense of fighting for independence.

The official mail from Manila just received by the war department contains the orders in ten cases of natives tried before military commissions for murder. In every case except one the person murdered was a native. The one exception was that of an American soldier whose body, strangely enough, could not be identified by the military authorities. Nearly all the accused were sentenced to death and in a majority of cases the sentences were approved by Gen. Chaffee. In a case where the native convicted was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, Gen. Chaffee expressed the opinion that the sentence was inadequate.

One of the natives tried, Augustin to their death as the result of an explos- Ilocos, Luzon, was a leader of the Filipino secret society known as the Sandatanan. He was charged with killing Antonio Abaya, who was supposed to be an American spy. On the witness stand Aguilar gave as a reason for the murder that the community wanted to get rid of Abaya because he had "a bad sickness." Aguilar's sentence was death, but Gen. Chaffee commuted it to imprisonment for life.

The four persons in the cab made the leap safely, except the engineer and Frank Deyo of this place, who were injured. The engine, being reversed, started rapidly ahead. Engineer Knudson managed to crawl on again, but a wild ride of over two miles was made before the engine could be stopped. The engine and one car were badly wrecked.

JUMP ON SCHLEY

"HERO OF SANTIAGO" MAY HAVE TO FACE ANOTHER NAVAL COURT.

LONG IS NOW LOOKING INTO IT

ADMIRAL ACCUSED OF HAVING CRITICISED SAMPSON BY INFERENCE.

THE SAMPSONITES WILL PUSH IT

ALLEGED LETTER TO THE AUTHOR OF "SCHLEY AND SANTIAGO" THE CAUSE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Admiral Schley may face another naval court for his alleged letter to George E. Graham, author of "Schley and Santiago," in which Admiral Sampson is by inference criticised for not having been present when the Spanish fleet was destroyed.

The matter was brought to Secretary Long's attention yesterday and he will give it consideration. He would not say whether or not the offense of the admiral on its face constituted a subject for court-martial or reprimand, but the opinion here is that if the Sampsonites can arrange things Schley will be put to all the annoyance possible. The secretary discussed the incident informally with Judge Advocate General Lemly, but no definite line of action was determined upon.

Admiral Schley's letter to Mr. Graham was dated Nov. 14, 1901, and was written from the Arlington hotel, this city. The sessions of the court of inquiry had then been conducted several days, but this, according to the navy department's authorities, does not affect the case. Secretary Long's special order that naval officers should not discuss the Sampson-Schley controversy for publication is held to have been in effect.

Secretary Long was in conference with the president for over an hour last night, presumably in regard to the appeal of Rear Admiral Schley from the findings of the court of inquiry, which was referred by the executive of the navy department for "comment." The secretary was accompanied by Judge Advocate Lemly and Solicitor Hanna, who conducted the case before the court. They met at Secretary Long's apartments, and when they departed for the White House they had with them bundles of papers which had the appearance of legal documents. Secretary Long declined to say anything for publication regarding the conference.

SCHLEY OUT OF POLITICS.

Admiral Says He Has No Intention of Entering Politics.

The demonstrations reached their climax in the banquet given in his honor by the Hamilton club in the banquet hall of the Auditorium. Approximately 650 guests were present. At the depot the admiral was greeted by a delegation from the city council and a company of naval veterans of the Civil war.

SMALLPOX WAR ON

INHABITANTS OF AN INDIANA VILLAGE ARE WILDLY EXCITED.

KICK ON SHELTERING A SUSPECT

TAKE UP ARMS AND ATTEMPT TO DRIVE THE SICK MAN OUT OF OWN.

USES A SHOTGUN WITH EFFECT

OFFICER WHO TRIES TO QUELL THE RIOT IS FILLED WITH BIRD-SHOT.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 27.—A smallpox war is raging at Greentown, ten miles east of here. Isaac Murphy, whom the officers of a dozen Indiana towns have been pursuing for ten days on suspicion of spreading smallpox, was captured at Greentown Friday night.

Murphy was ordered quarantined at the home of William Somers. The villagers objected to sheltering Murphy in their midst and appealed to the authorities to have him removed to another place. This was refused, and at 2 o'clock yesterday morning a mob assembled at the Somers' home and ordered Murphy out of town, under penalty of violence. Murphy dared the crowd, and, raising a shotgun, began firing into the mob. One shot took effect on Officer John Poole, who had just arrived to quell the riot. The shot was not intended for the officer, his presence being unknown to the occupants of the house. Fifty birdshot penetrated his lower limbs, but the injuries are not fatal. The crowd then dispersed, but declared they would return and finish the job. In anticipation of further trouble last night the house was barricaded. So far the assailants have not again shown up and it is thought the vigorous fight displayed by the two men has scared them out.

Murphy, the alleged smallpox sufferer, says he is not afflicted with any malady, but will observe the quarantine as ordered by the health board.

A dry kiln was also beaten down and both buildings fell into the water. The wild log booms destroyed many yachts and small craft.

STORM'S DISASTROUS WORK.

Heavy Losses Among Cattle in Parts of Nebraska.

Omaha, Jan. 27.—Predictions made as to the probable disastrous effects of the blizzard which raged all day Saturday and yesterday were partially verified in reports received here yesterday and last night from points in Nebraska. A remarkable condition exists in the vicinity of Ogallala, where the storm was more severe than in any other portion of the state, except in the northwest quarter. It was expected that the losses among cattle in that district would be enormous, but authentic reports received from several points in the cattle district affirm that actually no loss was sustained, the cattle finding necessary shelter. Reports from the northwestern portion of the state are not so flattering, however, while these from Kimball and Banner counties, the farthermost counties on the west side of the state, indicate that heavy losses have occurred.

The mine was examined by the state inspector, who said the mine was in as good condition as any in the state at the last examination. Funeral services of the victims are being conducted by the Lost Creek company. The list of the dead now numbers twenty-two. Oliver Mable died yesterday afternoon. NO MERCY SHOWN

GEN. CHAFFEE IS DEALING OUT JUSTICE WITH A STERN HAND.

FILIPINO MURDERERS MUST HANG

TEN NATIVES ARE TRIED BEFORE THE MILITARY COMMISSION.

DEATH FOR ALMOST ALL OF THEM

IN EVERY CASE EXCEPT ONE THE PERSON MURDERED WAS A NATIVE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Maj. Gen. Chaffee is dealing out justice with a stern hand to natives of the Philippines who have been indulging in murder and pillage under the pretense of fighting for independence.

The official mail from Manila just received by the war department contains the orders in ten cases of natives tried before military commissions for murder. In every case except one the person murdered was a native. The one exception was that of an American soldier whose body, strangely enough, could not be identified by the military authorities. Nearly all the accused were sentenced to death and in a majority of cases the sentences were approved by Gen. Chaffee. In a case where the native convicted was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, Gen. Chaffee expressed the opinion that the sentence was inadequate.

One of the natives tried, Augustin to their death as the result of on explos-Ilocos, Luzon, was a leader of the Filipino secret society known as the Sandatanan. He was charged with killing Antonio Abaya, who was supposed to be an American spy. On the witness stand Aguilar gave as a reason for the murder that the community wanted to get rid of Abaya because he had "a bad sickness." Aguilar's sentence was death, but Gen. Chaffee commuted it to imprisonment for life.

An engine of a west-bound extra freight had to run to this place for water, and on returning the engine got beyond control and crashed into its train. The engineer reversed and told all to jump. The four persons in the cab made the leap safely, except the engineer and Frank Deyo of this place, who were injured. The engine, being reversed, started rapidly ahead. Engineer Knudson managed to crawl on again, but a wild ride of over two miles was made before the engine could be stopped. The engine and one car were badly wrecked.

Mr. Grant, while out hunting with a friend named McKoy, came upon some negroes who had killed and were cleaning hogs. Mr. Grant found that they were his own hogs, and attempted to arrest the negroes, when one of them fired at him, blowing out his brains. McKay aroused the whites in the neighborhood with news of the murder. A posse was hastily formed and three of the negroes were captured and two of them lynched at once.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

Boy Loses His Life in a Blizzard in Oregon.

Huntington, Or., Jan. 27.—Grover F. Locke, aged thirteen, son of S. Locke, a stockman and broker of Huntington, was frozen to death in the blizzard.

The boy started for his father's ranch, twelve miles distant. WEDNESDAY, JAN 29, 1902.

"There is one word in the English language which, it seems to me, aptly describes the American woman," writes Wu Ting-fang in the February Ladies' Home Journal. "She is 'interesting.' "

It is now announced that the ransom demanded for the release of Miss Ellen M. Stone has been paid to the brigands who held her captive in the mountains of Bulgaria and her release is expected to occur at any moment. When she returns home again she will probably star on the lecture platform. She has had lots of advertising and some decidedly interesting experience.

It is the opinion of Secretary Wilson that the United States will in time produce all of its own sugar, tea, caffee, rubber and nearly everything else we now buy abroad. Miss Flora Wilson, daughter of the Secretary, entertained a party of ladies at Traer, Iowa, recently and the tea served was brewed from a fine grade of tea grown in the United States on a tea platation in South Carolina.—The Farmer.

It is really interesting to watch the changes in the editorial columns of our exchanges. A few weeks ago nearly all of them were bitterly opposed to the formation of the Northern Securities Co., and the merging of the different railway lines, now competitors. But now things are changed for some reason or another and they seem to be gradually falling into line in favor of the merger. Why?

The Minneapolis Journal in its political column tells of an interview recently had in Tacoma with senator O. H. Myran who represent this district in the state senate. The senator's remarks go to show that he is in favor of the railroad merger and is not very fond of Gov. Van Sant. He said the agitation raised by Gov. Van Sant was a grand stand play and would have no influence on the people—the people being indifferent because they know their interests are not in danger. And then the Journal man says very neatly: "The senator had been at Hot Springs for some time before giving out the interview."

Over in a North Dakota town one day last week a squaw who was traveling about the country selling moccasins and other articles decorated with beads and having with her something rolled in a blanket, sat in the depot waiting room when an engineer came in, and was looking over her stock. While thus engaged he saw the blanket move, and although knowing the cause, wanted to be satisfied and asked: "Indian pappoose?" She shook her head and replied: "Half Injun; half engineer" The good natured throttle manipulator then wished he hadn't spoke.

There are three things about which one should not be too conscious and which it is well to leave undisturbed—one's digestion, one's love, one's religion.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

Turner's Toast.

Turner, the painter, was a ready wit. Once at a dinner of artists and literary men a minor poet, by way of being facetious, proposed as a toast "the health of the painters and glaziers of Great Britain."

The toast was drunk, and Turner, after returning thanks for it, proposed "the health of the British paper stainers."

The laugh was turned against the poet.

Cogniltant.

A Marysville schoolma'am was teaching her class the mysteries of grammar.

"Now, Johnny," said she, "in what tense do I speak when I say, 'I am beautiful?' "

The little fellow answered quick as a wink, "The past."—Kansas City Journal.

The Other Way.

Teacher—I would like some one in the class to define the meaning of vice versa.

Bright Boy—It's sleeping with your feet toward the head of the bed.

He Caught the Car.

The man dashed down the street after the retreating State street car.

Every muscle was strained; his breath come in quick gasps; the beads of moisture stood out upon his forehead. His feet were working like the pedals on a bicycle. He only touched the ground in the more altitudinous places.

"I'll—catch—that—street—car," he gasped, "or die."

Faster went the street car. Faster went the man.

He overturned fruit stands and aged blind men in his wild career. He knocked down children and trampled upon them. But onward he rushed. He collided with a baby buggy. The baby was knocked into the street. The mother of the child picked it up. She pointed a finger at the disappearing form of the man. "Murderer!" she hissed through her clinched teeth.

He draws nearer to the car—nearer yet.

He reaches out his hand.

He touches the rail on the rear platform.

He gives one last convulsive effort.

He is on the car.

He sinks breathless into a seat and mops his brow. The conductor touches him on the shoulder.

"Git offen here!" speaks the conductor. "We're a-goin' to ther barn. No more cars tonight."—Chicago Tribune.

Ate $25,000 Worth of Liver.

Among the many poker stories afloat a good one is told concerning Dutch Hank, a well known player of Rochester, N. Y. Hank went into Daly's place, in New York city, one day and sat in a game, winning $25,000 with very little trouble. Then he rose to go, thinking it was time to stop. Daly shook hands with him and asked him what was his hurry. Hank said he would have to go to a Dutch restaurant he knew where they always cooked liver in a way that he particularly liked.

"Oh, if that's all," said Daly, "just stay here. We can serve the liver just that way, and you can go right on playing."

Dutch Hank had left some friends outside waiting, but he said he would stay and eat the liver. He sat down and ate and played. His $25,000 soon went back to Daly in a turn of luck. Hank went out without a cent.

"What kept you so long?" his friends demanded.

"Well, you don't suppose a man can eat $25,000 worth of liver in a minute, do you?" was the retort of Hank.

The Tempter Won.

When the late Baron Nordenskjold was at Ceylon on the way home from his journey along the northern coast of Siberia, he received a telegram from the Russian government asking him whether he would accept from the czar a certain decoration as an appreciation of his services to Russia. For many days the famous explorer wavered, as he was a member of Bjornsterne Bjornson's Antidecoration club, whose members were solemnly pledged never to accept any decoration from anybody. Nordenskjold, however, could not resist the temptation, so he replied to the telegram in the affirmative.

It is not hard to imagine his disappointment, when, upon reaching home, a friend of his, a high official, told him the following: "The Russian government was well aware of your antagonistic views in regard to decorations and had, therefore, placed in readiness 300,000 rubles to be paid you in the event of your refusing to accept the insignia, but before paying that sum they wanted to try your firmness. Russia is certainly grateful to you for your failure to live up to your pledge."

The Lamps of the Sea.

Many kinds of jellyfish are phosphorescent at night and present a wonderfully beautiful appearance when slowly moving through the water, and it is this phosphorescence which has given them the poetic title of "the lamps of the sea." They are not less beautiful in the daytime, for most of the species are striped or tinted, some being melon shaped, with rows of fringes dividing the sections. The tentacles are often plumed, and, while waving about in graceful curves, attract or gather in the food of the animal. The "Portuguese man-of-war" is probably the best known, as well as most attractive in form, of the whole family.

His Gift.

Mrs. Wyles—Did your husband give you anything for a birthday present?

Mrs. Styles—Indeed he did.

"Did it have your name on it?"

"Yes, and my husband's name too."

"That's just like selfish men. He must share the gift with you."

"But he didn't."

"What was his name doing on it then?"

"It wouldn't have been any good without it. It was a check."

What's in a Name?

Voltaire under a fictitious name offered to the Comedie Francaise a play entitled "Le Droit du Seigneur." It was promptly rejected as badly written and poor in rhyme, but when he offered the same manuscript a second time under the title of "L'Ecueil du Sage" and signed with his own name it was accepted with enthusiasm and universally declared admirable.

A Neighbor's Grief.

Mr. Stutson—They tell me Neighbor Harris' cat is dead.

Mrs. Stutson—Oh, I'm so sorry! It used to take up Fido's time so pleasantly barking at her.—Boston Transcript.

The faults of the superior man are like the eclipses of the sun and moon. He has his faults, and all men see them; he changes again, and all men look up to him.—Confucius.

Moon and Mirror.

Some night when the moon is at its full and the air is free from haze go outdoors with a hand mirror and hold it so that the moon's image will fall on it. Make the experiment, preferably, when the moon is well up in the heavens.

Instead of seeing one image, as you will expect, you will see four.

One of these images will be very bright, but the other three will be dull, like unburnished silver.

They will be in a straight line, one of the dull images on one side of the bright image and two on the other side of it. Turn the mirror slowly around, and the images will appear to revolve around on a common center.

The explanation of this queer little phenomenon may be found in the fact that there are two surfaces in a mirror, one in front and the other in the back, where the quicksilver is.

The brightest of the images is from the moon itself. The others are what are known as secondary images, reflected from the front to the back of the mirror and thence to the eye.

A similar experiment may be made with the planets Venus, Jupiter and Mars or with any of the first magnitude stars, such as Sirius, Capella, Arcturus, Vega and Antares.

The planets and the stars, however, make only three images, the number of images depending on the breadth of the object. A perfectly clear night is essential.—New York Herald.

The Dear Old Frauds.

Those old, pleasant, innocent frauds of the circus are not practiced now—the imposing, five barred gates that, as the horse approached them, were sloped into insignificant wattles and the rings through which the signorina purported to leap, but which in reality were insinuated over her by compliant attendants. And then there was that venerable jockey performance, the culmination of which was a leap from the ring to a standing position, albeit at an angle of 30 degrees, on the horse's back. In the old circuses it was the custom of the horseman to miss the crowning jump two or three times in order that a fiercer flame of interest might be kindled in the audience. After two failures the band would stop (always the presage of a moment of strain supreme), the horse's head would be loosed, he would be urged to a greater pace, and the feat would gloriously succeed. Then what a crash of brass and outburst of delight in the building, involving even the staff and ringmaster in the expression of ecstasy. Those old, simple days!—Cornhill.

Making It Clear.

To confuse a witness is generally an easy task, and lawyers know no easier way than to make a witness explain the meaning of his words, knowing that very few people can do so without getting excited. Occasionally a victim resents this nagging and answers in a spirited and unexpected manner. A lawyer was cross examining a young girl of rather haughty temper. She had testified that she had seen the defendant "shy" a book at the plaintiff, and the lawyer had seized on the word.

"Shy—shy a book? What do you mean by that? Will you explain to the court what the word 'shy' means?"

The girl leaned over the desk beneath the witness box, picked up a lawbook and threw it at the lawyer's head, who dodged just in time.

"I think the court now understands the meaning of the word 'shy,' " said the judge gravely, and the girl was allowed to finish her testimony without further interruption.—London Tit-Bits.

Inquisitive Penguins.

We often met companies of six or eight or more penguins promenading on the arctic ice pack in the sunshine. When they saw us, they generally exhibited curiosity and approached, to get a nearer view. I do not know if these birds have the instinct of the naturalist and take a lively interest, doubtless philosophic from their point of view, in everything new which presents itself or if the object of their investigations is entirely practical, but they certainly came near us with a distinct purpose of making examination. But if we had the misfortune to excite much curiosity they became aggressive. One would first come close to us and reconnoiter, and then, on his order, the others would advance with a menacing air, and the battle began, a battle in which we sometimes had trouble to demonstrate effectively our superior strength.—Geographical Magazine.

The Black Maria.

The following is given as the origin of the term "Black Maria:" When New England was filled with emigrants from the mother country, a negress named Maria Lee kept a sailors' boarding house in Boston. She was a woman of great strength and helped the authorities to keep the peace. Frequently the police invoked her aid, and the saying, "Send for Black Maria," came to mean, "Take him to jail." British seamen were often taken to the lockup by this amazon, and the stories they spread of her achievements led to the name of Black Maria being given to the English prison van.

No Squealing.

Some English travelers were recently in a restaurant in a German town when a woman who was serving imparted the interesting information that a pig was being killed round the corner. One of them remarked that it was curious that the pig did not squeal. The woman looked at them in surprise. "Aber," said she, "es ist polizeilich verboten"—it's forbidden by the police.

He Knew.

Susie—Papa, what makes a man always give a woman a diamond engagement ring?

Her Father—The woman.

Aunt Jane—Ezra, go tell your ma that the picture of Uncle Ham has arrived, but the fool artist went and painted it upside down. — Chicago News.

All He Knew About It.

"Here! Here!" said the rich old widower. "What are you doing?"

"I'm pluckin' your legs to see which of them's the wooden one," said little Willie.

"Boy," the old man testily replied, "you bother me. Run away. What do you mean by one of my legs being wooden? I haven't any wooden leg."

"Well, when Sister Fannie said the other night that she didn't want to marry you even with all your money mother told her not to be foolish, because you had one foot in the grave and wouldn't last long. So that's all I know about it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Nibble Game.

A funny game is to tie several crullers by long strings between the folding doors. Let the crullers hang so as to be opposite, or nearly so, the mouths of the boys and girls who are to engage in the contest. Upon a given signal the contestants stand in a line with hands tied behind their backs and nibble the crullers. The first who succeeds in eating all his or hers without any portion falling upon the floor wins the prize.

How She Knew.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "why didn't you tell me you were going hunting yesterday? It would have relieved my mind ever so much, for I half suspected you were going to the races without taking me."

"How—er—how did you know I went hunting?"

"Because you were talking all night in your sleep about long shots."—Washington Star.

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Notice to Burglars.

A certain Woodbridge street merchant who has been frequently a victim of safe blowers has adopted a novel and somewhat humorous plan of safeguarding his money vaults from depredations that might be contemplated by individuals of the burglarious fraternity. After his last dear experience he decided that a safe wasn't the "safest" place in the world for valuables, and he now makes a practice of promptly banking his profits and of taking whatever of value is in the safe at the close of the day's business home with him. He says the ambitious cracksman that should tackle his safe now o' nights would find "poor pickings." Posted over the front of the safe in black, conspicuous type is this sign: "Notice.—Please do not blow open the safe. Here is the key."

And, sure enough, the key to the safe hangs over the sign, being suspended from one of the hinges.—Detroit Free Press.

Hay Versus Oats.

"I see," said the truck horse as he looked over the top of his morning paper—"I see that the price of oats is going up."

"Well," said the sagacious old nag that drew the doctor's phaeton, "there is one sure thing, and that is they can't put hay into its place."

"And why not?" inquired the truck horse.

"Because it would go against the grain," replied the doctor's nag.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Way He Looked.

"But I tell you your shopping is extravagant," he protested. "You should never take a thing just because it looks cheap."

"Indeed!" said the extravagant young wife. "If I had followed that advice when you proposed to me, I never would have taken you."—Philadelphia Press.

Those Dear Girls.

"She's a very cautious woman, especially about gossip. No woman ever heard her retail any scandal."

"But I am told that stories confided to her in secrecy do get out somehow."

"Yes, I know. You see, she tells them all to her husband."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Proof.

Then the defiant militant spirit took possession of the devoted missionary.

"You think I'm a pudding!" he cried. "I'll show you I am not!"

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," rejoined the savage darkly.—Detroit Free Press.

The Mysterious Box.

Once upon a time there was a very old couple living in a wood which was full of all kinds of wild animals. One morning the old man went to gather some wood in the forest, leaving his old wife at home.

A little before noon the good woman went to the creek to wash clothes, when, to her astonishment, she saw a fine, large peach floating upon the water directly in front of her. She picked it up, but did not eat it at once. She thought she would save it and share it with her dear old man at dinner, so she put it safely away in the cupboard.

At noon when her husband came home she cooked him a nice dinner. While they were sitting at the table she thought of the peach she had found in the creek and went to get it. When she opened the door of the cupboard, to her great surprise she saw a little baby coming out of the peach.

"Oh, wonderful! Oh, wonderful!" was all the old woman could say.

The old man, hearing the exclamation, immediately went to see what was the matter. He was as much astonished as his wife at the sight of the baby.

"It is very good, dear wife," said he, "for we have no child of our own, so we will take this one and bring it up as ours."

So she took the baby and wrapped it carefully and put it into a basket and placed it by the window.

In a few days the child grew so large that it was impossible to keep it in the basket, so she took a strong string and tied one end to the baby and the other to a millstone to keep it from getting away. But notwithstanding the child was so strong that it went about through the woods with the millstone and did a great deal of mischief.

In a few days the baby had grown to the size of a giant and worked with all a giant's strength helping the old man upon his little farm.

About this time the daughter of the Japanese king had been stolen by an oni (an imp) and carried far away to an iron castle on the oni's island, where she was imprisoned and tormented by fierce and ugly creatures.

The chief of the onis often tried to persuade her to marry him and become his queen, but she would not accept the oni's throne. But the oni persisted in wooing her and tried in many ways to make her consent.

When the old king, her father, heard of this wonderful child, who was so young and yet so very strong, he sent one of his servants to bid him come to his palace at once, so the child obeyed the king's order and went to the palace and was carried into the king's private chamber.

The king asked him if he would bring back his daughter from the Oniga Shima. The peach child told him he would try to do it, as he did not feel at all afraid of the oni. Then the king promised him that if he should succeed he would give him his daughter's hand in marriage as a reward for his great service.

Early the next morning the peach child assembled all the warriors together that were to accompany him on his expedition to Oniga Shima and made them a speech, and he promised to reward all that would serve the king's cause faithfully in the expedition against the oni. They were to have three rice biscuits apiece.

Then all agreed to obey the commands of the peach child, who at once assumed control of these loyal warriors, and the journey commenced.

When the whole army reached the Oniga Shima all the onis made great preparation to give the peach boy's warriors battle.

Next morning both armies met on the great plains of the Oniga Shima, where they fought a terrible battle until night put an end to the conflict. The fortunes of the day decided against the oni's party and an immense number was slaughtered, and their blood covered the plain.

Next morning, the peach child's army having completely routed the oni's hosts and captured the iron castle of their prince, after a diligent search in the castle they found the beautiful and lovely daughter of the king confined in a dark dungeon.

When the victorious army opened the oni's treasury, they found numerous precious things. Among them were two suits of winged dresses and a mysterious Japanese box.

The peach child and the king's daughter put on the winged dresses and flew back to the king's palace in a few minutes and told the king what had happened in the Oniga Shima.

The old king was very much pleased and gave his daughter in marriage to the peach child, who after the old king's death ascended the Japanese throne.

The wonder of his age and reign was the mysterious box which was taken from the oni, out of which the king could obtain anything he wanted.—New York News.

Remarkable Memories.

There was a Corsican boy who could rehearse 40,000 words, whether sense or nonsense, as they were dictated and then repeat them in the reversed order without making a single mistake. A physician about sixty years ago could repeat the whole of "Paradise Lost" without making a single mistake, although he had not read it for twenty years. Euler, the great mathematician, when he became blind could repeat the whole of Virgil's "Æneid" and could remember the first line and last line of every page of the particular edition which he had been accustomed to read before he became blind.—Spare Moments.

ONLY A SLIP OF PAPER

Twelve years ago the firm of Wade, Scale & Co. of Chicago received an order from John Fox for 400 bags of sugar, each bag to weigh 100 pounds. The order was filled, the bill paid, and the transaction closed.

One day recently a man with a sombrero on strolled into the office of Wade, Scales & Co. He took the blank slip of paper offered him and wrote this on it:

Mr. Nobody, from Nowhere. This is my name until after our conversation.

"Give that to the boss," he said, "and tell him I think he'll be glad to see me."

Curiosity more than anything else led the staid and dignified Mr. Wade to allow this unconventional visitor a chance to get into his private office. Once there, Mr. Nobody said, "If I'll show you where there is $1,500 due this firm and easily collectable, $1,500 that you know nothing about, what will the information be worth to me?"

"I don't see how it's possible," said Mr. Wade, "that even with our great business there could be that large amount due us and we know nothing about it."

"Tell me what it's worth to me if my information is correct—and I'll prove to you by your own books inside of five minutes that it is correct—and then we'll proceed to business."

"Information that this firm is so foolish as not to know that an easy collectable $1,500 is due is worth $50 to any man who will prove it. Show me that we are such business idiots, and I'll give you $50 right out of my own pocket. More than that, if by the faintest chance what you say should prove true and we can collect the $1,500, I'll give you a third of it."

The sombreroed stranger went down into an inside pocket. "Go to your books Sept. 12, 1889," he said.

Mr. Wade went to his books. There, after the stranger had mentioned an invoice number, they found what in a nutshell was this: "Shipped to John Fox, Bicknell, Ariz., 400 bags of sugar of 100 pounds each—40,000 pounds."

"Now turn to your books of Jan. 14, 1890."

It did not take Mr. Wade and his bookkeeper more than a minute to find out that instead of sending a bill for 40,000 pounds of sugar to John Fox they had sent him a bill for 400 pounds, a bill which he had paid promptly. A receipt had been sent Mr. Fox and the transaction closed, and the error had never been discovered. There was due the firm of Wade & Scales from John Fox $1,500 and interest thereon for something like twelve years.

"You see," said the visitor, "I was Mr. Fox's bookkeeper for years and years. When the bill for 400 pounds of sugar came in, I said, 'I'll pay the bill as it stands, and if they ever send a bill for the remaining 3,600 pounds I'll pay that, too, but I guess we don't need to worry about the mistake.' The other day John Fox kicked me out of his employment for a trivial mistake—kicked me out penniless at that. What I am doing now you may consider a piece of revenge. So it is largely, but I also need money."

The westerner left the place with $50 in his pocket, and the next mail took a bill to John Fox for $1,500 plus the interest for twelve years. Actuated by curiosity to know how the man would explain the matter, Mr. Wade inclosed with the bill a query as to why, having received 40,000 pounds of sugar, Mr. Fox had sent on pay for only 400 pounds.

Within a week a check for the full amount of the bill and interest was received. John Fox was too good a business man not to know that he must pay instantly, but as far as his dishonesty was concerned this is what he said in his letter, the only bit of writing that appeared except the name and figures on the check:

I make it a point never to pay until bills are presented. You never sent the bill for the extra 3,600 pounds. JOHN FOX.

Was Fox a thief or simply commercially shrewd?

In the years that had passed John Fox had become a multimillionaire. Recently he wished to open a great establishment in Chicago. A real estate agent found him a finely located building near the heart of the business district. Fox came way on to look at it. He went to the agent's office and found him looking somewhat downcast, as a man might look who was out a fat commission.

"Mr. Fox," said the agent, "I was utterly dumfounded this morning when informed by the owners of the building selected for you that they would not let you have it under any circumstances. The owners are a firm of wholesale grocers. When I pressed them for a reason for refusing to let the property to you, the head of the firm handed me a slip of paper and said: 'I understand Mr. Fox is to come to see you today. When he asks you for our reason in declining to rent to him, simply give him this piece of paper.'"

John Fox held out his hand and received the slip of paper from the agent. He unfolded it. He saw that it was one of his own letterheads, and below the printing he read this, written in his own hand:

Wade, Scales & Co.:
Gentlemen—I make it a point never to pay until bills are presented. JOHN FOX.

—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Feathered Thief.

A Parisian heiress who had for some time been suffering losses of jewelry determined to set a trap for the thief. So she left a diamond bracelet on her bureau, retired into an adjoining room and began to watch through the keyhole. Presently a starling hopped through the window, seized the bracelet and deposited it in the chimney, where all the missing jewelry was subsequently found.

The SPORTING WORLD

The coach is always one of the most important factors in developing a winning football team. In the college world large salaries are paid to players of fame for their services during the whole or part of the pigskin chasing season.

"Beef" Heffelfinger, now one of the coaches of the Yale eleven, is one of the best judges of gridiron play in the country. He is looked up to as a sort of demigod by this year's New Haven team, and whatever "Beef" says "goes." Heffelfinger was a guard at Yale in 1889-90-91. During those three years he was the best man in the position in the college arena. Heffelfinger held a position on the All America teams of 1889-90-91 and was associated with such famous players as Gill, Stagg, McClung, Hartwell and Heney of Yale, Channing, Ames, Riggs, Homans and King of Princeton, Lee, Hallowell, Newell and Lake of Harvard and Adams of the University of Pennsylvania.

"BEEF" HEFFELFINGER, THE FAMOUS YALE COACH.

Heffelfinger gives his attention especially to the line men. He is peculiarly fitted to instruct the center men in the possibilities of their positions, and to his efforts are due the extremely creditable performances of the Eli guards and center during the season now closing.

Auto Racing Records.

The breaking of automobile records is getting to be an almost daily occurrence, and the minimum time in which a high geared, many horsepower machine can circle a mile track seems to be still unfixed. Within a month the record has been lowered several times, and a machine now that cannot whirl the distance in at least a minute and a quarter need not hope to win in the race. The contests for lower record have been intensified by the international element entering into the sport by the hot rivalry between French and American makers. Until recently it was necessary in order to get a really fast machine to go to the foreign makers.

The two chauffeurs who have been most prominent in the automobile world lately are A. C. Bostwick, the young millionaire sportsman, who is one of the vice presidents of the Automobile Club of America, and Henri Fournier, the well known French chauffeur, who won the long distance race from Paris to Berlin this year and who has won many competitions on this side of the water. Fournier was the mentor of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in the sport, and Vanderbilt has been his companion in some of his most sensational rides.

World's Turf Bodies Agree.

That an agreement between the leading horse racing bodies of England and the United States of America will be made, whereby the authorities of the turf will have control of all racing affairs, has been settled beyond the shadow of a doubt by the recent statement made by August Belmont, one of the organizers of the Jockey Club of America and for several terms president of that organization.

Mr. Belmont is now in England and has had important conferences with the authorities of the English turf. He also visited France, where he talked with the leading men in French racing affairs and, as was stated afterward by French turf writers, induced the French Jockey club to agree to an arrangement whereby the relations between the French and the American turf shall be reciprocal.

Mr. Belmont saw the English turf authorities on the same matter and from all reports obtained an agreement on the subject. When seen, he declined to talk further than to state that he had discussed turf affairs with the officials of both the English and the French turf and that they had displayed the most friendly spirit toward the Jockey Club of the United States.

Fiercest Baseball War.

President Watkins of Indianapolis has been through several baseball wars, but he thinks the present struggle the fiercest he has ever known. He is astounded at the prices the American league people are paying the National league stars they have claimed to have under contract.

Trotting Board of Appeals.

The next regular meeting of the board of appeals of the American Trotting association will be held at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, Tuesday, Dec. 3, at 10 a. m.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

In the Big Railway Deal.

The largest railway deal ever made or even attempted has been consummated under the title of the Northern Securities company. In the combination are the vast properties of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and the Burlington, making a total of over 47,000 mileage. E. H. Harriman, who was a prominent figure in the Northern Pacific war of last May, was one of the principal factors in bringing about this amalgamation.

E. H. HARRIMAN.

Among others interested in this greatest of railway transactions were J. P. Morgan, J. J. Hill, James M. Stillman, W. K. Vanderbilt and John D. Rockefeller.

Russell Sage says this latest move of the railway kings is a menace to the country, because it means the destruction of competition in railway transportation.

The Oldest Living General.

After the Duke of Luxemburg, the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz—a brother-in-law of the Duke of Cambridge—who recently celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his enrollment in the Prussian army, is now the oldest living general. He is, moreover, the third oldest sovereign in Europe, the Duke of Luxemburg being the oldest and King Christian the second oldest. He was eighty-two on the 17th of October and has for many years been totally blind. He is a great favorite of King Edward and spent some time at Homburg with him last month.

Oldest Man.

James Farrell of Barboursville, W. Va., recently celebrated the one hundred and fifth anniversary of his birth. He is now probably the oldest man in the United States. Mr. Farrell served in the war of 1812 and later was in Mexico, under Jefferson Davis. When the war between the states broke out, he enlisted, although no longer a young man, and saw four years of service. He was probably the oldest veteran to offer his services to the government when the Spanish war broke out.

A Defamed American.

Considerable interest is taken both in England and the United States over the trouble that has arisen between an American girl and an English artist. Miss Vanderbilt Wackerman, a beautiful New York woman, has resided abroad several years in company with her mother. The young lady has been painted by several famous European artists, and not long ago Professor Herkomer, the well known London artist, solicited "the honor of painting her exquisitely beautiful face and figure." Before the picture was completed Miss Wackerman's mother had to pay a visit to this country, and the young lady went upon invitation to stay with the Herkomers. As soon as the picture was completed Professor Herkomer turned his beautiful model from his door under circumstances and with words that constituted a serious reflection upon the young lady's character. No specific charges were made, and those who know Miss Wackerman became very indignant at what they call the defamation of her character. Worry over the cruel insinuations made against her by the artist has unbalanced the mind of Miss Wackerman, and she has been committed to a London hospital for the insane.

MISS VANDERBILT WACKERMAN.

What steps will be taken by the parents and friends of the injured young lady to bring Professor Herkomer to account for his unjust and uncalled for attack remains to be seen.

TO THE PEOPLE:
Some time ago the "Jack-of-All-Trades" began to tell the people what he could do. He made great claims; promised to do more than ever had been done before, and more than most people believed possible. You all know the success he has attained, and as he became more familiar with the country he was traveling in, he could see the possibilities of greater work, and to accomplish this he has introduced to you a traveling companion. Behold his features in the shape of a 2½ H. P. Geared Base Vertical Gasoline Engine. His specialties are pumping water and general farm use. He is very versatile, and when his time is not wanted for pumping water, by a movement of one of his arms, he can disconnect the gears and his power can be directed for other purposes. He is beginning to travel all over the country from the Canadian Provinces to the Equator, and from the Eastern Coast to the Philippines. He is taking up all sorts of work for all kinds of people, and it is surprising to note the results of his work for the first year. Send for information and catalogue.

Where Smoking Is a Crime.

There is one country in the world where it is considered a crime to smoke. Abyssinia is the region, and the law forbidding tobacco dates from the year 1642. It was at first merely intended to prevent priests from smoking in the churches, but it was taken too literally, and nowadays even foreigners have to be careful not to be seen smoking.

An Unusual Race.

An unusual race was advertised to be run at Ripon, in Yorkshire, in 1725: "The Lady's Plate, of £15 value, by any horse that was no more than five years old the last grass. Women to be the riders. Each to pay a guinea entrance. Three heats and twice round the common for a heat."

Ireland has 408 ablebodied persons to 1,000 inhabitants, Scotland 424 and England 432.

POINTERS ON MANICURING.

When the nails are fragile, a little wax and alum rubbed upon them will strengthen them. If brittle, a little almond oil or cold cream will be found beneficial.

To remove white spots from the nails use a mixture of refined pitch and a little myrrh upon them at night, wiping it off the next morning with olive oil.

When about to manicure the hands, dip the fingers into warm, soapy water and hold them there for a minute or two in order to soften the nails and the scarfskin about them.

The scarfskin should be gently pushed back from the nails before they are polished. It should never unless absolutely necessary be cut with the scissors.

Agnails, improperly called hangnails, may be prevented by proper attention to the scarfskin which surrounds the nails.

For manicuring only a pair of curved nail scissors, a nail file, an orange stick, a chamois polisher, a bottle of vaseline and a box of rose salve or nail powder are necessary.—Mary E. Walker, M. D., in Ladies' Home Journal.

Creamery will be Built.

The meeting held at the village hall last Thursday afternoon to discuss the starting of a creamery was largely attended and the merits and demerits of the proposition were talked over at length. The original idea of starting a co-operative creamery was abandoned and the meeting closed without any definite action being taken by the farmers.

A representative of a Minneapolis cold storage concern held the floor during the greater portion of the meeting in an effort to defeat the starting of a creamery. He succeeded in discouraging some of the farmers but he was a failure so far as defeating the project altogether was concerned.

Peter E. Lonby, an expert butter maker from Fond Du Lac, Wis., also attended the meeting and after it was finished arrangement were made whereby Mr Lonby will start an independent creamery. Work on the construction of the necessary buildings will be commenced as soon as possible and the latest and best machinery will be put in.

According to the report rendered at the meeting there are nearly 700 cows in close proximity to provide the milk supply. This would indicate that the creamery, when started, will be able to do a splendid business all the time and if Mr Lonby receives the patronage he deserves the undertaking will prove decidedly profitable to the proprietor, the farmers who patronize him and the community at large.

A sad calamity befel Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Dargan yesterday. While visiting at Cass Lake their daughter, aged eight years, was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis, and in spite of prompt medical attendance, died from the disease. The remains were brought to Red Lake Falls last night, and the funeral will occur tomorrow from St. Mary's. The sympathy of the entire community will be extended to the family.—Red Lake Falls Courier, Jan. 23rd.

—Julius Pleth, the land man wants to buy your farm. Do you want to sell? If so call at his office two doors south of Hotel Markham.

Not many of the thousands of Americans who read and marveled at "Quo Vadis" know that the man who wrote this great book was himself for some time a resident of this country. In the February number of The Ladies Home Journal Clifford Howard brings out this interesting fact in describing the beautiful home of Madame Modjeska in Southern California. Sienkiewicz came to America about the middle of September, 1876, with a party of thirty Polish imigrants, not such as we usually picture to ourselves as landing at New York, but ladies and gentlemen of culture, many of them persons of national reputation in Poland. They had been imbued with a desire to live in the land of liberty by Modjeska and her husband, Count Bozenta. And in due time they found themselves in the beautiful Santa Anna Valley. Here they lived in perfect contentment, but in time their funds grew low, and one after another they drifted back to Poland, Sinkiewicz among them, leaving behind only the great actress.

Gold in Streets of New York.

Workmen in the employ of McCabe Bros., contractors for the new subway in New York, were considerably excited the other day while taking out some rock to find a yellow streak of gold. A large crowd was attracted to the entrance of the shaft by a rumor of the strike, but upon investigation it was found to be too small a quantity to pay. Even a small quantity of "Golden Grain Belt" beer will pay you a hundred fold in terms of good health. Every glass contains the strength of bread and meat, because it is brewed from the purest barley malt and hops. Pure, sparkling and delicious, it should be in every home. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston, Minn.

Services will be held in the M. E. Church every Sunday as follows: Sunday School, 10 a. m.; Preaching, 11 a. m. Junior League, 3 p. m.; Epworth L'gue 6:30 p. m.; Preaching, 7:30 p. m.

COSTLY PLATE.

Some London Companies Have Old and Interesting Services.

Few people, at least in this country, possess plate worth such a fabulous sum as that owned by London's lord mayor during his term of office. Its face value has been computed to be slightly over £2,000, though three times that amount would not buy it owing to the historical interest attached to many of the articles.

The two solid silver soup tureens which are employed at the banquet to distribute 160 gallons of clear turtle to the guests are valued at £500 apiece and are said to have been in possession of the corporation for over a century.

Moreover, there are a pile of silver dinner plates worth £1,500, 200 ice pails valued at nearly £1,000, 200 entree dishes, the cost of which £2,000 would not cover; 80 solid silver meat dishes worth another £2,000, and hundreds of other articles, such as grape scissors, salt cellars, wine cups, waiters' trays, decanter labels, etc., all of solid gold or silver and valued at over £5,000.

This collection of plate is constantly being increased, for every lord mayor at the expiration of his term of office is expected to add an item, the cost of which must not be lower than 100 guineas.

In addition the lord mayor's official regalia is costly in the extreme. The diamond pendent that hangs about his neck could not be bought for £1,000, and his collar cost a quarter of that sum, while his pearl sword necessitated the corporation spending £900 when it was new.

But the other companies in the city possess plate of even greater value. The Goldsmiths, for instance, own the most priceless collection, the worth of which it is impossible to estimate. It includes Queen Elizabeth's coronation cup, for which an offer of £5,000 was refused some time ago. The Fishmongers' company boasts of, among other things, a silver chandelier, and estimates of its value have never fallen below £3,250.—London Tit-Bits.

How Lamp Chimneys Were Invented.

Lamp glasses were invented by Aime Argand, the inventor of the famous lamp and gas burner which bears his name. He had been experimenting for some time in trying to increase the light, but to no purpose. On the table before him lay the broken neck of an oil flask. This he took up carelessly and placed it, almost without thought, over the wick. A brilliant flame was the result, and the hint was not lost upon the experimentalist, who proceeded to put his discovery into practical operation at once.

OLD JOE, THE NIGHT WATCHMAN

(From the Pall Mall Gazette, London.)

How often on returning home late on a dreary winter's night has our sympathy gone out to the poor old night-watchman as he sat huddled up over his cage fire, overlooking the excavations which our city council in their wisdom or otherwise, allow the different water companies to make so frequently in our congested streets. In all weathers and under all climatic conditions, the poor old night-watchman is obliged to keep watch over the companies' property, and to see that the red lights are kept burning. What a life, to be sure; what privations and hardships; no wonder they have aches and pains, which nothing but St. Jacob's Oil can alleviate.

"Old Joe" is in the employ of the Lambeth Water Works, and is well and favorably known. He has been a night-watchman for many years, in the course of which he has undergone many experiences. What with wet and cold, he contracted rheumatism and sciatica, which fairly doubled him up, and it began to look a serious matter for old Joe whether he would much longer be able to perform his duties, on which his good wife and himself depended for a livelihood; but as it happened, a passerby, who had for some nights noticed Old Joe's painful condition, presented him with a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil, and told him to use it. Old Joe followed the advice given; he crawled home the next morning and bade his wife rub his aching back with the St. Jacob's Oil "a gentleman gave him," and undoubtedly his wife did rub, for when old Joe went on duty at night he met his friend and benefactor, to whom he remarked: "Them Oils you gave me, Guv'nor, did give me a doing; they was like pins and needles for a time, but look at me now," and old Joe began to run and jump about like a young colt. All pain, stiffness and soreness had gone; he had been telling everybody he met what St. Jacob's Oil had done for him. Old Joe says now he has but one ambition in life, and that is to always to be able to keep a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil by him for he says there is nothing like it in the world.

St. Jacob's Oil serves the rich and the poor, high and low the same way. It has conquered pain for fifty years, and it will do the same to the end of time. It has no equal, consequently no competitor; it has many cheap imitations, but simple facts like the above tell an honest tale with which nothing on earth can compete.

The Dog Governess.

The lowest rung in the industrial ladder would seem to have been reached when a woman of education and refinement hires her services by the hour in the interests of "my lady's dog." "Dog governesses" is the title given to a woman who calls daily at certain houses of wealth, and, for a consideration, takes the dog or dogs for a constitutional in the park. She also oversees the animals' bath, and attends to every detail of the canine wardrobe. Is there not the fall, winter and spring overcoat, the ear mufflers, not to forget the burnishing of his dogship's collar?—New York Times.

"Girls are the easiest things on earth to manage when you know how, and Kitty is no worse than the rest. She won't refuse you, Tom."

"Easiest things to manage when you know how, that's right. But I don't know how."

"Well, just go about it in a straightforward way, old man, and if she begins to act up use a little tact and diplomacy."

"But Kitty is so bright, so gentle, so different from other girls. I'm——"

"Yes, yes, yes. They all are when you love them. Now, I've lived with Kitty twenty years and I know she averages with the best and is just like every other woman has been since the days of Eve. The comfort racket is a good one, Tom. Ask her what makes her so unhappy."

"But Kitty is always cheerful and gay and——"

"Yes, I know. But the second or third time you tell her she is perfectly wretched, just on the verge of desperation and is merely putting up this semblance of gaiety out of her goodness of heart, that you can see her proud, noble heart—don't forget the 'proud'—is fairly bursting with grief and all that song and dance. Why, she'll begin to cry and think perhaps you're right. A girl never can resist being thought unhappy. As soon as she cries you've won. Catch her in your arms and smooth her hair and tell her not to cry, little girl; that you'll protect her from now on through all eternity, and you'll be engaged before either of you realize it. That never fails."

Jack Warner lighted a fresh cigar and stretched himself lazily. He could just see his friend's face dimly in the growing darkness.

"I first realized that I loved her, Jack, that week she came down for the football game and the junior hop. She is so young, so girlish and pretty——"

"She is pretty, old man. And that reminds me of another good point that beats the 'comfort' game. To-morrow morning's a good time, while I'm down at the bank with the Governor. Get her to talking and then sit and smile and look at her. Then suddenly, as if completely ensnared and in a voice that comes from your shoes, you know, get behind her and tip her face back so you are looking right in it, and say—or gasp, gasping is better—'My God, you are beautiful,' with strong emphasis on the 'are.' Then kiss her. She may get mad, but you can't lose on that, Tom."

Soft, modulated chimes from the dining-room announced that dinner was ready at this point, and arm in arm the two friends and college classmates left the library.

"Sakes alive, chile! You all in heah?" cried Georgia, a moment later, as she lighted the tall candelabra on the library table. Georgia had nursed Kitty Warner from babyhood and considered herself one of the family. Seeing Miss Kitty curled up in an immense library chair with crimson cheeks and blazing eyes and white fingers clenched tightly together completely upset her, and winding her plump arms about the slight little figure, she said softly:

"Did Mistah Tommy 'buse my baby?"

"No, but he's so conceited and he's been telling Jack all sorts of silly things, and they woke me up, and I'm not going to stand it, so there!" And Kitty threw the book she had been reading before she fell asleep clear across the room and ran after and picked it up and carefully placed it in the case a second later. Then, laughing, she went down to dinner.

The next morning Tom betook his handsome self to the bank as planned, leaving Kitty to entertain his friend until luncheon.

"Now's your time, Jack," he said, with a wink and a nudge in Jack's ribs with the soft point of his elbow as he left the house.

"I'd rather not drive," Kitty announced. "I want to talk to you, Mr. Dwight."

Jack was in the seventh heaven.

"I know you will forgive me for mentioning it, but I can't endure to see others suffer. And, you know, Mr. Dwight, ever since you came home with Tom, I've been wondering what makes you so desperately unhappy."

"So there!"

"On the contrary, I am most happy, Miss Kitty."

"Ah, no you are not. I can see it in your eyes, that wan, flitting shadow of woe."

"But I am not unhappy. Now, isn't it queer. I have always imagined you were unhappy."

"I, Mr. Dwight? Ah, but it is different with a woman. The second or third time she is persuaded. But a man! How many times must I tell you you are miserable before you will believe me?"

"Really, Miss Warnor, exactly what do you mean?"

"Mean? Nothing, but that you are trembling on the verge of despondency and I am using a little tact and diplomacy in letting you know it. You are miserable and you should realize it, that others may be happy. Your college education has amounted to little. You may know football and the classics, but you are not capable of appreciating the common laws of social life."

"That's right, Miss Kitty. I'm a—"

"You are. But, my God! you ARE beautiful!"

"Miss Kitty, you heard!"

"Now, if Brother Tom only comes back in time to help you pack your bag and make the afternoon train how tactful and diplomatic he will be."

"Do you want me to go?"

"Yes."

"I apologize."

"I will not accept your apology."

Dwight bowed stiffly and mentally calling down dire disaster on the head of Tom Warner, he left the room and hurriedly threw his few belongings into a dress-suit case.

"But, my God! You ARE beautiful."

Half an hour later he passed the music room, where Kitty was still sitting, with her hands clasped listlessly in her lap. With the determination that had won many a football game for his class, Dwight entered the room.

"Kitty," he said abruptly. "Will you consider yourself engaged to me?"

"Why, of course," she answered.

"I see it's a go," shouted Tom, a moment later entering the room.

NOBILITY IN DISTRESS.

Austrian Countess Obliged to Serve as Chicago Nursemaid.

An interesting case with an American end to it is now engaging the attention of the Austrian law courts, where Count Des Fours-Walderode, scion of one of the oldest houses of the Bohemian aristocracy, is being called to severe account for squandering the fortune of his two children, for having neglected to give them an education in keeping with their rank and for having rendered himself guilty of gross contempt of court, notably by kidnaping his children some years ago from the care of the guardians appointed by law, and after he had been judicially deprived of his parental rights on account of his extravagance. The count, whose matrimonial differences with his wife resulted in a sensational divorce, the court deciding that neither the husband or wife was worthy of the guardianship of the children, abducted his boy and girl from their legal guardian and fled with them to Switzerland. On the intervention of the Swiss courts being invoked by the Austrian authorities he came with them to this country, and, according to the evidence just produced in court, neglected them to such a degree that his daughter, the Countess Marie, now 21 years of age, was obliged to take a position as nurse girl in a family in Chicago under the name of Marie Mertens, while the boy, who is two years younger, was left to pick up his own living as errand boy in a store in New York, also under an assumed name. Finally the family learned of the condition of the two children and caused them to be brought over to Europe, where they arrived penniless and with nothing but the clothes on their backs, the young count, in spite of his 19 years, being as ignorant as a boy of 13. The girl has now been placed in possession of her share of the family fortune, which is large and sufficient to keep her in comfort and affluence, while steps have been taken to prepare the boy for the army, his maintenance being meanwhile provided for in keeping with his rank. Both children in court displayed considerable bitterness toward their father, especially the girl, who seems to have retained a particularly disagreeable recollection of the time when she was obliged to earn her living as nurse girl at Chicago. Today her allowance from the family fortune is $20,000 a year.—Baltimore American.

Wall Tables in Restaurants.

A Philadelphia philosopher thus explains the general preference for a wall table in a restaurant: "Primitive man ate in peril. The cave bear, the sabre tooth tiger, even some warrior of his own kind, was apt at any moment to leap upon him and to devour his food, and perhaps himself. Therefore he took his meals with his back against a cliff, or in the corner of two adjoining cliffs, if possible, and with the open country before him. That you see, was the safest way for him to eat. He could not then be surprised. And we still have in us that memory of the primitive man, and we still unconsciously, when we sit down to our repasts, choose places that give us a wall for our protection."

Strictly Useful.

"Our church fair was a splendid success," said young Mrs. Torkins.

"Did you sell lots of things?"

"Yes."

"Yes, indeed. Everything was ever so useful, I can't think of a single article that couldn't be saved up and donated to be sold at the next fair."

FROM SASKATCHEWAN, WESTERN CANADA.

In a letter written from Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, one of the districts of western Canada, by Henry Laughlin to Dr. C. T. Field of Chase, Michigan, and which appeared in the Reed City (Michigan) Clarion, appeared the following:

"If any one should ask you how I like it up here, tell them I am perfectly well satisfied; for me it is just the place. I have as good a piece of land as ever laid outdoors. Wouldn't exchange it for the whole of Lake County, or at least the township of Chase.

"Of course, I have not been here very long, but as much of the country as I have seen it cannot be beat anywhere. We had as good crops here last fall as I ever saw, and everything gets ripe in good shape. We had as good ripe potatoes as I ever ate in my life. There is no better place for stock on the continent than here. Horses and cattle will do as good running out all winter here as they do where they are fed all winter there. Have built me a residence and now all I want is a wife to keep house for me. I have some breaking already done on my place, but next summer I intend to have more done and then I will be ready for business.

"We have had a very fine winter so far. It has not been much below zero, if any, excepting about a week in the middle of November. It has been quite cold the past day or two. We are in log shanties, and they are just muddled up on the outside, and nothing has frozen on the inside as yet. There is no wind or rain, just nice steady weather all the time."

Lasted Until Nine.

At the recent meeting of the Pennsylvania society, one of the guests, who was seated next to Augustus Thomas, the playwright, and the president of the Missouri society, asked Mr. Thomas why the menu cards designated the dinner as the "annual festival."

"That's easy," said Mr. Thomas. "The menu cards were gotten up by a Philadelphia man, and every Philadelphia man who goes to an entertainment which lasts beyond 9 o'clock at night, regards it as a festival."—New York Times.

A Widow Only One Week.

The following message was received in this city:

"Married—On Saturday, Dec. 28, at the residence of the archbishop, in New York, Baron Zdzislaw Bestecki, of Austria, and Mrs. Mary Ross Hummell, daughter of the late Andrew Ross."

Mrs. Mary Ross Hummell formerly resided in this city, but for several months has been living in Manhattan. She was born and raised near New Cumberland, and is a member of one of the prominent families of this part of the state. Her former husband, Valentine Hummell, died a week from yesterday, and three days after his burial she remarried. Mr. Hummell separated from his wife some time ago, and divorce proceedings were pending in court when he died.—Harrisburg Special to Philadelphia Record.

Is Diabetes Curable?

Halo, Ind., Jan. 27th.—In answer, Mrs. L. C. Bowers of this place has this to say:

"I had Kidney Trouble which, neglected, finally ran into diabetes; my teeth all got loose and part of them came out; I passed from one and a half to two gallons of water in twenty-four hours, and such a burning sensation attended it that I could hardly bear it. I lost forty pounds in flesh and was very much discouraged.

"Two doctors treated me, and I took every Kidney Medicine I could hear of, but got no relief whatever from anything till I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Seven boxes of this remedy drove away every symptom I have mentioned."

To Cure a Child of Croup.

Wring flannel cloths out of hot water and apply them to the throat, changing them frequently. Make a tent over the crib, by means of sheets over an umbrella or screen, then place a small teakettle over an alcohol lamp near the crib and let the child inhale the moist vapor, which may be conducted inside the tent, care being taken that the child does not come close enough to the hot steam to get burned. If the attack is severe, you may give ten drops of syrup of ipecac every fifteen minutes until vomiting results. It would be best to keep the patient indoors for a day or two after the attack.—Ladies' Home Journal.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

EXPERT AS CABINET-MAKER.

Young Woman of Minneapolis Handles the Plane and Saw.

Minneapolis has a successful cabinet-maker in the person of Miss Helen Heisser, whose work is equal in point of excellence to that of any of her masculine competitors. She has set up her bench in her own apartments and there she may be found any day fashioning some artistic piece of work out of the rough boards which she procures from a neighboring lumber yard. Miss Heisser is her own designer and her work not only shows excellent workmanship, but originality along lines that are soundly artistic. Her work has ranged from an ordinary kitchen shelf to the finest kind of delicately wrought little mahogany boxes and chests of drawers. The young cabinet-maker has had no assistance, and the transformation from rough boards to the polished and carved work is accomplished wholly by hand tools. Woods are bought in rough boards and Miss Heisser even does her own veneering. The finest piece of work turned out last fall is a tiny mahogany chest of drawers four inches in height and five and a half inches in width. This miniature piece of furniture is for a man's writing table and intended for small articles of dress—pins, studs, cuff links and collar buttons. Quite in contrast to this is a heavy, solid dark walnut reading table with a sloping top on which to rest heavy books. A substantial bench belongs with this table. A large and handsome piece of work is a screen six feet in height in three panels. This was carved and stained green. Some of the finest carving has been done on boxes and jewel cases, but book racks also afford an opportunity for carving and work in color. Until this fall she has been occupied chiefly in teaching. She took the manual training course at the central high school and followed this by a course in kindergartening. While in school she executed several good pieces of construction work and wood-carving, following designs made by her sister, Miss Margarethe E. Heisser, art teacher at the Moorhead normal school and formerly a leader of the Minneapolis art colony. For nearly two years Miss Helen Heisser taught manual training at the school for the feeble-minded at Faribault, giving up that work last summer.—Chicago Chronicle.

AN INCOMPARABLE SYSTEM.

Is That of Transportation in the United States.

One of the important factors in the strength of our industrial position is the unquestioned superiority of our transportation system, says Frank A. Vanderlip in Scribner's Magazine. If one has fresh in mind the picture of our luxurious trains, mammoth engines, and, more important still, our standard fifty-ton freight cars, it makes the Europeans seem like amateurs in the science of transportation when we see their toy cars, small locomotives, and generally slow-going administration. If one looked into the matter with the eye of an expert, studying the unit of cost, the freight charges per ton per mile, or the mileage rate for passenger service, and made comparative statistics of the tonnage of freight trains and the cost of moving them, he would discover a startling lack of efficiency, both in Great Britain and on the continent. Perhaps it is not quite fair to make comparisons of the average cost of freight traffic per ton per mile in America and in Europe, because the average haul is much shorter there, and terminal expenses of a haul are practically the same whatever its length. The average charge per ton per mile on all American railroads for all classes of freight is now less than ¾ of a cent. If we take the statistics of the eastern trunk lines alone, that figure would be cut to about ½ cent per ton per mile. It compares with 2.4 in Great Britain, 2.2 in France, 1.6 in Germany, and 2.4 in Russia. One of the most remarkable illustrations of the failure of European managers of industries to keep pace with the times is found in a comparison of the efficiency of their railroads with ours. English railroads charge three times as much to move a ton of freight as it can be moved for in America. English railroad managers have failed to grasp the economies that are made possible by heavy traffic, by the use of engines of enormous capacity and freight cars that will carry fifty tons. But if the English railroads have failed to keep pace with ours, what can be said of the continental roads? Short trains, with pigmy freight cars, each car holding only about eight tons, make clear to any layman the handicap which high transportation charges have laid on industry all over Europe.

The English of Australia.

One of the gold field papers in western Australia has been bewailing the uncultured "accent" adopted by "educated" children in the "Westralian" state schools. In proof of this such examples are given as "ee-yuh" for "here," "patiekler" for "particular," "bin," for "been," and "seen" for "saw." It is pointed out, however, that in other parts of the Australian continent a more objectionable form of language, the use of slang, predominates. A head is a "top-piece" or a "napper," eyes "lamps" or "ogles," an ear is a "lug" or a "paddlebox," a mouth is a "kisser" or "mush," a face is a "dial" or a "phiz," and legs are "dutches," an abbreviation of "Dutch pegs."—London Daily Chronicle.

France's Depopulation.

The official report of the French minister of commerce on the census of 1890 is accompanied by tabulated statistics of a detailed character. The population of France is 38,517,975. There were 299,084 marriages in 1900, 7,157 divorces, 827,297 births, and 853,285 deaths. This gives a diminution of 25,988 on the population. Striking an average for births and deaths for the ten years, 1890-99, it appears there was an annual increase of 22,715. From comparisons made of quinquennial periods during the last fifty years, it has been established that during the last twenty years the excess of births over deaths has been much less than during the previous periods.

Awakened the "Sleepless" Pastor

There is a point to this story:

A burglar, whose night entry into the parsonage awakened the sleepless pastor, said to his helpless victim:

"If you stir you're a dead man. I'm hunting for money."

"Just let me get up and strike a light," pleasantly replied the dominie, "and I shall be glad to assist you in the search."—Boston Watchman.

Dream of Boyhood Days.

"The dream of my boyhood days," observed J. Pierpont Morgan to a friend, recently, "was to be a farmer, and have the finest stock in the world—the dolce far niente of the farmer's life was my farm."

"Well, you have your farm and your stock—to say nothing of stocks," retorted the friend.

"Well, but I am the man of all work, and haven't got the dolce far niente; and I can't buy it, either, as big a price as I might be willing to pay for it."—New York Times.

Treasures of the Sultan.

One of the suite of our ambassador, M. Constans, has given us some stupefying details of the mass of wealth in the treasury of the sultan. These treasures are continually growing. Abdul Hamid has the ambition to possess riches in jewels superior to those of any other sovereign, not excepting the shah of Persia. His tastes are encouraged and taken advantage of by a crowd of courtiers.

To visit these treasures, special permission must be obtained through the ambassador, and these visits are only permitted once or twice a year. The three magnificent emeralds which are, as regards their size, the most beautiful known, are of inestimable value.—Le Diament.

He Denied the Purchase.

Henry Shaw, a Yale man, brings from Paris a story of how he secured the autograph of Emil Zola, the French novelist. He wrote a letter to Zola, complaining of the non-payment of a bill for some wine which Shaw claimed to have furnished. By the next mail he received the coveted letter, in which the author strenuously denied having purchased the wine.—New York Times.

SWEPT BY FLAMES

WATERBURY, CONN., HAS A DESPERATE FIGHT WITH FIERY ELEMENT.

BUSINESS SECTION IS IN RUINS

FIRE BREAKS OUT DURING THE HARDEST GALE OF THE WINTER.

THREATENED WITH DESTRUCTION

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATES PLACE THE LOSS AT ABOUT $2,000,000.

Waterbury, Conn., Feb. 3. — In the hardest gale of the winter Waterbury struggled last night with a fire that destroyed a large area of the business section of the city and threatened to wipe it out completely.

The blaze started in the upholstery department on the third floor of the store of the Read & Hughes Dry Goods company at 108-120 Bank street, and that store and many adjoining buildings were wrecked in a few hours to smouldering embers.

An estimate of $2,000,000 as the amount of property loss on buildings and contents was considered conservative by insurance men. The origin of the fire is unknown and it was undiscovered until it had gained tremendous headway. At 6:15 p. m. three employes of the Read & Hughes company were in the store, and when they left they noticed no odor of smoke about the main floor. Fifteen minutes later flames were seen to burst with great force from the windows of the third floor and from the basement. Before anybody could ring in an alarm the whole interior of the building was a mass of flames. When the department reached the scene flames were issuing from every window in the building and it was evident that the structure was doomed and the entire business section of the city was imperiled.

The fire started in a drizzling rain with a rapidly rising wind, and with the increasing cold the rain turned to snow. The wind was at first shifting, but it settled toward the east and carried destruction with it. After 9 o'clock the militia was called out to preserve order. There was serious talk of blowing up buildings to prevent the spread of the flames. Shortly after midnight the fire, which had apparently been brought under control, broke out in new places, and the efforts of the local firemen, combined with the Aid Given by Fire Fighters

and apparatus from Hartford, Torrington, Bridgeport, New Haven and Naugatuck, seemed powerless to stay its progress. The blaze was wiping out the business portion of the city, all the fire being confined to that part of the city, though the resident section was in danger by sparks driven by the furious wind. In the panic caused by the fire there were many rumors of accidents and fatalities, but at the Waterbury hospital at 1 o'clock it was said that no accidents or deaths had been reported there. At that hour the fire was still burning, though as viewed from the hospital, which is on an eminence commanding a view of the city, it appeared that its vigor was abating. Hope was expressed that the worst of the fire was over and that it would soon be under control. Conservative estimates place the loss at $2,000,000.

LANDS SAVED TO THE STATE.

Long Drawn Controversy Over Swamp Land Grant Is Adjusted.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 3. — The long drawn controversy between the State of Minnesota and the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad company over the swamp land grant of that company, involving 45,079 acres of land that includes three valuable iron mines, has finally been adjusted satisfactorily to all parties. The case was a somewhat complicated one. Subsequent to the granting by the state to the Iron Range road of ten sections of swamp land for each mile of the railroad, the road's title became clouded by its alleged failure to comply with certain conditions of the grant and a suit resulted. On Jan. 8, 1900, Judge Lochren of the United States court decided that the company's title was valid and attached to its decree was a list of lands to which the company's title was declared absolute. Over a year later it was discovered that list included by mistake 45,079 acres of land held in trust by the state for the benefit of state institutions. An investigation developed that the error was a clerical one or a misapprehension on the part of the attorneys. The problem, however, was a difficult one for the state, because the time for the appeal from the decree had expired. Proposals were then submitted by the state officials to the railroad company for an adjustment and after long negotiations these have been accepted. In effect the company releases all state institution lands and will select other swamp land in lieu of them within six months. Judge Lochren will modify his decree in accordance with the stipulations.

EVIDENCES OF FRAUD.

Two Thousand Claims in the Minot District Under Suspicion.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 3.—"Twenty per cent of the claims made in the Minot land district within the past eighteen months are being contested," is the report of a realty man who has just returned from the northwestern part of the state. Roughly speaking, there have been 10,000 claims taken within the last year and a half, and of this number 2,000 are being questioned. The same authority thinks that from 50 to 75 per cent of the contests will be against original homesteaders. Those being contested were taken by traveling men and business and office men in the eastern part of North Dakota and in Minnesota. The existence of frauds in this connection is generally admitted, and many of the men that assert their homestead rights have voted in other parts of the state since making the entry. Some even hold municipal and county offices. Many never see their claims twenty-four hours in every six months.

The prisoner and the officers took a special train yesterday afternoon and found the diamonds where they were hidden the day of the robbery. The original wallet containing some of the diamonds in the trunk was found, and the balance of them were found in the pocket of McCarty's overcoat, which had been torn out. McCarty served a year and a half in the Stillwater penitentiary for robbing a postoffice in Minnesota.

UNKNOWN SUICIDE.

Strange Note Left Explaining the Reason for the Deed.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 3. — A special from Bemidji reports a peculiar suicide there Friday night when an unknown young man who had arrived that morning took a dose of strychnine. Nothing indicating his identity was found, except the following strange note: "Expecting to end my existence to-night, I write these lines in explanation of the deed. On account of a peculiar physical defect my life has been one of misery, both to myself and to those with whom I have lived. This defect, of course, is something for which I am not to blame, and also something which I can never get rid of. So I think I am fully justified in taking this course. In fact, I think it is my duty to my fellow man, as a firm believer in the Christian religion. Wish no efforts to be made to find relatives." He was about twenty-five years old, six feet tall and dark.

MURDER OF AN OLD MISER.

Man Charged With the Crime Is Captured at West Superior.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 3.—After being eighteen months at liberty and wanted by the officials on the charge of the murder of Simon Welch, four miles from this city, officers have received word that Ulrich Chilkoff is in custody of police officers at West Superior and Sheriff Bogue and State's Attorney Allen left yesterday afternoon to bring him back. Chilkoff is charged with having murdered Welch at his farm house in May, 1900. Welch was a miser and was believed to keep a large sum of money in his house. Neighbors found him dead in his house, and investigation revealed the fact that he had been shot in the side of the head. A box in the cellar of his house in which he was supposed to have kept his cash, was rifled. Suspicion was attracted to Chilkoff from the fact that he had been seen at Welch's place on several occasions just before the murder.

AIM WAS PERFECT

SEQUEL OF THE SENSATIONAL ESCAPE OF THE BIDDLE BROTHERS.

OFFICERS OF LAW SHOOT TO KILL

ONE OF THE BROTHERS DYING AND THE OTHER IN A SERIOUS CONDITION.

THE WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

STORY OF THE CLOSE OF THE BIDDLE TRAGEDY A THRILLING ONE.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 1.—A telegram from Butler says:

Edward Biddle in jail dying, John Biddle riddled with buckshot and in a precarious condition, and Mrs. Peter K. Soffel lying in the hospital with a self-inflicted bullet wound in the breast, is the sequel of the sensational escape of the Biddle brothers from the Allegheny county jail, aided by Mrs. Soffel, the wife of the jail warden, on Thursday morning. The story of the close of the Biddle tragedy, which came at 5:45 yesterday afternoon, is a thrilling one.

The scene was a snow-covered road two miles east of Prospect, Butler county, near Mount Chestnut, and the exact place was at McClure's barn, where two double-team sleighs, filled with eight officers, three of them Pittsburg detectives, John Roach, Albert Swinehart and Charles McGovern, met the two Biddles in a one-horse sleigh, stolen at Perrysville, and at once opened fire on the trio, the Biddles

Returning the Fire

after jumping out of the sleigh. Mrs. Soffel was shot through the breast. Edward Biddle was shot through the left arm, in the breast and in one leg. John Biddle was riddled with buckshot in the breast and head. The two sleighs with the eight officers aboard met the fugitives at McClure's barn, two miles from Mount Prospect, the Biddles having learned that they were almost overtaken, and taking what they considered the only chance they had, drove eastward and met their doom. The Pittsburg and other officers were armed with Winchester rifles and revolvers of large caliber. They shot to kill and their aim was perfect. The Biddles tried to kill to the last of their string, but not one of the eight officers has a wound as a result of the battle. When the detectives got within about sixty yards of the fugitives they opened fire. The Biddles promptly answered with shotguns and revolvers. When Ed Biddle fell and Mrs. Soffel saw she was

About to Be Captured

she fired a bullet into her breast. An examination by physicians shows that she will recover, as the bullet was deflected by her corset and the wound is comparatively slight. Ed Biddle got a bullet in the breast which penetrated his right lung and will probably end his life in a few hours. John may recover. His wounds, though numerous, failing to reach a vital spot. The escape of the officers is miraculous. The Biddles have demonstrated on several occasions that they are good marksmen, and why they should have failed yesterday to bring down their men is a mystery. After the Biddles fell to the snow-covered ground the officers picked up the apparently lifeless bodies of Mrs. Soffel and the Biddles and came back to Butler, bringing the stolen sleigh, patched up harness and worn out horse that the trio had tried so strenuously to get away with toward Canada and liberty.

CAUGHT IN A BLIZZARD.

Two Hundred Japanese Soldiers Frozen to Death.

Yokohama, Feb. 1—Details of the loss of about 200 Japanese soldiers who were frozen to death have been received here. It seems that a command of 210 men, practicing winter marching, were caught in a blizzard on the northern end of the Island of Hondo and lost their road. The snow in the mountain passes was twenty feet deep. In their efforts to warm themselves the detachment burned their haversacks and rifle butts, but many of them were frozen to death. The seventy-one survivors then camped and in small parties endeavored to reach the villages. Only one corporal, however, succeeded in escaping from the mountains and he was picked up by a relief party. It is feared that all the other members of the expedition are dead.

Coroner's Investigation Into Death of Ranchman Results in Sensational Arrest.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 1.—The coroner's jury late last night returned a verdict in the case of Harry G. Hibb, a young ranchman found dead in a deep well on his ranch Jan. 15. The jury's verdict charges Jeff May, another well known ranchman, with the crime and May was arrested on a coroner's warrant. The case is one that has been under quiet investigation since the body was discovered. Examination of the dead man's skull revealed a fracture at the base of the brain, made by some blunt instrument. May was at the ranch when Hibb met his death, and Mrs. Hibb, the young wife of the deceased, was the only other person present. Both Hibb and May were well-to-do, and the case has created widespread excitement in the neighborhood. The theory of the coroner's jury is that May struck Hibb with a hammer, inflicting a fatal wound, and then threw the body in the well.

LOOK FOR POTATO RISE.

Anoka Farmers Store the Tubers and Are Disappointed.

Anoka, Minn., Feb. 1.—It is estimated that between one-third and one-half of the entire crop of potatoes raised last year in this county are still in root-houses and cellars. Farmers have been looking for very high prices this spring, and the gradual decline the last six weeks has been a disappointment. However, Southern seed stock is still bringing 75 cents a bushel and white stock 50 cents. The loss from shrinkage is about 10 per cent. Unless prices soar later those who stored their potatoes will be losers by about 30 per cent.

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED LIVES ARE LOST IN A MEXICAN MINE.

AWFUL WORK OF AN EXPLOSION

FEDERAL TROOPS ARE CONDUCTING THE WORK OF REMOVING THE DEAD.

SORROWFUL SCENE AT THE MINE

WAILS AND WEEPING OF THE BEREAVED WOULD TOUCH THE HARDEST HEART.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 3.—The latest information from the Hondo (Mex.) mine explosion shows it to have been fully as serious as at first reported.

There were over 100 miners at work in the mine when the explosion occurred, and all of them are dead. The majority of the victims are Mexicans and Chinamen. Very few Americans were at work in the mine.

Every mule in the mine was killed. The work of clearing away the wreck in order to get at the bodies is being rushed as rapidly as possible, but there is no hope that any of the men will be rescued alive. The explosion was caused by striking a gas pocket. The loss to the owners of the mine is very heavy.

The mines have been taken in charge by a force of federal troops who are conducting the work of removing the mangled bodies of the dead. No official information is given out as to the number of dead, but it is stated that more than 100 bodies have been brought to the surface and it is believed that there are at least twenty other dead bodies in the mine. The scene at the mine is indescribable. The wives and children of the dead surround the building in which the remains of their loved ones are placed, and their wails and weeping would touch the hardest heart.

STORMS IN THE EAST.

Worst Blizzard of the Winter Causes Great Discomfort.

New York, Feb. 3—The storm which prevailed all day in this section of the country made itself manifest in this city and the suburbs to the great discomfort of all people who ventured out of doors. On top of a heavy fall of snow came rain which turned the snow into slush and made swamps of low lying grounds. In the early afternoon the rain drops turned to flakes and a little later this condition disappeared in the face of a decided drop in temperature. This was accompanied by a gale which in exposed quarters broke branches of trees, blew away insecure boarding, tangled up wires and sent store signs to the the streets and broke windows.

The two Italians have been pursued and searched for since the night of their crime, and the commissioners of Elk county and the Shawmut Mining company had offered a reward of $1,000 for their capture. The pursuing party last night was composed of four Italians, under the direction of Squire Thomas Keys of this place. The murderers had been hiding in the woods since Meekin was murdered. They declared that they had had nothing to eat for four days and were nearly famished. When the Italian deputies under Squire Keys approached they were too weak to offer any material resistance, and were easily overpowered by the posse.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 5, 1902.

Sunday last was "Ground-hog" day. The animal could certainly see his shadow, and, if the old traditions hold true, we will have six weeks of good, solid winter weather.

A beneficial order that insured its members against celibacy and paid a starting fund to those who embarked on the matrimonial sea, has been restrained in Michigan as violating the anti-lottery laws. The Twin Valley Times says that no such order is necessary in this state and the records prove the truth of the Times' remark.

A southern exchange tells about a Georgia negro who went asleep on the railroad track. A freight train came in contact with him and several cars were de-railed. The darkey got up and, as he brushed the dust from his coat, said to the engineer: "Ef you folks ain't mo' keerful how you gwine, you'll hurt somebody some er dese days, an' git sued fer damages!"

The law has been invoked by a solicitous Maryland father to prevent the immersion of his delicate daughter by breaking the ice in the creek which runs past the meeting house. He is absolutely right in his course. The soul of that young girl is in no danger until the weather warms up. It is only necessary to douse tough old sinners of long standing through a hole in the ice in midwinter to keep them from spoiling.—Minneapolis Tribune.

The North Dakota oil inspector intimated that the women of that state didn't take proper care of their lamps, while they insisted that the quality of the oil was to blame. Just before hostilities actually broke out a Standard Oil agent admitted that the oil was about the meanest that the octopus had in the tank. And now Mr. Inspector is sending out manifold copies of an official apology to every housewife in the state.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Did He Understand?

A well known Edinburgh professor often became so interested in his subject that when the noon bell rang he seemed quite oblivious of the fact and kept the class for several minutes. Certain restless spirits among the students decided to give him a gentle hint, so they bought an alarm clock. London Tit-Bits tells the result.

The clock, set to alarm at precisely 12 o'clock, was placed on the professor's desk. As was anticipated, he began his lecture without observing the clock. But when the noon hour struck the alarm went off with a startling crash.

Even those not in the secret appreciated the joke. There was a round of applause. The professor smilingly waited until the alarm and the applause ceased and then said:

"Young gentlemen, I thank you for this gift. I had forgotten it was my birthday. An alarm clock is something my wife has needed for our servant for a long time. It is a very kind remembrance on your part." Then he went on with the demonstration which had been interrupted by the alarm, and the students were never quite able to satisfy themselves whether the professor understood the joke or not.

One Boy's Loyalty.

A New York boy was at school in Canada, and it was his first day in class. The geography lesson was called, and it was his turn to answer.

"Which is the largest city in the world?" asked the teacher.

"New York," unhesitatingly came the answer.

"I mean the largest city in the world," said the teacher.

As promptly came the reply, "New York."

"But," expostulated the teacher, "I did not say the largest city in the United States, but the largest city in the world. You surely know which is the largest city in the world."

"New York," persisted the boy.

"London has a larger population than New York," said the teacher. "If I do not have the correct answer this time, I shall have to punish you. Come now," anxiously, "tell me the name of the largest city in the world."

"New York."

"Stay in during recess and write me fifty times."

He wrote the fifty lines, and every line read: "The biggest city in the world is New York."—New York Tribune.

Breaking It Gently.

"Well, John, how are things going at home?"

"Why, sir, the magpie's dead."

"Poor Jack! What took him off?"

"We think, sir, it was eating too much horse meat."

"How's that? Where did he get the horse meat?"

"I am sorry to tell you, sir, that both the carriage horses died."

"The horses dead! What ailed them?"

"It must have been overwork drawing water to the fire."

"Fire! What fire?"

"Why, sir, the hall was burned to the ground."

"Great heavens! How did that happen?"

"It caught fire from the funeral torches, sir."

"Whose funeral?"

"Your mother's, sir."

"My poor mother dead! How long was she ill? What was the matter?"

"Well, sir, she never held up her head after your father's death."

"My father too! Tell me the cause. Speak, man!"

"He took to his bed as soon as he heard the bad news, sir."

"Bad news! What do you mean?"

"That the vessel that held his whole fortune had been lost at sea."

The Common Chord.

James Buckham, one of our minor poets, put into beautiful verse an incident which occurred during the civil war. He calls it "The Common Chord." The incident was this: Two great armies, one wearing the blue and one the gray, were drawn up in preparation for battle. As the evening fell the bands began to play. "Dixie" by the southerners was followed by "Yankee Doodle" by the northerners, and "Maryland, My Maryland," drew out "Hail Columbia." "Beautiful Girl of the South" was answered by "Just Before the Battle, Mother." Each side mocked and jeered the other's music and cheered their own until the stars came out and silence fell.

Then, sweet and low, a band far up the line began to play "Home, Sweet Home." Another and another joined until all the bands on both sides were playing in unison, and, stronger and more beautiful still, the men on both sides were singing the words. The common chord had been struck, and the thousands of combatants were at one with the sentiment, "There's no place like home."

The Example of Paganini.

A story is told of how Paganini once came into the concert room, took the violin and touched the strings. First one string broke, and a smile went round the room; then another string broke, and there was more audible expression of mockery. When a third string broke, many people laughed outright at his discomfiture. But Paganini stood forth with his violin as though nothing had happened and played on the one string, and the people ceased to smile, but listened spellbound. Some of those who had derided him began to weep, and some even prayed.

Many a man had fallen helpless by the wayside when some great catastrophe turned the current of his life aside. The brave man pushes forward with one remaining talent and plucks victory from defeat.

A Desperate Chance.

A Russian exile relates how he once saved himself by a desperate artifice. A police official searched his house for compromising papers. There was in his possession a document the discovery of which meant serious danger to himself and his friends.

Wherever he might hide it, it seemed certain that it would be found. He coolly handed the document to the official, who scarcely glanced at it and handed it back.

After the most careful search the official, his nose blackened with soot and his hair decorated with feathers, for he had even examined the stovepipes and the bedding, departed empty handed.

How the Sections Say It.

The woman from New England buys a "table spread," while her sister from the south buys a "tablecloth." The woman from Nova Scotia orders the servant to "lay the table," while with most of us natives of the United States the command is to "set the table." In the country the hostess says to her guests, "Sit by," when it is time to eat; in town it is "Please sit down." In the city among swells there is no further invitation than the announcement of the servant that "dinner is served."—Mobile (Ala.) Register.

Creoles.

Originally a creole was a child born in this country of French or Spanish parents, the word coming from the Spanish creare, to create. At present the word is restricted to use to those of Spanish and French descent, who are born in the states that were French and Spanish colonies, especially Louisiana.

Cold Analysis.

"That man is one whom I would trust with a million dollars."

"So would I," answered Senator Sorghum. "A man could get enough commissions out of handling a million dollars to keep him satisfied. But how about $10,000 or $20,000?"—Washington Star.

In Use.

Georgie—I am usin' it, mamma. I've got the dog tied to the leg of the table with it.—Motherhood.

Calling the Hours.

There is one place in London, and only one, where the ancient custom of keeping a watchman to call out the hours is still maintained. This is at New Inn, which in spite of its name is one of the oldest inns of court. The servants there are quite proud of the age of the place, and it was one of them who said one day:

"Why, sir, this inn was here in the time of Charles I."

After a long pause, to allow this stunning fact to percolate through the brain of the hearer, he extended his arm and added with emphasis:

"And it was here in the time of Charles II.!"

Some vague notion of the disturbances which intervened between the two reigns had probably been floating through the man's mind, but how an existing institution could possibly have dated from the reign of Charles I. without coming down through the reign of Charles II. he failed to explain.

Beginning at the stroke of 10 o'clock every night, the watchman in the yard of New Inn "calls the hour" in a stentorian but musical voice:

"Ten o'clock, and all's well!"

The words are heard in the adjoining chambers and offices. Tenants in Clement's Inn, whose rooms look into the pretty yard and garden of New Inn, may hear these words every hour through the night if awake.—New York Times.

The Indian Duck Trick.

A little tin or earthen pan or sometimes half a cocoanut shell supported on three stones is filled with water on which is sprinkled a red powder, rendering it practically opaque. A little duck of wood or porcelain is placed upon the surface, where it at first floats, but at the command of the performer suddenly dives, remaining submerged until again ordered to rise.

This very ingenious trick depends upon the fact that in the bottom of the vessel there is a minute hole through which passes a hair. One end of this is attached to the duck; the other remains at the disposal of the performer and is attached, by means of a pellet of wax, to his tomtom or to one of the hands with which he beats it. When he wishes the duck to dive, he pulls the hair. When he desires it to rise, he relaxes the pull.

There is naturally some amount of leakage through the pinhole, and, to cover this the performer takes care, when filling the pan, to accidentally (?) spill a little water. The ground being thus already wetted, the fact that it gets a little more is not noticed.—Chambers' Journal.

The Thing to Rin Awa' Wi' Siller.

Wealth is a relative term. One man may be passing rich on £40 a year, and another may be miserably poor on £400. This was beautifully illustrated to me the other day, when, driving past a popular Ayrshire "place of drinks," I was hailed from the roadside by a man who claimed friendship on the strength of "living next door when we were boys." He was getting married, he said, and on that, I suppose, was feeling nauseously happy.

"Man, come on in and let me stand you something," he said. "Don't think I've nae money. There's a pound note. Would you believe it, no' a week sin' I had hale £3; but, what wi' buying furniture and things, I've spent the ither twa. Aye, and afore the wadden's ower I believe that pound'll be melted tae. By gore, gettin' married's the thing to rin awa' wi' siller. But come on in and hae a drink."—Glasgow Times.

His Three Good Deeds.

A certain business man noted for his grasping methods came into his office one day and told his partner that he was very happy because he had done three good deeds that morning. "In the first place," he said, "I met a poor woman who was weeping bitterly because she had lost the $4 with which she had intended to pay for the baptism of her baby. I gave her a ten dollar bill, telling her to have the child baptized and give me the change as I came from my club. Charity was one good deed. Saving the child's soul was the second."

"And what was the third?" asked the partner.

"Oh, the third was that I got six good dollars for my green goods ten."

A City of Padlocks.

Irkutsk, Siberia, is a city of padlocks. There are more padlocks on the shutters and doors of an Irkutsk shop than can be found in an English city of 200,000. There are as many as three padlocks on some shop doors, and every lower story shutter bears from one to five. The padlocks weigh from one to fifteen pounds. The popular size is five pounds and two and one-half inches thick.

Impressive Condemnation.

Speaking with a farmer about one of his neighbors, I said, "So-and-so is a good man." He looked at me steadily without making any reply.

"So-and-so is a good man," I repeated in a louder tone, fancying he must be deaf.

Then the farmer answered, "I heard what you said."—New York Herald.

Terrible Effect of Eloquence.

An unfortunate man has obtained access to rich Baron Itzphneim. He depicts his misfortunes, his misery, in so moving a manner that the baron, with tears in his eyes and his voice choked with sobs, calls to his servant:

"Jean, put this poor fellow out in the street! He is breaking my heart!"—Exchange.

N. O. Johnson Accidentally Killed.

On last Thursday afternoon the people of this village were shocked to hear of the sudden death of Nels O. Johnson, who was killed while unloading a pile driver at the dam of the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., about four miles north of town.

The accident was a peculiar one. It seems that a crew of men had started out to begin some repair work on the dam and the pile driving outfit had been hauled up the river from the mill here on sleds. The dam had been reached in safety and the work of unloading was commenced. The sleds were evened up so that the machine would drop off squarely and two rows of men took their places along each side to guide it right. In some unknown manner the big derrick slipped off to one side and caught the unfortunate man between it and a small poplar tree. All hands immediately rushed to the rescue and he was quickly extricated. He was asked if he was badly hurt. He answered that he felt weak and wanted to rest. He was at once carried to a house close by and put to bed. He sank quickly and expired in less than an hour after the accident happened. Coroner Belair was notified and came over from Red Lake Falls and after an examination of the eye witnesses decided that no inquest was necessary. The remains were brought into town and placed in Holmes' undertaking rooms to be prepared for burial.

The deceased has been a resident of St. Hilaire for about five years, and during that time has been mostly in employ of the Lumber Co. When not working with them he practiced as a veterinary surgeon. He was 38 years of age and leaves a widow and three small children to mourn his loss. He was a charter member of the local lodge of Mystic Toilers and had insurance to the amount of $2,000 in that order.

The relatives were notified by wire of the fatal accident and on Saturday O. Evenson, and Chas. Evenson, father, and brother of the widow arrived here On Sunday H. Johnson, a brother, and A. Hanson, a cousin, arrived from Richland Centre, Wis., to attend the funeral.

The funeral occurred yesterday at 2 o'clock from the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church, Rev. Aastad, of Thief River Falls officiating. The remains were interred in the Lutheran cemetery a short distance east of here.

The widow and orphans have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

Chas. E. Houghton, the Red Lake Falls attorney, was here last evening on his way to Crookston where he had some legal business to attend to.

The Ladies Aid will hold a basket social in the Eikhoff building tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. All the ladies are invited to attend and bring a basket.

The financial statement of Red Lake county appears in this issue of the SPECTATOR in supplement form. It is a highly interesting document to the taxpayers of the county and should be thoroughly studied by them.

M. L. Hanson, who will occupy the Eikhoff building with a stock of general merchandise, is expected to arrive next week and commence getting his stock ready. In the meantime workmen are busy getting the shelving and other fixtures into place.

Wilfred Lemieux returned on Friday morning from a business trip to Minot, N. D., which has lasted for about six weeks. He went home to Red Lake Falls yesterday but expects to return soon and resume his position in E. M. Hoff's store.

Robt. Fritz on Monday received a letter from P. G. Paradis, who is now at Mount Clemens, Mich., taking a course at the celebrated mineral springs. Pete is having a good time and expects to be home in a few weeks—weighing considerably less than when he started on his trip.

St. Hilaire will furnish a few candidates for the Teacher's Examinations to be held at Thief River Falls Friday and Saturday. Among the list of those who will probably write for certificates are George Nettelaud, Ester Olson, Tessie McCaffrey, Caroline Skeie and Mary Anderson.

Entertaining Fiction.

One advantage of reading a serial story in a daily newspaper is that an installment of convenient length is received every day that does not consume an undue amount of the reader's time. An installment of a high-grade serial story appears in every issue of The Chicago Record-Herald—a popular feature of that enterprising Chicago daily. Every issue contains also a short illustrated humorous story on the editorial page. Readers of The Chicago Record-Herald can depend upon a never-failing source of pleasant entertainment in the noteworthy fiction that is always to be found in its columns.

H. E. Ives Writes From Cuba.

HAVANA, CUBA, JAN. 22, 1902.

We left New Orleans on the Southern Pacific steamer Chalmette Saturday afternoon and had a very pleasant trip. Going down the river, which is very wide, we saw the large sugar plantations of southern Louisiana. Every plantation is a small village and has a large factory for refining the sugar. It was dark when we entered the Gulf and we could not see the extensive government works at the mouth of the river. Our boat was loaded with horses cattle and chickens principally. We had only twelve cabin passengers and I was favored with one of the best berths on the steamer and eat at the captain's table. All day Sunday we did not get a sight of land. Some flying fish, a few gulls and a few jelly fish were the only things to see. Fortunately it was not stormy and neither of us was seasick. I have, however, felt better than when I was on that boat. I never missed a meal, but—well, you feel more secure on land. On Monday we left our light overcoats in the cabin as it was quite warm. The sun shining on the water gives one considerable tan and we are qualifying for a reservation homestead, so far as color is concerned.

About three o'clock Monday we sighted Morro Castle and Havana and soon entered one of the finest harbors in the world. Before we could go ashore a quarantine boat came out and the doctors looked us all over. As our names were called we came forward and fortunately all were passed, except two second cabin passengers who were held a few hours because they could only show about ten dollars in cash. They were allowed to land later, and, if they met the same people we have, they must be worse than broke before this time.

Ships of all nations are at anchor in the harbor. They have no docks here and passengers and freight must be landed in small boats. It is quite a business here and the lighter people have always prevented the city from building docks.

Hotel runners meet you at the boat and they are bad. So, in fact, are the hotels—being first class only in price.

We have no trouble at the Custom house, so we take a cab and go to our hotel. Cabs are cheap here. You can go anywhere for twenty cents, Spanish money. One dollar of our money brings $1.30 in Cuban or Spanish silver.

The main part of Havana is very beautiful and is now quite clean. We have visited quite a number of parks and the tropical trees, palms and flowers look good in January to a northerner who has so recently left the frozen country in the north.

I have notes for another letter but have not time to write to-day.

We leave here the last of the week for Miami, Florida.

....H. E. IVES.

Furore Over Liquid Fuel.

The newspapers of the country are devoting a large amount of space to a discussion of the future of Texas crude petroleum as liquid fuel. Almost every paper you pick up has a notice that some new line of steamers has been established that will burn liquid fuel, to the exclusion of wood and coal. Why not try the same class of fuel for the human machine? You know that "Golden Grain Belt" beer is pure and delicious; that it takes less time and less bodily effort to digest it, and that it contains the strength of bread and meat in liquid form, for it is brewed from the purest barley malt and hops. If you have never tried this beer, order of you nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

—If you are looking for a good smoke why call for the "J. B."

Services will be held in the M. E. Church every Sunday as follows: Sunday School, 10 a. m.; Preaching, 11 a. m. Junior League, 3 p. m.; Epworth L'gue 6:30 p. m.; Preaching, 7:30 p. m.

Prayer meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30. Rev. W. H. Gooderham. Pastor.

New Business Combination.

Some of the retail liquor dealers of St. Hilaire are talking of entering into a combine for the purpose of purchasing the liquid refreshments in large quantities and thus get the benefit of the lowest possible price. The beer supply seems to be their principal object and they want to purchase that commodity from whoever will furnish the best goods at the lowest price in car load lots. It is their intention to build a cold storage of their own and operate it for their own benefit. No definite organization has yet been perfected, but it is probable that it soon will be. An effort will be made to extend the organization to other towns in this vicinity.

Full Cream Cheese in any quantity you want at 12½ cents per pound at E. M. Hoff's.

Be Prepared.

Daniel Webster once told a friend that his great speech in reply to Hayne, which is the high water mark of modern eloquence, but which at the time was supposed to have been delivered without preparation, had been substantially prepared long before. When called upon suddenly to reply to the fiery Carolinian's attacks, which so alarmed the New Englanders at the capital, he was entirely at ease and ready for the fray, for, as he said, he had "only to turn to his notes tucked away in a pigeonhole," and refresh his recollection. "If Hayne," he said, "had tried to make a speech to fit my notes, he could not have hit them better. No man is inspired by the occasion. I never was."

Was Sick Eight Years with Female Trouble and Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never in my life given a testimonial before, but you have done so much for me that I feel called upon to give you this unsolicited acknowledgement of

MRS. JENNIE E. O'DONNELL,
President of Oakland Woman's Riding Club

the wonderful curative value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For eight years I had female trouble, falling of the womb and other complications. During that time I was more or less of an invalid and not much good for anything, until one day I found a book in my hall telling of the cures you could perform. I became interested; I bought a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was helped; I continued its use and in seven months was cured, and since that time I have had perfect health. Thanks, dear Mrs. Pinkham again, for the health I now enjoy."—MRS. JENNIE O'DONNELL, 278 East 31st St., Chicago, Ill.—$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

Mrs. Craig Tells Why.

Mrs. Pearl Craig (John Oliver Hobbes) gives an interesting reason why women novelists usually adopt pseudonyms.

"It is because," she says, "of an unaccountable association in the popular mind between the writer and her heroines. So women use a man's name, because we are anxious that it should not be supposed that we were guilty of all the adventures of our heroines."—London Dispatch to New York World.

Saved Her Future Husband.

A pretty little romance has come to light as a result of a marriage license granted to John M. Diver and Edna Lucila Keener at Flora, Ind. Miss Keener is the young woman who assisted another girl in flagging a Panhandle train last summer and saved it from running on to a burning bridge near Aoka. The girls ran down the track to meet the train and waved their sunbonnets until they attracted the attention of the trainmen. They were so overcome with gratitude that they embraced the girls and made up a purse for them. Diver was the conductor of the train, and ever since the incident he has been in love with Miss Keener, and has been paying her attention.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THE NEW TAX LAW

Effect of Contitutional Amendments Proposed by Tax Commission.

Constitutional Provisions for Equality and Uniformity of Taxation and Exemption of Churches and Charitable Institutions to Be Repealed—Property to Be Classified in Districts Giving no Guarantee of Uniformity of Taxation Throughout the State as Now Provided for—All Farm Lands to Be Classified and Taxed at the Same Rate, Regardless of Value.

Instead of proposing an amendment conferring upon the legislature authority to exempt from taxation mortgages, credits, of a given class, goods held for immediate sale or for storage, and manufacturing materials for immediate use, and to provide for taxing incomes, the Commission propose to abrogate Sections 1, 2, 3 and 4, of Article IX of the Constitution, which provide for equality and uniformity of taxation throughout the State, and which exempt churches and charitable institutions and other property from taxation, and to substitute therefor provisions which abolish equality and uniformity of taxation throughout the State, and give the Legislature power to classify property as subject to taxation and to exempt all property not classified.

ARTICLE IX OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Section 1 provides:

"All taxes to be raised in this State shall be as nearly equal as may be, and all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation and be equalized and uniform throughout the State."

Sec. 2. The Legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the ordinary estimated expenses of the State for each year, and whenever it shall happen that such ordinary expenses of the State for any year shall exceed the income of the State for such year, the Legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency of the preceding year, together with the estimated expenses of such ensuing year.

Sec. 3. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money, but public burying grounds, public school houses, public hospitals, academies, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches, church property used for religious purposes, and houses of worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used for any public purpose, and personal property to an amount not exceeding in value $200 for each individual, shall, by general laws, be excempted from taxation.

Sec. 4. Laws shall be passed for taxing notes and bills discounted or purchased, moneys loaned, and other property, effects or dues of every description of all banks and all bankers, so that all property employed in banking shall always be subject to a taxation equal to that imposed on the property of individuals.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS.

1, as above stated, the Commission propose to abrogate the sections of the Constitution referred to, and to substitute new and radically different provisions.

Section 1, which provides that taxes shall be as nearly equal as may be, and that all property taxed shall have a cash valuation and be equalized and uniform throughout the State, is abrogated, and in the place of it the Commission propose an amendment as follows:

"SEC. 1. THE POWER OF TAXATION SHALL NEVER BE SURRENDERED OR SUSPENDED."

2, Section 2, which provides for an annual tax sufficient to defray the expenses of the State, is repealed, and in the place of it the commission propose the following:

"SEC. 2. ALL TAXES SHALL BE UNIFORM UPON THE SAME CLASS OF SUBJECTS WITHIN THE TERRITORIAL LIMITS OF THE AUTHORITY LEVYING THE TAXES, AND SHALL BE LEVIED AND COLLECTED UNDER GENERAL LAWS FOR PUBLIC PURPOSES."

(a) This proposed amendment authorizes the Legislature, by legislative act, or through the agency of county officers or other officers selected for the purpose, to classify subjects of taxation within the Territorial limits of the authority levying the tax. Subjects of taxation, that is, property to be taxed, is left to the will of the Legislature. The rule of equality and uniformity of taxation at cash value throughout the State is abolished. Some property may be classified as a subject of taxation and other property exempted, and the rule of uniformity which now obtains throughout the State is made to apply only to the district, that is, the Territorial limits of the authority levying the tax. The Legislature may fix the Territorial limits of the authority levying the tax and may subdivide the State into as many divisions for purposes of taxation as it may think best. There may be one or one thousand taxing districts. Property within any such district is to be classified and the tax upon the same class is to be uniform.

(b) Public burying grounds, school houses, hospitals, academies, colleges, universities, seminaries of learning, churches, church property used for religious purposes, houses of worship, institutions of public charity, public property used exclusively for public purposes, personal property to an amount not exceeding in value Two Hundred Dollars for each individual, are exempt from taxation.

Under this proposed amendment classes of property described will be no longer exempt. All such property will become subject to taxation unless the Legislature or those authorized by it to act see fit not to include it in or among classes of property subject to taxation within the Territorial limits of the authority levying the tax.

All churches, church property, schools, seminaries and colleges will be subject to taxation. The sewing machine of the seamstress, the horse of the cart man, the small investments and savings of the poor, even to the amount of Five Dollars, will be subject to taxation unless exempted in the classification to be made in the given taxing district.

(c) The provision that taxes shall be uniform throughout the State is abolished. They are to be uniform within the tax district, that is, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax. The authority levying the tax will act with reference to the rule of uniformity adopted within the limits of the taxing district. It follows that there may be different rules of uniformity. At present the rule of uniformity applies throughout the State. By the proposed amendment it applies within the several taxing districts.

3, Section 3 of the Constitution, which provides that laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits, investments in bonds and stocks, or otherwise, and also all real and personal property, according to its true value in money, is abrogated, and in its place the Commission propose the following:

"SEC. 3. THE LEGISLATURE MAY, BY GENERAL LAWS, PROVIDE FOR AN APPORTIONMENT TO THE COUNTIES OF AN AMOUNT OF REVENUE TO BE RAISED THEREIN FOR STATE PURPOSES, AND MAY, IN ANY LAW PROVIDING FOR SUCH APPORTIONMENT, AUTHORIZE COUNTIES TO SELECT THE SUBJECTS UPON WHICH REVENUE IS TO BE RAISED THEREIN FOR STATE OR COUNTY PURPOSES, AND TO APPORTION SUCH REVENUE AMONG THE CITIES, VILLAGES AND TOWNSHIPS OF THE COUNTY."

(a) Thus under this proposed amendment the Legislature may confer upon each county the right to select the subject upon which revenue shall be raised by the county, not only to meet its proportion of the state taxes, but the county tax. The right to select the subject of taxation involves the right to classify property for the purpose.

(b) Under this amendment the taxing officers of Ramsey County may select the subject, that is, the property within the county upon which the revenue is to be raised for county taxes and the county proportion of State taxes. One county in a state may select as the proper subject for taxation the real estate within the county, or a certain class of real estate—like timber or farm lands, improved or unimproved lands. Another county may select personal property, and being selected as the proper subject upon which revenue is to be raised, all real estate will be exempt. One county may select churches, colleges, seminaries and grave yards as the sole subject for taxation; one may select banks, insurance companies and corporations as the proper subject for taxation. Thus, in each county of the state the county tax and the county proportion of the state tax may be apportioned upon property to be selected by the county and classified for the purpose. The rule of equality does not obtain as respects any property and the rule of uniformity only as respects the subject of the tax in a particular taxing district.

RULE OF UNIFORMITY.

Since the rule of uniformity obtains only as respects a given class, and since there may be more than one class of property made the subject of taxation of each district, the rate of tax may differ as to each class. Farm lands being classified, the rate upon farm lands must be the same. Timber and unimproved lands being separately classified, the rate upon such lands in the same district may be different. Real estate being classified the rate may be one thing; personal property being classified the rate may be another. In short, one class of property in each taxing district may be made to bear the entire burden of taxation within the district; even though there may be different classes, the rate upon one class may be so high as to practically impose upon it all the burden.

Diplomat's Wife Retorts.

One night at a great party, royalty was present, and was bestowing its condescending attention upon the diplomats in attendance. One haughty princess, after addressing with the proper title, all the other ladies present, turned to the American ambassadress and said: "I hope you and your family are well, madam?"

This was not the first time she had been so treated, and the little Yankee woman's wrath overflowed. She did not hesitate, in the crowded company, promptly to rebuke the princess by ignoring her question and replying to the "madame" part with a loud, firm, "Excellenza bitte!" ((Excellency, if you please!")—World's Work.

Mine Mule Commits Suicide.

McAadam, a mine mule, belonging to the Dotson Coal company, committed suicide by drowning in the underground shaft at Morea.

His Manner Was Effective.

A very dapper young man walked to the desk of James Smith, the clerk of one of the parts of the supreme court, the other day, and looked intently at the clerk, who was writing. Mr. Smith looked up, after a few minutes, and exclaimed:

"Well, what are your symptoms?"

The young man started. "Oh, I beg your pardon, sir, but I observed a striking resemblance in you to the man who used to milk father's cows down on the farm. By the way, could you kindly tell me when the case of Evans vs. Evans will be set down for trial?"

Gave His Seat to Two Women.

Col. Clayton McMichael, whom President Roosevelt has selected for the next postmaster at Philadelphia, is a man of considerable belt measure. Recently he sat in a crowded street car, when a number of women entered. Col. McMichael, with his customary gallantry, arose, grabbed a strap, and watched two women squeeze into the seat he had given up.

"There," he said, turning to a friend, "I can do something you can't do. I can give my seat to two women."—New York Times.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

GOV. VAN SANT'S MESSAGE

REVIEWS NEW TAX CODE AND MERGER SUIT

Governor Urges Legislators to Adopt New Tax Laws Without Delay—Makes Recommendations —Call Attention to Northern Securities Company.

To the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives:

You have been called together in extraordinary session for the purpose of receiving the report of the tax commission appointed pursuant to your enactment at the last session, and for taking action upon the measures proposed by the said commission.

It is a matter of common knowledge that for many years there has been a universal demand in our state for a commission clothed with the duty of preparing more efficient tax laws. The creation of such a commission has long been urged by the public press, has been recommended by many of my predecessors, and earnestly advocated by our state auditor, whose duties in tax matters make him especially familiar with the defects of our present tax system.

Your body was practically unanimous in approving the bill providing for a commission, there being only eight votes recorded against it, four in the house and four in the senate. In order to have the measures proposed by the commission effective during the present year, the act provided that the commission should complete its work prior to the first of the present month.

In compliance with the law, the commission filed its report, together with certain proposed measures. In order that the report might be considered and its measures enacted into laws as soon as possible, you adjourned the last regular session before the constitutional limitation in order that the subject matter of the report of the commission and the measures proposed might be taken up in extra session without additional expense to the state.

Owing to the urgent necessity of more effective tax legislation it was tacitly understood that if your general session was shortened you would be called together in extraordinary session immediately after the report of the commission, for the purpose of affording an early opportunity to consider the measures proposed, and to enact such laws as you might deem just and wise. Pursuant to the understanding stated, and in accord with your purpose, and deeming the work of the commission most thorough and complete, I issued my proclamation convening your honorable body at this time.

Duties of Tax Commission.

Pursuant to your enactment the following citizens of our state were appointed as tax commissioners, to wit: Hon. W. J. Hahn, Hon. H. W. Childs and Hon. G. S. Ives. The duties of the commission were specifically set out in the act as follows:

"The duties of said commission shall be to make a tax code for the State of Minnesota. Such code shall include a complete system for the just and equitable taxation of all forms of property, both tangible and intangible, and shall be properly indexed and prepared in the form of a bill or bills for presentation to the legislature. Such code shall include provisions for a permanent tax commission, and shall define its duties, powers and compensation. The commission shall also prepare a report and bill or bills providing for any constitutional amendments which may be necessary for properly carrying out the systems of taxation recommended by the commission."

Realizing the magnitude of the task and the limited time prescribed, the commissioners immediately commenced their work upon receiving their appointments. For nine months they labored incessantly; they visited other states and familiarized [illegible] of our own state, thereby obtaining much information of value. After becoming thoroughly familiar with the tax laws of other states, and the defects of our own system, they set earnestly to work in the preparation of the proposed measures now so familiar to all of you. That their work has been done faithfully and conscientiously cannot be gainsaid, and for the earnest, honest and impartial discharge of their duties they are entitled to the unstinted praise of the people of our state. The gentlemen composing this commission are lawyers of eminent ability and have in the past occupied such public positions as fitted them especially for the onerous burdens which they assume. These facts suggest most emphatically the wisdom of carefully considering their work done and refraining from criticism until their proposed measures are thoroughly understood. It must be borne in mind that limitations were placed upon the commissioners by the constitution. This fact made their duties particularly exacting, and that you may fully understand the difficulties under which they labored I refer you to their report which accompanies the bills proposed by them.

Meet the Issue Now.

That the measures proposed are perfect, no one will claim; even the commissioners assert that a more satisfactory code might be framed were it not for constitutional limitations. Nevertheless, that the measures proposed are an improvement over the present inefficient system of taxation will not be doubted for a moment. I am aware of the fact that opposition to the adoption of the measures has arisen, and has occasioned many suggestions looking to the defeat of the measures or the postponement of their consideration. In my judgment it is wise to meet the issue now. To temporize will simply amount to deferring the consideration of the very questions which now confront us. No time will ever be more opportune than the present to meet this great question of taxation so important to the welfare of our state.

If in your judgment the bill is defective, let it be amended. If too drastic, let it be changed. Counsel among yourselves earnestly and candidly, and make whatever changes your wisdom dictates is proper. The suggestion that the matter of legislation be delayed until the constitutional limitations be removed does not commend itself to my judgment, for we have no assurance that the people will ever remove these limitations. Past experience demonstrates that so large a percentage of our people persistently fail to vote upon constitutional amendments, as to make submission quite uncertain. Hence, deferring this important matter will in all probability simply delay the consideration of the issue which now confronts you.

If the bill proposed is passed by you, and subsequently the constitutional limitations removed, then the law can be so amended as to conform to the new conditions. The primary purpose of tax legislation is to compel all property to bear its just burden of taxation, except, of course, such as public policy suggests should be exempt. There should be no discrimination. The property of all should be treated alike. Laws should be so framed that every dollar of the man of means should respond to taxation the same as every piece of property of his less wealthy neighbor.

Poor Bear the Burden.

Under our present system the comparatively poor of our state bear more of the burden of taxation than the wealthier classes. Such conditions should no longer exist. It is largely due to the fault of our system. The greatest evil of taxation is the inequality of the burden. I have sufficient faith in human nature to believe that every man will ungrudgingly pay his share of taxes if he is satisfied that his neighbor does likewise. The evident intention of the commission in framing this bill was to so provide that taxation should rest alike upon the shoulders of all. It is therefore, in my judgment, imperative that you meet these conditions frankly, fearlessly and without delay. The code reported by the commission will go very far to correct these deplorable existing conditions.

During your last session it was conceded by all that our tax laws should be corrected. Many of the other states [illegible] taken up this important subject [illegible] compiled laws far in advance of those which now control us. Let us not be behind the other states of the Union, but imitate their prudence by meeting the tax issue now. This code, we are advised, embraces the best efforts and wisdom of other states which have framed tax codes with a view to full, equal and just taxation.

Let your purpose be to so legislate that taxes may be apportioned in a fair and equitable manner to all classes and kinds of property. It is not my purpose to analyze the proposed code in detail. I commend it to you as a vast improvement over our present inefficient system. That provision alone which provides for a franchise tax on public service corporations will bring large revenues to the state. Corporations of this character are so taxed in many states of the Union.

Permanent Tax Commission.

Without going into details permit me to call your attention to the provision for a permanent tax commission. In the State of Michigan a law was passed providing for such a commission—that being practically the only change in the then existing law—and the first year after the same went into operation assessments were increased about $350,000,000.

Every interest should have an opportunity to be heard, and no injustice should be done to any industry or to any individual. The large interests of our state will probably be represented and seek a hearing, but we must bear in mind that the man who has for years uncomplainingly paid his share and more of taxes cannot appear; but his rights as a citizen and taxpayer should nevertheless be considered. The best way to aid him is to see to it that all who have contributed too little or have escaped altogether pay their full share, and in that event his burden will be lessened.

It is confidently predicted that the enactment of this code will result in largely increasing the assessment in our state. If so, the rate of taxation will be materially decreased, and if those who oppose the listing of all property at its full money value will bear in mind that as assessment increases the rate decreases, less opposition will be heard. This, however, suggests a matter which certainly calls for your most earnest consideration. The issuance of bonds by municipalities is limited to a percentage of existing local assessments. If you so legislate that assessments will be materially increased, then you should consider the advisability of enacting a measure which will prevent the corresponding increase of municipal bonded indebtedness.

Would Raise Exemptions.

I would recommend that an amendment be made placing the exemption on personal property at $100, as it has been for many years. This will be especially beneficial to the people of small means. This suggestion, I am advised, meets with the approval of the tax commission.

I would also suggest that the bill be so amended as to require the listing of property on May 1 rather than April 1, for the reason that the time to prepare for putting into operation the new code, if it passes, probably will be too limited to make the necessary preparations.

Our grain men express the fear that the proposed code if put into operation, would be against their interests, and drive their business into Wisconsin. By making the date of listing the same as in that state, and exempting all grain in interstate transit, although temporarily stored in elevators, would place these interests upon an equal footing with those of our sister state. This, in my judgment, should be done. All other grain except that in interstate transit is assessed and taxed in Wisconsin as other personal property, on May 1. This suggestion, I am also advised, meets with the approval of the tax commission.

Tonnage Tax.

The proposed code provides for the repeal of the vessel tonnage tax. In this respect allow me to make the following suggestions:

Every good citizen takes pride in the commercial advancement of his state. It should be our policy to foster tendencies which promise greater wealth and prosperity to any section of the state. Although remote geographically from the seaboard, it is apparent, unless prevented by legislation, that this state may soon outstrip many of her rivals in the magnitude of her shipping interests. The registration of vessels navigating international waters at the port of Duluth indicates that it is a favorite port. When we bear in mind that interstate tonnage is beyond the taxing power of the state, and that the revenues derived from a tonnage tax upon vessels must always greatly exceed what would arise from any other method applied to that class of property, it is apparent that the subject is one which calls for your most earnest consideration. [illegible] therefore, that you will be able to enact legislation which, while not in violation of the constitution, will preserve to the state advantages already gained, and present no impediment to the growth of our influence over navigation upon the Great Lakes.

By request of the commission to revise our general laws I submit the following:

Inasmuch as chapter 241 of the Laws of 1901, providing for the appointment by the justices of the supreme court of commissioners to revise, codify and annotate the existing general laws, expressly excludes from their consideration "statutes on the subject of taxation," and as it is desirable that the revision, when completed, should contain all public laws, appropriately arranged, it would seem advisable that such legislation be had as will be conducive to that end. It is obvious also that the work of the commissioners is of such character that it should not be unduly hurried. The legislation of the past thirty-five years has reached an enormous bulk, much of which is now obsolete, and, on many subjects, redundant and contradictory. Only the most patient research and painstaking labor can reduce it to that harmony which the public interests require. That the work may be continued in such manner as to accomplish the best results, action should be taken at the present session. The commissioners will submit for your consideration some suggestions on the subject, to which I invite your attention.

The entire matter now rests with you. It is for you to decide whether the work of your tax commission will be vain or not. I trust, and have faith to believe, that your deliberations will result in great good to the state, and that a tax law will be placed upon the statute books that will equal, if not surpass, that of any other state in the Union.

I am advised that the members of the tax commission, if desired, will at all times during your session be ready and willing to respond to your call and give you whatever assistance and information you may request.

Northern Securities Company.

At this time I desire to inform the legislature of the suit brought by the State of Minnesota against the Northern Securities Company of New Jersey. Believing that this corporation was organized for the purpose of evading and violating the laws of the State of Minnesota by consolidating the properties of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, which companies own parallel and competing lines of railway within the state, I requested Attorney General Douglas to bring suit in the name of the state to prevent such consolidation. That such consolidation is against the law is clearly shown by reference to our statutes. I quote from sections 2716 and 2717 of our General Statutes:

"Sec. 2716. No railroad corporation shall consolidate with, lease or purchase, or in any way become owner of or control any other railroad corporation, or any stock, franchises, rights or property thereof, which owns or controls a parallel or competing line.

"Sec. 2717. No railroad corporation, or the lessees, purchasers or managers of any railroad corporation, shall consolidate the stock, property or franchises of, or in any way control any other railroad corporation owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line; nor shall any officer of such railroad corporation act as an officer of any other railroad corporation owning or having the control of a parallel or competing line."

These laws have not only been held to be constitutional by the supreme court of the United States, but also to declare a wise public policy.

Purpose Is Merger.

That the Northern Securities company can, and if not prevented by the courts will, merge or consolidate the lines and properties of the two railway companies under one management is evidenced by reference to sections 3 and 4 of the articles of incorporation of the Northern Securities company, which authorize this corporation "To purchase, hold, sell assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge or otherwise dispose of shares of the stock of any other corporation or corporations, association or associations of the State of New Jersey, or any other state, territory or country, and while owner of such stock to exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon. To aid in any manner any corporation or association of which any bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or stock are held by the corporation; and to do any acts or things designed to protect, preserve, improve or enhance the value of any such bonds or other securities or evidences or indebtedness or stock."

These powers are as broad as language can make them, and authorize the Northern Securities company not only to vote the stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, and thus exercise all the powers and privileges of ownership and control, but specifically empower the corporation to do any acts or things designed to enhance the value of the stock of the companies mentioned which, of course, includes the right to increase freight rates directly, or to change the classification of freight so as to increase the rates.

Conference of Governors.

Knowing that several other states in addition to Minnesota would be affected by this consolidation, and that the declared public policy of such states, through constitutional or legislative provisions, was similar to that of our state, I deemed it wise to call a conference of the governors and attorneys general of the states through which these lines of railway pass, in order that such method of procedure might be adopted as would be uniform. This conference was held at Helena, Mont. There were present the governors and attorneys general not only of our state, but of Montana, South Dakota and Idaho, and the attorney general of Washington. The governor of the last-named state died just prior to the conference, and owing to this fact his successor, Gov. McBride, was unable to attend. Gov. McBride, however, has since, in a published interview, called the attention of the people of his state to the dangers threatened by the consolidation of these two companies. The conference was harmonious throughout, and that the official representatives of the various states were wholly in sympathy with the action of this state and its determination to oppose this consolidation is shown by the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"In our opinion the consolidation or threatened consolidation of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington railway systems in the several states through which they run as parallel and competing lines is contrary to sound public policy, and also, with the exception of Idaho, is in violation of the constitution or laws of said states, and mindful of the obligation which the law imposes in such cases upon the officials of the several states here represented, we hereby give our unqualified approval and indorsement to any proper and suitable proceeding which may be instituted in any court having jurisdiction by the sovereign State of Minnesota, or any other state affected thereby designated, designed and intended to speedily and finally test and determine the validity of such consolidation or threatened consolidation. And further, we unanimously protest against any combination or consolidation which restricts or stifles free competition in the trade or commerce of the country."

Suit in Supreme Court.

It was determined, owing to the importance of the case, and for the purpose of getting the matter disposed of at as early a date as possible, to bring the suit in the supreme court of the United States in the first instance. The question of original jurisdiction in that court was argued on Jan. 27, 1902, by Attorney General Douglas and one of his associate counsel, Hon. M. D. Munn. The application to file the bill was opposed by the Northern Securities company, and some of the ablest corporation lawyers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania appeared in behalf of that corporation. If the supreme court does not take jurisdiction it is the intention of the attorney general to at once bring suit in the state courts, and every effort will be made to speedily have the case reached in the court of last resort, where it must finally be disposed of. Neither this company, nor any other company, combination, consolidation or trust shall violate the laws of our state if it can be prevented.

What the final decision will be it is difficult to foretell, but it does not seem possible that a New Jersey corporation, no matter what its capitalization, will be permitted to violate the laws of the sovereign State of Minnesota. If the final decision should be against the state the battle is not then lost. There is one remedy that never fails and which is more supreme even than the supreme court. I quote the words of Judge Brewer in an address made at the bi-centennial of Yale college, in which he said, speaking of trusts and the inability of the courts to crush them, "Appeal must be taken in the great court of public opinion, whose decrees are irresistible. In that court every man is counsel and every man is judge."

Commends Attorney General.

It is a pleasure to commend Attorney General Douglas for the able and efficient manner in which he has endeavored to vindicate our laws. I learn from him that the enactments upon our statute books, and which are quoted above are ample, and that no additional legislation is required at this time, but if, during your session, any further legislation should be needed I will immediately communicate such fact to you. While you have been called together solely for the purpose of considering the tax code, yet in view of the extraordinary expenses attending this suit, and the great array of legal talent in opposition, I would s[illegible] that a sufficient sum of money be placed [illegible] disposal of the legal department to empl[illegible] nected therewith.

Before closing I desire to congratulat[illegible] upon the splendid record made during th[illegible] session. You received, and justly merite[illegible] approval of the people of your state. [illegible] acts were uniformly in the interest of th[illegible] monwealth you so loyally represent. I [illegible] not that your deliberations and acts during this session will be equally meritorious, and that you will again receive the approval of a grateful public.

DETECTING BAD MONEY,

Bank Clerks Identify It, Often Without Comprehending Just Why.

It seems wonderful to the casual observer that cashiers, bank tellers and others who handle large amounts of paper money are able, at a glance, to detect a bad note. Exactly what it is that does expose the counterfeit the best experts find it difficult to tell. They say they know it instinctively. They judge not only by the looks of the note, but by the "feel" of it. It is obvious that a counterfeit note must be widely circulated to make it profitable. No sooner does a counterfeit appear than its description is widely published. Those who are likely to suffer by taking counterfeit notes make it their business to be on the lookout for new ones, which are soon distinguishable by some easily discovered mark.

A teller knows of just what denomination are the counterfeits, and just where to look for the telltale marks. He detects the spurious notes as easily as the reader does a misspelled word. It is no particular effort. It is a habit. The principal reason why counterfeits are so easily detected is because in some feature they are almost uniformly of inferior quality. This is, indeed, the main protection of the public. Genuine notes are engraved and printed almost regardless of cost, and the very best materials are used in the engraving and printing. It is done in large establishments, with costly materials, and by the best workmen. It is practically impossible for counterfeiters to do as well. They must work in secret and at a disadvantage, and of necessity cannot have the experience to produce such perfect work. If they get the engravings done nicely they fail in the printing, or if they get the engraving and printing done well they fail in securing the proper paper. Of late years there has been a great deal of care taken to get paper manufactured expressly for the notes issued by the government. The national bank notes are also issued by the government, so that the sources of supply for exactly that kind of paper are controlled.—Kansas City Star.

Rivals Scotch Granite.

Donegal now threatens the supremacy of Scotland in the matter of granite. Experts who have been paying extended visits of inspection in the neighborhood of Dungloe, in West Donegal, report immense formations of granite, which for variety of shade, durability and general beauty are said to rival the famous products of Aberdeen and Peterhead. The Dungloe granite, it is stated, embraces almost every variety of color and texture, the predominating shade being red and flesh-colored stones of medium and coarse grain. Of the familiar gray granite there is also a wonderful variety, comprising stones of all shades from the lightest to the darkest tones. Some of the finer grained rock has a light warm tone from the intermixed buff-colored felspar. A still more beautiful variety of stone which is found in Dungloe is the very dark micaceous granite, closely resembling the handsome "Labrador," with which many London buildings are pillared. When it is remembered that one firm alone in America imports £10,000 worth of polished granite yearly from Aberdeen, and that the demand for the highest class stone in all shades is ever on the increase, there should be thriving times for West Donegal in the near future.—London Express.

The Legislature

Proceedings of the Week in the .... State Law Mill ...

St. Paul, Feb. 5.—The Minnesota legislature convened in special session yesterday in obedience to the proclamation of the governor. This is the third time in the history of the [illegible] that the legislature has met in [illegible] session.

The house convened promptly at 11 o'clock and organized by electing the old officers.

To avoid all possibility of invalidating legislation, Speaker Dowling's name was included in the resolution naming the officers of the house, despite the opinion of Attorney General Douglas, that he was elected speaker for his full legislative term.

Gov. Van Sant's proclamation calling the special session was read. The rules of the last session were adopted.

Representatives Jacobson, Roberts and Dorsey were appointed to unite with a committee of the senate to notify the governor of the organization of the house. The committee reported that the governor would be ready to communicate his message at to the legislature at 10:[illegible] o'clock this morning, and a motion to meet in joint session at that time was carried.

The Senate.

When Lieut. Gov. L. A. Smith called the senate to order Senator F. B. Daugherty of Duluth was elected secretary pro tem., read the official call and called the roll, 56 of the 63 senators responding. All the old elective officers of the senate were then elected separately.

Senator Lord introduced a resolution, which was adopted, installing all the other employes who served the senate a year ago, except the committee clerks.

After considerable discussion a resolution by Senator Young was adopted calling for the appointment of a committee of five to report what committees are absolutely needed.

On motion of Senator J. D. Jones the rules of the last session were adopted. Senators Barker, Wilson and Schellbach were appointed, on motion of Mr. McCorthy, to notify the governor that the senate was fully organized. A resolution by Senator Barker was then adopted that the senate meet in joint session with the house to-day to listen to the message of Gov. Von Sont.

St. Paul, Feb. 6.—The gallery and hall of the house of representatives were crowded when the notification committee appointed to inform Gov. [illegible] senate [illegible] ready to [illegible] and [illegible] to the [illegible] received [illegible] Gov. [illegible] ed to [illegible] applauded.

The Senate.

The senate convened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, a half-hour before the joint session of the legislature in the house to listen to the governor's message.

A report framed by a joint committee of the senate and house was presented in both branches and favorably received, although action was postponed until to-day. The committee report embodied a recommendation that in each house a special committee of five on "reception of bills" be appointed by the chair. All bills exclusive of those relative to taxation, are to be first referred to this committee to be reported the following day after received. If they were approved they will go to their respective committees, the understanding being that all the committees of last year will be reappointed.

If the bills are not approved by the committee on reception of bills a two-thirds vote will be necessary before the bill can proceed to its regular committee. It is expected by this method to cut down attempts at general legislation. The senate and house formally adopted the joint rules which were in force last year.

The House.

Following the report of the joint committee in the house Representative W. P. Roberts presented an amendment to the effect that the new tax code be made a special order before the house not later than next Monday; that all hearings on the bill before the tax committee be held in open and joint session of the committee and the house. Action on this amendment was laid over. In presenting this amendment Mr. Roberts insinuated that the enemies of the bill were desirous of fighting under cover.

W. W. Rich, Ramsey, and W. B. Anderson, Winona, indignantly denied the accusation and came out bluntly as opposed to the bill, and announced their intention of fighting it in the open.

Mr. Jacobson ridiculed the opponents of the tax bill as men who had first suggested the idea of tax revision. The house was on hand to pass the tax bill, and for one, he should oppose all other legislation.

Further discussion brought about a compromise offered by Mr. Jacobson and Mr. Roberts' resolution was withdrawn and an amendment agreed to making the bill a special order as soon as it comes from the committee.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Feb. 7.—A determined effort was made in the senate yesterday morning to have the session thrown open to admission of general legislation of every description. The trouble started over the acceptance of the report of the special committee on rules. Senator J. D. Jones, chairman of the committee, desired to have the report of the committee, as presented on the previous day, at once adopted. Senators Young and Snyder supported Senator Jones. Senators Daly, McNamee and Everett, Democrats, and McKusick, Republican, strenuously objected to having all general bills referred to a committee of five.

Senator McKusick's motion to reject the report of the committee was lost—29 to 27.

Senator J. D. Jones' motion to amend the report so that a bill unfavorably reported back to the committee on reception of bills can be taken up by the senate on a majority vote instead of two-thirds, was adopted.

Senator Knatvold's bill appropriating $40,000 for expenses of the extra session of the legislature passed under suspension of the rules.

In the House.

The new tax code was introduced in the house yesterday morning and was referred to the committee on tax laws and appropriations jointly.

The house then adjourned and the two committees met in the hall of the house with most of the members present to hear the Duluth Delegation.

St. Paul, Feb. 8.—Nine bills were introduced and three passed in the house yesterday morning, the most important measure being the senate bill appropriating $40,000 for the expenses of the extra session. The other bills passed fix the court terms in Jackson county and amend a technical error in a 1901 bridge bill.

The other new bills referred to the committee on reception include one by Representative Nyquist for the repeal of the 1901 dog tax law. Mr. Burns of Spring Valley wants to give local boards the right to waive poll taxes. Mr. Von Wald offered an amendment to the election law fixing the voting hours in the rural districts, and Mr. Alford of Duluth wants the primary law amended to except the Duluth school board from its operations.

In the Senate.

The tax code and the bill for constitutional amendments proposed by the tax commission were presented in the senate by Senator Somerville, acting chairman of the tax committee.

Senator Mellike presented a bill providing for sessions of the district court in Jackson county on the third Mondays in May and November. The bill was referred.

The membership of the committee on reception of bills was increased from five to nine.

Harold Knudson, of Sherburne county, was appointed postoffice messenger at $3 per day.

Senator Miller secured the passage of a resolution memorializing congress to expedite the payment of a balance of $495,000 due the state on the sale of federal lands in Minnesota. The state is entitled to 5 per cent of the money received from the sale of government lands within our borders.

St. Paul, Feb. 10.—Legislation proposing a constitutional convention to revise the state constitution has appeared in the house for the third time in consecutive sessions. It was introduced Saturday by Representative Sherman Smith, of Minneapolis.

The motion to pass the bill on its first reading failed, and the bill took its regular course and was referred to the judiciary committee.

The house extended to the members of the state tax commission an invitation [illegible] tax code on which the legislature desires more information. But the resolution was passed only after a lively debate.

The senate memorial, petitioning congress to provide for the payment of $495,000 due Minnesota under the 5 per cent land sales compact of the enabling act under which the state was organized, was taken up in the house Saturday and adopted under suspension of the rules by a vote of 78 to 0.

ON MURDER HE IS BENT.

Sheriff Attempts to Arrest Him After He Has Tried to Kill His Former Wife.

Waterloo, Wis., Feb. 10.—After shooting and instantly killing Deputy Sheriff William Cooper here at 10 o'clock Saturday night, Frank W. Stephenson succeeded, after his revolver had been taken away from him by two bystanders, he procured another from his pocket, thrust it into their faces and compelled them to retreat while he made good his escape. Stephenson started out on a murderous pilgrimage. He first visited the home of his divorced wife and fired a shot at her; also Joseph Bolachka, in whose family she had lived for two years. The shot at his wife failed to take effect, but a bullet lodged in Balaschka's jaw. Cooper was murdered while attempting to capture Stephenson.

BIG DEALS IN IRON LANDS.

Purchases of Leases Recorded at Duluth Break High Mark for Such Transactions.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 10.—The Youngstown, Ohio, Steel Sheet and Tube company has bought three leases of Mesaba range iron property. The Eastern Minnesota (Great Northern) has bought two, and P. L. Kimberly of Shoron, Pa., bought one. Saturday's record set a new mark for iron lease clearances in Duluth. The Kimberly lease brought $250,000 and the aggregate of the others was $500,000. The two Eastern Minnesota leases brought $225,000. The Kimberly lease was owned by Duluth men.

WEST IS NOT GUILTY.

Acquitted at Grand Forks of the Murder of Frank March.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 10.—At midnight Saturday the jury declared W. E. West not guilty of the murder of Frank March, and a few minutes later he walked out of the court house a free man. At 11:45 the jury called the bailiff and announced that a verdict had been reached, and asked that the judge and attorneys be sent for. In spite of the admonition of the court there was some handclapping when the verdict was announced, but these were checked and the court formally thanked the jury and discharged them and the prisoner. The scene that followed was affecting, though it lasted but a few minutes. Mr. West was first embraced by his sister and brother-in-law, the latter with tears streaming down his cheeks. Mr. Corliss shook hands with the jurors, as did West, and the crowd filed out.

SWEPT BY FLAMES

FIRE AT PATERSON, N. J., LEAVES DESOLATE WAKE OF ASHES AND EMBERS.

PROPERTY LOSS ABOUT $10,000,000

MAJORITY OF THE CITY'S FINEST BUILDINGS ARE LAID IN RUINS.

FIREMEN STRUGGLE FOR HOURS

HUNDREDS ARE LEFT HOMELESS AND THOUSANDS OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 10.—A great fire swept through Paterson yesterday, and in its desolate wake are the embers and ashes of property valued in preliminary estimate at $10,000,000. It burned its way through the business section of the city and claimed as its own a majority of the finer structures devoted to commercial, civic, educational and religious use, as well as scores of houses. There was but small tribute of life and injury to the conflagration, but hundreds were left homeless and thousands without employment. A relief movement for the care of those unsheltered and unprovided for has already been organized, and Mayor John Hinchcliffe said last night that Paterson would be able to care for her own without appealing to the charity of other communities and states. The great manufacturing plants of the place are safe, and the community,

Temporarily Dazed

by the calamity, has already commenced the work of reorganization and restoration. The fire came at midnight Saturday and was only checked after a desperate fight that lasted until late yesterday afternoon. Every city and town within reach of Paterson sent firemen and apparatus to the relief of the threatened city, and it took the united efforts of them all to win the battle. A northerly gale gave the conflagration its impetus and carried its burning brands to kindle the blaze afresh at other points. The firemen made stand after stand before the wall of fire, but were repeatedly driven back, and when victory finally came to them they were grimed and exhausted. An estimate made from a general inspection of the

Smouldering Ruins

placed the number of dwellings and apartment houses destroyed at 500 and the number of families left without shelter at 1,000. The fire began its work of far-reaching destruction at the powerhouse of the Jersey City, Hoboken & Paterson Traction company. It commenced in the car shed and was burning fiercely when one of the employes detected it. The firemen tried to hem it in but it speedily crossed Van Houten street in one direction, Main street in another, and, gaining vigor as it went, burned unchecked down into the business district. Every piece of fire mechanism in the city was called out, but fire and gale were masters. A great torch of

Flame Rose High

in the air, lighting up the country for many miles and carrying a threat and warning to the people and property in its path. Main street was soon arched over with a canopy of fire for a block, and then for two blocks, as the flames fastened themselves upon building after building. The firemen fought with every resource of their craft and the impulse of desperation, but the flames found new avenues in Ellison and Market streets and got beyond all control. Calls for relief went out to every city in this portion of the state and the jaded firemen labored on through the hopeless hours of the morning. The city hall, a magnificent structure, surmounted by a great clock tower, situated on Washington, Ellison and Market streets, finally caught, and with it went all of the Splendid Business Structures

that surrounded it. They made a great furnace of fire that burned with a fierce roar. There was a series of explosions and scores of walls fell when the fire left them strengthless. Flying firebrands carried the conflagration over some buildings and around others, and it therefore burned in an irregular course. These brands finally cleared the tracks of the Erie railroad and Ramapo avenue, and alighting on Straight street, started another great area of fire in which the destruction and desolation wrought was nearly as great as in the other. Paterson rests in a valley and the conflagration was an imposing spectacle from the rim of the hills that wall it in. Columns of flame climbed high in the air and shed their light for miles. Hundreds of persons

Hurried Into the City

before daylight to watch the work of destruction at close range, and when the day came thousands more joined them. Once in the city they crowded around the firemen and at times hampered them in their work. With the crowd came thieves and looters, but there was not much pillaging. Under orders from Gov. Franklin Murphy, who hurried here from Jersey City, Companies A, C, K and M, of the Fifth National Guard assembled at their armories and were held as a reserve force. The police, deputy sheriffs, hundreds of special watchmen and firemen united in protecting property during the day, and when night came a grim order clearing the streets was issued by the city and county authorities.

Loss of Life Is Feared.

Scores of persons were hurt and burned, but the loss of life is not thought to be great. There are many persons supposed to be missing, but in the excitement and fright most of these are supposed to be separated from their families and friends. Until order is brought out of the chaos which has existed here nothing definite can be known. Reuben Isith, while serving coffee to the exhausted firemen, was hit on the head by a falling beam and it is doubtful if he will recover.

BEFORE HE TOOK VOGELER'S

He Could Not Touch His Wife's Dinners, and They Were "Fit for a King."

So writes our esteemed friend Mr. Frank Chambers of 9 Bennett street, Chiswick: "For over two years I suffered agonies from indigestion and became reduced to a mere shadow of my stalwart self. I would return home from my business feeling so faint that I could hardly drag one leg after the other. My dear wife did all she possibly could to tempt me with dainty dishes, and as I entered the house I sniffed and thought: 'Oh, how good; I know I can eat that!' But alas! no sooner had I eaten a few mouthfuls, when I felt sick; severe pains shot through my chest and shoulder blades, my eyes swam and everything seemed black, I became alternately hot and cold, and got up from such a dainty dinner heartily sick of living, and feeling I was a sore trial to everybody. I may mention that I was also very much troubled with scaly skin, and often boils. But one evening I noticed my wife seemed more cheerful than usual. I questioned her and found she had been reading a pamphlet she had received of men afflicted just as I was, and who had been cured by Vogeler's Compound. Said she, 'What gives me more faith in it is that it is made from the formula of an eminent physician now in active practice in the West End of London, so I am sure it is no quack thing.' 'All right, dear, let's have a bottle,' said I. After taking the contents of the first bottle, I felt very much better, and determined to give this remedy a fair trial, and I can positively assure you that a few bottles made a new man of me. I can sleep well, eat anything, and thoroughly enjoy life. I have told several of my friends whom I knew were suffering the same as myself, and they all wish me to say that they are like new men. I sincerely bless the great physician who gave you the formula of Vogeler's Curative Compound, and also yourselves for making its virtues known to a suffering public."

"Sunday Opening" Up to Date.

It was the young daughter of an East Side saloonkeeper, innocent of any theories about "Sunday opening" but perfectly familiar with the practice. She was in her class in the mission Sunday school, and in course of the catechism "quiz," the question came to her:

"Who made the world?"

"God did," was the prompt answer. "He made the world in six days, and [illegible] in the seventh." [illegible]

No Judge of Art.

The seller of pot-boilers came into the office of the shrewd broker with the air of one who is about to sacrifice a priceless treasure. It was a seascape; a troubled sea beat upon purple rocks and wind-driven gulls wheeled in wild circles above the familiar pot-boiler ship. The seller of pot-boilers looked upon the treasure long and yearningly. It could be seen that a grievous struggle between art and appetite was raging within him.

"How much do you want for it?" demanded the shrewd broker.

"One hundred dollars," said the pot-boiler man. "It's giving it away."

"Give you three for it," said the broker.

"It's yours," said the pot-boiler man. "That fellow across the way only offered me 5 cents; but he ain't no judge of art."—New York Evening Post.

A Strong Statement.

Star, Wis., Feb. 10th.—Mr. Samuel S. Hook, one of the most highly respected residents of this neighborhood, has given a very hearty recommendation to Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy recently introduced here. He says:

"I have been a sufferer from Kidney Disease for some time, and found nothing to help me until I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They gave me almost immediate relief, and I am now well. I have recommended them to many friends, and in every case with splendid results.

"They are the very best pills for all kinds of ailments, but especially for Kidney Complaints."

This is a very strong statement, and, coming from a gentleman of Mr. Hook's standing and reputation, it has had a tremendous influence in Vernon county.

No Excuse This Time.

"It was a new gun, your honor," protested the prisoner, "and I did not know it was loaded."

"But," argued the judge, "the dealer has just told us that you did not pay for the weapon."

"What has that to do with it?"

"Well, if you didn't pay for it, the dealer must have charged it for you."

"For Ways That Are Dark," Etc.

"Some years ago," says the advertising agent of a tobacco firm quoted by the Philadelphia Record, "I wished to introduce among the Chinese a two for five cigar that my people were heavily interested in, and I decided to draw up a little card extolling this cigar in Chinese characters.

"I sought out Lo Hen Wang in San Francisco, a very intelligent fellow, and got him to write me a few sentences in praise of my article. I had what he wrote lithographed and distributed the cards by thousands in all the Chinatowns of the United States. They were inscribed with a picture of the cigar, and below were the words: 'Smoke this cigar. It is the best on the market, and two for five is its price.'

"That, at least, is what I thought was the meaning of the Chinese characters. I found out, some six months later, my mistake. The words Lo Hen Wang had written and which I had had lithographed were: 'Don't smoke this cigar. It is not good. But the Gong company's cigarettes, for sale in every Chinatown at 3 cents a package, are excellent.'

"Lo Hen Wong had got $10 from me for his work, and I don't know how much he got from the Gong company. We distributed many thousands of the cards before we got on to the trick that had been played on us."

Old Names in London.

If London street names are not always what they seem, the names of the great parishes usually are. Take Lambeth, for instance. That vast district has retained its name practically unaltered since the days of Edward the Confessor, who granted a charter in which it is styled Lambehith. Some illiterate scribe, who helped in the making of "Domesday," did, indeed, make an effort to obliterate its real name by calling it Loochel, but his efforts were, fortunately, in vain. William Rufus in another charter named it Lombeth, since when it has kept its title unsullied.

In the old days Lambehith (from hithe, a haven) was the great river port whence agricultural produce was ferried across the Thames to the more populous country opposite. There are still many "hithes" left us, such as Queenhithe and Rotherhithe, and, although their original functions have gone, there still remains a shadow to remind us of their departed glory.—London Chronicle.

How to Make Chop Suey.

For those who like or who think they would like the famous Chinese dish, chop suey, the following recipe, which any intelligent housewife can follow, was given by W. E. S. Fales, for several years vice consul at Amoy:

"For four persons two chickens' livers, two chickens' gizzards, one pound young, clean pork cut into small pieces, half an ounce of green root ginger and two stalks of celery. Saute this in a frying pan over a hot fire, adding four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one tablespoonful of vinegar, half a cupful of boiling water, one teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce, half a teaspoonful of salt, black and red pepper to taste and a dash of cloves and cinnamon. When nearly done add a small can of mushrooms, half a cupful of either bean sprouts or French green peas or string beans chopped fine or asparagus tips. The see-yu sauce which is eaten with this delectable dish can be procured at any Chinese grocery."

Left and Right Limbs.

Physiologists and scientists in general have been making some curious experiments with a view to determine the relative length and strength of "right and left limbs." Fifty and nine-tenths per cent of the men examined had the right arm stronger than the left, 16.4 per cent had the two arms of equal length and strength, and 32.7 per cent had the left arm stronger than the right. Of women, 46.9 per cent had the right arm stronger than the left, and 24.5 per cent had the left stronger than the right.—London Family Doctor.

The Moon Kept on Shining.

A certain well known judge was once violently attacked by a young and very impudent counsel. To the surprise of everybody, the judge heard him quite through, unconscious of what was said by those present, and made no reply.

After the adjournment for the day and when all were assembled at the hotel where the judge and many of the court folk had their refreshments, one of the company asked the judge why he did not rebuke the impertinent fellow.

"Permit me," said the judge loud enough to attract the attention of the whole company, among whom was the barrister in question—"permit me to tell you a little story. My father, when we lived in the country, had a dog, a mere puppy, I may say. Well, this puppy would go out every moonlight night and bark at the moon for hours together."

The judge paused, as if he had finished.

"Well, what of it?" exclaimed half a dozen of the audience at once.

"Oh, nothing—nothing, but the moon kept shining on, just as if nothing had happened."

One of Our Vices?

It is peculiarly necessary that we in America should understand the danger of morbid self consciousness, for it is one of our two most distinctive national vices, being equaled only by our irreverence. It is an evident that more books are written about America than concerning any other land, nor does it mean that we are more interesting, except to ourselves, than the rest of the world. It does mean that we are so self conscious, so oversensitive to praise and blame—above all, so anxious to know what our neighbors are saying about us—that any traveler, however inane and incapable, who spends a few weeks upon our soil may return home and write his book about us, and we buy it by the hundred thousand. We are doing great things, thanks to our opportunities and our forefathers, but how much greater might we do could we use in quiet, simple action the time and energy we spend in pluming ourselves upon our achievements.—Edward Howard Griggs in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Side De Morny Cared For.

The Duc de Morny, half brother to Louis Napoleon, was embassador extraordinary to the emperor of Russia during the coronation festivities and wrote home that the French might learn something from the Russians, if it were only how to light 10,000 candles in five minutes. De Morny was in Paris the night before the coup d'etat and spent the evening at the opera. Between the acts he went into one of the boxes to speak to a lady of his acquaintance.

"What shall you do, M. de Morny," asked a lady, "if the national assembly is swept out of doors as threatened?"

"Madame," he replied, "I shall try to be on the side of the broom handle."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Army Shoes and Corns.

"If a law could be passed," said a chiropodist, "prohibiting the wearing of any shoe in this country except the pattern army shoe worn during our civil war, the corn doctor's occupation would be gone. That war was for the time the greatest corn eradicator ever known. I never knew a single case of a soldier in that war who suffered from corns a month after he began wearing his regulation army shoe, and I was four years a soldier in it myself. That shoe seemed to be made just right for comfort."

Quite a Difference.

The department store is useful and convenient, but the multifarious nature of its activities sometimes leads to a dilemma.

"Where shall I find something nice in oil for the dining room?" asked a stout, smiling woman of the floorwalker in a western department store.

"On the third"— began the floorwalker. Then he paused and looked doubtfully at the inquirer. "Did you mean a painting or something in the sardine line?" he asked.

How to Make Glue.

To produce liquid glue which will keep for years break pieces of glue and place in a bottle with some whisky. Cork tightly and set aside for a few days. This should be ready for use without the application of heat except in very cold weather, when the bottle should be placed in hot water for a few minutes before using the glue.

A Month Without a Full Moon.

The month of February, 1866, was the most remarkable month in the world's history. January had two full moons, and so had March, but February had none. This had not occurred since the creation of the world, and, according to some astronomers, the same thing may not occur again for a period of 2,500,000,000 years.

The Morals of Animals.

It may be questioned whether animals have any conception of morals as we understand the term, but in a general sense it would certainly seem that they have. In the social sense there is no doubt as to the answer. To take a well known instance, the ant family have evolved a most complicated social system which apparently works to perfection, and that is more than can be said for any human system. In order, cleanliness, care of offspring, provision for future wants and military discipline no civilized society can compare with theirs. They are slaveholders, it is true, but they treat their slaves with every kindness and consideration, and the warrior ants defend them in time of danger.

Another excellent example is furnished by the beaver. During summer it leads a solitary life, but at the approach of winter communities are formed; building operations commence, stores are laid up as soon as the dwellings are completed, and every individual of the community recognizes clearly that the interests of the family and the colony come first. In their family life they, in common with many other animals, offer an example which might well be copied not only by savages, but also by civilized communities.

Beecher's Open Hand.

An old member of Plymouth church who knew Henry Ward Beecher and his family tells a story about the great preacher. "No one ever knew what he did with the vast sums of money he earned as a lecturer," he said. "He used to give money away with both hands, and he was as likely to give a street beggar a twenty dollar bill as a dollar; but his salary from Plymouth church went direct to Mrs. Beecher intact. He never drew any money from the church until the end of the year. Then he received a check for $20,000, his full year's salary, and handed it to his wife. When he died, he did not leave much of an estate, although he had earned millions of dollars in his life, but Mrs. Beecher had always received her $20,000 a year, and she lived in comfort and even luxury in Brooklyn till she died. He was a great man was Henry Ward Beecher."

An Oddity of Lost Caste.

It is not necessary to go to India to hear curious stories of caste. In a professional man's household recently a maidservant fell ill of diphtheria. Her mistress nursed her herself through a tedious illness until she was quite well. When that happy result was established, the maid immediately informed the mistress that she intended to leave her service. The reason of the maid's departure was this—"I could not live with a mistress who has been waiting on me herself." Quite evidently this is not mere indifference to kindness or ingratitude. The girl was the slave of that mysterious influence of caste which splits up into minute sections every modern society, as it split up every ancient society, and seems likely to split up any future society that it is possible to imagine.—London Saturday Review.

Lemon Extract.

A lemon extract that one is sure is pure can be easily made at home. Grate off enough of the outside peel of lemons to fill a small bottle, taking care that none of the white part of the rind gets in, as this will give a bitter taste. When the bottle is full, cover with pure alcohol and set away for three weeks. At the end of that time the contents of the bottle should be strained, and the extract is ready for use. An even teaspoonful of this preparation will flavor a quart of custard or other similar dish.—New York Post.

Their Bible.

A story is told in which the late Lord Iddesleigh figured when as Mr. Stafford Northcote he was appointed a magistrate for Devon. At the castle of Exeter, where he attended to be sworn, he was handed a book tied round with what had once been red tape. Not liking the appearance of it, Mr. Northcote took out his knife and cut the tape and on opening the book discovered that it was a ready reckoner, on which magistrates had been sworn for about thirty years.

Precious Hair.

When the crusaders returned from the Holy Land in 1099, they were loaded with relics of holy personages who had previously been unknown in the west. Bohemond, one of their leaders, divided between Anselm and certain churches a dozen hairs which the patriarch of Antioch had given him with the assurance that the Blessed Virgin plucked them from her head as she stood—Mater Dolorosa—by the cross.—All the Year Round.

The Stormy Petrel.

A bird of immense wing power is the tiny stormy petrel, the smallest webfooted bird known. It belongs to every sea, and, although so seeming frail, it breasts the utmost fury of the storm, skimming with incredible velocity the trough of the waves and gliding rapidly over their snowy crests. Petrels have been observed 2,000 miles from nearest land.

A Paradox.

"I would rather be right than be president," said the statesman.

"Well," said the friend, "it's a little paradoxical, but I suppose it's proper. You say in substance that for the sake of being right you are willing to be left."—Washington Star.

Strong.

Wife—Are you sure you caught this fish?

Mr. Gayfello—Of course.

Wife—It smells very strong.

Mr. Gayfello—Strong? I should say it was. It nearly pulled me overboard.—New York Weekly.

Want a New Village Hall

On last Thursday evening a mass meeting of citizens was held in the village hall to discuss ways and means of accomplishing some necessary improvements in the way of fire protection and the housing of the fire apparatus.

The meeting was quite largely attended and a good deal of interest was shown in the discussion.

The advisability of constructing a new system of waterworks, sewerage and putting in electric lights was discussed at length, and warmly advocated by some. Others favored the building of a new village hall and the purchase of a good fire engine. It was stated that the village could not at present be bonded for enough to construct the water and sewerage system, but it was estimated that a nice, new village hall, built of brick, could be afforded, and also the fire engine. In accordence with this idea it was decided that a resolution be presented to the council asking that a proposition to bond the village for about $6,000, to build the new hall and purchase the engine, be placed before the people of St. Hilaire and voted upon at the next annual election.

The people of this village are, in the main, decidedly progressive, but is well to progress only according to the available means. Should a proposition to bond the village for this purpose come before the voters, it is proper that all should first be thoroughly informed as to the actual benefits to be derived, and also how much it will cost them to secure those benefits.

That High School Debate.

On last Friday a special train carried about 160 Red Lake Falls people including their band to Moorhead. The crowd went for the purpose of escorting their high school orators and listening to a debate between them and the Fergus Falls high school team. The question to be debated was: "Resolved, that capital punishment should be abolished in the United States." Both of the teams put up a magnificent fight, but the judges awarded the decision to Fergus Falls.

When returning home the special train with its crowd of passengers met with an accident at Ives Station which shook the crowd up pretty badly but hurt nobody. The rear coach jumped the track and ran on the ties for a considerable distance before the train was stopped. It took some time to get the coach back on the track and it was after 5 o'clock in the morning when the crowd got home.

Wanted—One or two good ox teams about five years old. Any person who has such teams for sale should call on, or write to C. Koser, Bray post-office, Red Lake county, Minn.

Death of Soren Hall

Soren Hall, better known in St. Hilaire as "Grandpa" Hall, died last Thursday night at the home of his son Andrew after a brief illness. The funeral occured on Sunday afternoon from the M. E. church and was largely attended. He was a native of Denmark and was 83 years of age. He has been a resident of St. Hilaire for over three years, and came here from Underwood, Minn. He leaves a family of four children—two daughters and two sons, both sons residing in this village.

All articles up to the value of 35 cents will be sold for seven cents at Peterson & Lang's bargain counter.

The Basket Social given by the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church was a decided success. The Ladies made a clear profit of $37.50 for which they wish to thank all the friends who so liberally contributed to the success of the social.

Dr. N. M. Watson, the Red Lake Falls physician, exchanged greetings with friends here on Monday. He was on his way home from Montreal where he spent about three weeks in attendance upon his mother who died there a few days ago.

Messrs D. Petterson, W. A. Sorsoleil and Oscar Brink took advantage of the special train from Red Lake Falls on Friday and went with the crowd to Moorhead to hear the debate between the orators of the Red Lake Falls and Fergus Falls high schools.

Al Lehmen, who filled the position of mechinist in the mill here last spring and summer, returned on Thursday last from Minneapolis and on Monday commenced work at his old job. Al has lots of friends in town who are glad to welcome him back.

J. H. Paradis arrived here Monday en route home to Red Lake Falls after an extended trip in eastern Canada with his brother, P. G. Paradis, of this village. Pete stopped at Mt. Clemens, Mich., where he will spend some time in taking a course of flesh-reducing baths.

Another Letter About Cuba.

COCOA, FLA., FEB. 6, 1902.

I believe I promised another letter about Cuba and Havana, but I find it hard work to do anything in this climate. They say a man from the north quickly acquires the indolent habits of the native and I am inclined to that belief—not so much on my own account, but I have an example in Bjerk.

Havana, to an American is a very interesting city. It is not like any American city. The people are different, the language and customs different, and they build their buildings in an altogether different manner. They tell me that a few Americans have heating stoves in their houses but we did not see them. Most of the houses do not even have chimneys. For cooking they use a small charcoal affair and if it gets too cold they go to bed and cover up. Glass would not sell well here as very little of it is used. The shops and stores do not have display windows. They have wooden shutters to open on the inside and fold, and iron bars for the outside, and when a store is open for business it is almost a continuation of the street. Arcade buildings are frequent and in many places canvas is stretched clear across the street to keep off the tropical sun. Every building from stores to dwellings are elaborately protected with iron bars, in fact a dwelling looks like a jail. The best dwellings have high stone walls and broken glass on top. Nearly all the buildings are built of stone and then whitewashed. The favorite colors are blue, yellow and red, making a color effect not unlike the Pan-American Exposition. If you do not understand the language you will be robbed every time you buy anything. The Cubans think the American tourist a good thing and they go after us hard. You can buy a big cigar for two cents and ride in a cab for twenty cents, Spanish. This tells the story about things that are cheap. Speaking about cigars—you can buy them here as high as eighty cents each.

Morro Castle, the celebrated fort was visited, but I did not find much of a fort. All of the guns are old ones. It is a rugged promontory of rock on the entrance to the harbor and could be made a very strong fort. Back of Morro along the harbor is Cabanas fortress and military prison. The Spaniards have been working here for about three hundred years and millions have been spent. It would take a day to go through every part of this place. I saw one gun that was dated 1736 and others nearly as old. They are more ornamental than useful. There are two or three other fortresses around the town besides our country has established Columbia Barracks just outside of town where several thousand U. S. soldiers are now quartered. We were about twenty miles out in the country one day and had a fairly good look at a Cuban plantation. We visited a Cuban home and it was a poor affair. The house was worth about $10.00, had no windows or floor and a dirt roof. A family of seven lived in the place the year around. Any of our cattle sheds are much better. The man worked about 35 acres for the owner of the plantation. We met the landlord who looked very prosperous, but the tenant and all his family did not look to have property worth $10.00. On this place they raised sugar cane, tobacco, lemons, oranges, pine-apples, mangoes and sweet potatoes. Here seems to be the key note of the trouble in Cuba. The Spaniard owns the land in the country and the buildings in town. The Cuban who has been fighting for liberty for so long has hazy ideas of liberty, but is fairly well convinced that full and complete liberty must mean that he is to get the Spaniard's lands and houses. What's the use of fighting unless there is something in it. Now the Spaniards who have no reason to love the Americans, wish for American rule or annexation for they fear that the Cuban will confiscate their property. The Cuban wishes his liberty and a clear field. They now hate the Americans nearly as bad as they did the Spaniards. If we get out of Cuba without trouble it will be little short of a miracle. All of the Americans in Havana in business desire annexation of course. The impression seems general that it is the policy of this administration to annex Cuba and it is more or less openly stated that from General Wood down, the American officials here are working to that end. Personally, I am of the opinion that annexation is the only thing to do. If the Cubans are left to themselves the Negroes will control affairs, as they are in the majority and then neither life nor property would be safe.

We leave Havana with regret and take the steamer "Miami" for Miami and will work up the east coast of Florida, the most celebrated winter resort in America.

The Western Land Hunger.

A prime reason for the unprecedented demand for Western lands is to be found in the greatly increased price of farm products within the past two years. There is a conviction that the market for corn must continue good for several years owing to the demand for it in the fattening of cattle and the steadily growing favor with which it is meeting in Europe. The demand for "Golden Grain Belt" beer too is steadily increasing for men have learned that it makes them strong and healthy and capable of better work weather it be mental or physical. Artist and Plowman.

Artists have many amusing and some unpleasant experiences when trespassing in pursuit of subjects for their art. When Mr. Boughton once saw a man plowing in a field, he climbed the dividing wall and began to sketch him. This was too much for the involuntary model, who strode up to the artist and said, "Do you know what I could do with you?" "I haven't the slightest idea," Mr. Boughton answered, with a smile.

"Well," the burly plowman said, "I could chuck you into the road." "You'd better not do that," Mr. Boughton retorted. "Why not go back to your plow, and I'll whistle for you in half an hour?"

To Mr. Boughton's surprise the man obeyed and half an hour later was duly summoned to inspect the finished picture. "How much will they give you for that?" he asked after critically surveying the sketch. "Oh, about £10!" the artist answered. "Well, I'm hanged!" the astonished plowman said, scratching his head in perplexity. "I have to plow two months before I can earn as much as that."—Tit-Bits.

Strange Facts About Animals.

Have you ever noticed that all animals which chew the cud are cloven footed? Also that most of those which drink water by suction are herbivorous, the carnivorous variety lapping it with the tongue, like the cat, dog, tiger, etc. Sheep have no teeth in the upper jaw, and tortoises and turtles are without altogether.

Unlike most animals, horses have no eyebrows, and hares are minus eyelids. Consequently the eyes of the latter cannot be shut, and a thin membranous substance covers them when asleep. The eye of the owl is also very peculiar, seeing that it is immovably fixed in its socket and cannot stir in any direction. To compensate for this seeming disadvantage it can turn its head almost completely round without moving its body. If you were to keep a frog's mouth open many minutes, it would soon die, as owing to its peculiar construction it can only breathe with the mouth closed.

On the other hand, fishes are compelled to keep opening and closing their mouths in order to give their respiratory organs full play. It is also a strange fact that the deer has additional breathing places besides the nostrils, as if nature had foreseen his great need of free respiration when forced to flee before the hounds. Snakes usually have their teeth in the head, but one variety in Africa, whose principal food is eggs, is provided with a substitute for them in its stomach.

—If you are looking for a good smoke why call for the "J. B."

Services will be held in the M. E. Church every Sunday as follows: Sunday School, 10 a. m.; Preaching, 11 a. m. Junior League, 3 p. m.; Epworth L'gue 6:30 p. m.; Preaching, 7:30 p. m.

Mrs. L. A. Harris, a Prominent Member of a Chicago Woman's Political Club, tells how Ovarian Troubles may be Cured without a Surgical Operation. She says:

"Doctors have a perfect craze for operations. The minute there is any trouble, nothing but an operation will do them; one hundred dollars and costs, and included in the costs are pain, and agony, and often death.

"I suffered for eight years with ovarian troubles; spent hundreds of dollars for relief, until two doctors agreed that an operation was my only chance of life. My sister had been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for her troubles, and been cured, and she strongly urged me to let the doctors go and try the Compound. I did so as a last resort; used it faithfully with the Sanative Wash for five months, and was rejoiced to find that my troubles were over and my health restored. If women would only try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first, fewer surgical operations would occur."—MRS. L. A. HARRIS. 278 East 31st St., Chicago, Ill.

After the drawing for land at El Reno last summer, two young men sent home such glowing accounts of their 160 acres that their fond parents decided to give them a little surprise in the shape of a visit. The boys had written that they already had a house upon their land and were living in it; so papa and mamma decided to stay with them during their sojourn.

When they drove from the station to the 160 acres said to be occupied by their offspring, they could find no trace of the aforementioned house, but they spied a joint of stove pipe sticking out from a side hill. Upon investigation, this proved to be the "house" mentioned in their letters. It was a dugout, and upon the door, which was locked, was printed a sign which read:

"Forty miles to wood,
Eighty miles to water,
God bless our little home."

Papa and mamma drove back to the station boss' shack and took the next train home.—Lippincott.

Must Have Whisky First.

It was in a Western hotel. A bellboy was sent to Col. William Green Sterett's room to ascertain what urgent need had impelled that gentleman to push the button. He entered and found the colonel deeply immersed in a friendly game with some chosen spirits.

"Did you ring, sah?" he deferentially inquired.

"Yes, said Col. Sterett, deftly hurling two unpromising pasteboards into the discard. "We want you to bring us some whisky. My friends here will take Scotch, and mine is rye."

"Yes, sah," said the boy, turning to go.

"And after you have brought us the whisky," continued Col. Sterett, arresting his flight, "turn in the fire alarm. Someone in the next room has set the place on fire."—New York Times.

THE KANSAS PEOPLE ARE IN LOVE WITH WESTERN CANADA.

They Say the Land There Is the Finest on Earth.

A great number of delegates have been influenced through the agency of Mr. J. S. Crawford, the Canadian government representative at Kansas City, to visit western Canada, and whether from Missouri or Kansas the story is always the same—they are pleased with the new country being opened up. Isaac H. Levagood writes from Didsbury, Alberta, as follows:

"I met three delegates from Kansas yesterday at Didsbury, and took them home with me and took them out in the afternoon and showed them some of the finest land that lays on top of God's green earth. They are more than pleased with this country. They stayed with me last night; this morning I took them to Didsbury, and they went on north. When they come back they are coming to my place and I am going to help them to run some lines and they are going to locate in sight of my house. There have been over 1,200 acres of land changed hands here in our neighborhood this spring. When I located here last fall I was the furthest back of any of the settlers; to-day I am in the center of the settlement. We have thirty-six children that are of school age in our district, and we will have our school district organized next month, when we will proceed to build our schoolhouse. The longer we stay here the better we like the country; that is the way with everybody here, they all seem to be satisfied and doing well. I have talked with a great many men here and they told me that they had less than $50 when they got here, and today they have got 160 acres of good land and five or six hundred dollars' worth of stock. Crops are looking fine here. I think this will be a good winter wheat country. One of my neighbors has a small piece and it looks fine."

A GHASTLY CRIME

SAN FRANCISCO STARTLED BY A MURDER SIMILAR TO DURRANT CASE.

NAKED BODY OF A WOMAN FOUND

POSTURE AND CONDITION INDICATED THAT SHE HAD BEEN MURDERED.

EITHER STRANGLED OR POISONED

POLICE ARE AFTER A MAN WHO HAD BEEN SEEN WITH THE YOUNG LADY.

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—A mysterious murder resembling in some of its features the noted Durrant case is now puzzling the police department of this city. The body of Nora Fuller, a sixteen-year-old girl who disappeared from her home Jan. 11, was found lying naked on a bed in the upstairs back room of an unfurnished house at 2211 Sutter street yesterday. The girl had been dead some time as decomposition had begun. There was nothing in the house to indicate the means used to take her life, but the posture of the body and its condition, together with the disorder of the room, indicate that the girl was murdered. An autopsy disclosed that death was not due to natural causes. All the organs of the body are in normal condition. The general theory is that the girl was either strangled or poisoned. On both sides of the neck are discolorations which may have been Made by Finger Tips.

The city chemist is examining the stomach for evidences of poison. Nora Fuller left home Jan. 11, and met a man known as John Bennett in response to an advertisement for a girl to take care of a baby. She met the man at a restaurant, and thereafter all knowledge of her was lost. On Jan. 8 the house in which the body of the girl was found, was rented by a man giving the name of C. B. Hawkins. The general descriptions of Bennett and Hawkins tally, and it is thought that the two names were aliases of the same man. Both Bennett and Hawkins are said to have been thirty-five or forty years old, about six feet in height and weighing about 175 pounds. Each wore a brownish red mustache. Bennett wore clerical clothes and claimed to have studied for the ministry. The police are working on the theory that they were the same men. A possible motive for the murder is found in the suggestion that the murderer either quarreled with the girl, or feared his relations with her were about to become public.

One floor of the building was leased to J. K. Parker & Co., manufacturers of waists. The loss of this firm is placed at $15,000.

CLOSE SQUEAK FOR DEWET.

Kitchener's Plans to Capture the Boer Leader Almost Succeeds.

London, Feb. 10.—From Wolvehoek, Lord Kitchener yesterday telegraphed a long description of a combined movement of numerous British columns with the object of securing Gen. Dewet. Lord Kitchener says the advance the night of Feb. 4, the whole force moving from various directions and forming a continuous line of mounted men on the west bank of the Liebenbergs velt from Frankfort as far south as Fanny's Home and thence to Kaffirkdf. The line then advanced to the west and the following night the British intrenched with their outposts fifty yards apart. They held the line from Holland to Doornkloof, while the columns were also working in advance of the blockhouse lines to prevent Dewet's crossing. The advance was continued Feb. 6, and Dewet was within the inclosure, but, recognizing his position, he ordered his men to disperse and seek safety during the night. Dewet himself, with some men and a number of cattle, made for the Kroonstedt-Lindley blockhouse line and at 1 o'clock in the morning, when it was very dark, by rushing his cattle at the fence, broke his way through the line mixed up with cattle and losing three men killed. Many attempts were made to break through the line on the night of Feb. 7, the line of outposts being attacked at various places throughout the night. But few escaped, and ten dead Boers were picked up in the morning near Heilbron.

SNOW STALLS TRAINS.

Hundreds of Soldiers and Passengers Are Stuck.

Oswego, N. Y., Feb. 10.—The Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg division of the New York Central is buried under tons of snow, and since Saturday six passenger trains have been stalled along the line. One between Pulaski and Fernwood has on board about 200 members of the Fifteenth United States infantry, bound from Madison barracks, at Sackett's Harbor, to the Philippines, to take the place of the Ninth regiment, which has been ordered home. The men are provided with rations and the cars are so arranged that hot coffee can be made by attaching a contrivance to the steam pipes which heat the cars. There is another passenger train in a drift fourteen feet deep in Mexico. The New York express, from Chicago to New York, that should have left here Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, is stalled in the snow near Red Creek, about twenty-five miles west of this city.

FUNSTON NEEDS REST.

Physician Requests for Extension of Furlough.

Kansas City, Feb. 10.—Gen. Frederick Funston's physician will forward a certificate to the war department stating his patient's condition and requesting that the general's leave of absence be extended three months.

"Gen. Funston cannot recover his normal strength under six months," said Dr. F. E. Robinson, who recently performed an operation upon the officer. "He should have comparative rest for some months yet. He should do duty in some capacity in this country, but in his present condition it might cause him serious injury to be returned to the Philippines."

Notwithstanding this statement, Dr. Robinson says Gen. Funston's condition has improved rapidly within the past few days.

Killed 1,600 Years Ago and Now Interred at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 10.—Clad in rich red robes, the skeletons of St. Magnus and St. Bonosa, two Catholic saints who were slain at the command of a Roman emperor near 1,600 years ago, were buried in St. Martin's church in this city yesterday afternoon. The bones were found in the catacombs of Rome in 1700. They were given to an order of Sisters in Northern Italy and were kept by them until last summer when the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Zabler, pastor of St. Martin's church, secured them. St. Magnus was a Roman Centurion and St. Bonosa a Roman virgin.

FUNERAL CORTEGE WRECKED.

Violence Pursues Victims of Explosion Even After Death.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—Violence pursued the Trestel family even after death, an electric car yesterday afternoon striking the funeral cortege of the nine kinsmen who perished in Wednesday's explosion in Twenty-second street. The collision occurred at Sixty-sixth street and Vincennes avenue, three persons being injured, and an indignant crowd of mourners assailed the conductor and motorman. Coroner Traeger saved the street car men from personal injury by ordering off their assailants and placing the two men under arrest.

GLAD TO SEE HIS FATHER.

Young Roosevelt Overjoyed and Much Improved.

Groton, Mass., Feb. 10. — President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon arrived at the Groton school. He did not find his son, Theodore, Jr., alarmingly ill with pneumonia, but the boy's condition was not sufficiently reassuring to warrant the president's immediate return to the national capital. Young Roosevelt greeted his father cheerily. Last night it was stated that his condition was unchanged and that he was holding his own well.

"Siamese Twins" Separated.

Paris, Feb. 10. — The Hindoo twins, Radica and Dordina, who were united in a manner similar to the Siamese twins, were separated yesterday afternoon by Dr. Doyen. GOVERNMENT VICTORY.

Agrarian Demand for Abolishing Grain Depots Is Turned Down.

Berlin, Feb. 7.—The tariff committee of the reichstag yesterday rejected by a vote of 16 to 12 the Agrarian demand for the abolition of the grain depots. This is a victory for the government and will probably have the result of impressing upon the Agrarians the importance of the recent official warnings against obstruction in the matter of a new tariff. It means that the depots will be retained in the large coast towns.

Her Weight in Silver Crowns.

A singular freak of parental liberality in the matter of dowry is reported at a wedding during the present week. The marriage took place at Koniggratz. On the betrothal of his daughter, Herr Duchntschek had announced that he would give her, as a marriage portion, her weight in silver currency. Accordingly, on the wedding day, the bride was formally weighed in the drawing room, in the presence of assembled guests, before proceeding to church. The lady turned the scales at sixty-two kilogrammes, a sack was at once filled with silver crowns of the same weight, with a half-kilogramme over—for the weight of the bag, as Herr Duchntschek playfully explained. The exact number of crowns was 13,500.—Frankfurter Zeitung.

New Light on an Old Subject.

The man who had been kicked by a mule, and was quoted as saying he "considered the source," was speaking of it afterward to some of the other fellows.

"I wouldn't care," he said, "if there hadn't been so much fuss made over it, as if it was a bright thing for anybody to say; but the honest truth is that I never said anything of the kind. When you're kicked by a mule you're not in a frame of mind for considering things. What I really said was 'You derned old beast, if I had a gun, and you were somebody else's mule, and it wasn't against the law to shoot inside the corporation, I'd blow your derned old head off, dern you!'"—Chicago Tribune.

What Is the Shape of the Earth?

The exact shape of the earth is a question which cannot be settled without fresh evidence from the Antarctic. For this purpose, two, at least, of the expeditions have been provided with pendulum outfits; by noting the exact length of time occupied by the swing of a pendulum the distance from the place of observation to the earth's center can be determined. It is held that the polar regions of the South project further from the plane of the equator than does the North polar region; according to one estimate, the South pole is slightly more than one-hundredth further from the earth's center than the North pole.—Popular Science Monthly.

> Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:
> Dear Sir:—"The young girl who used the Peruna was suffering from laryngitis, and loss of voice. The result of the treatment was most satisfactory. She found great relief, and after further use of the medicine we hope to be able to say she is entirely cured." SISTERS OF CHARITY.

From a Catholic institution in Ohio comes the following recommend from the Sister Superior:

"Some years ago a friend of our institution recommended to us Dr. Hartman's Peruna as an excellent remedy for the influenza of which we then had several cases which threatened to be of a serious character.

"We began to use it and experienced such wonderful results that since then Peruna has become our favorite medicine for influenza, catarrh, cold, cough and bronchitis."

SISTER SUPERIOR.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first to formulate Peruna. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country.
